NEW LIEUT.-GOVERNOR OPENS 20TH LEGISLATURE

Speech of 200 Words Refers to Collection Of Succession Duties

Special Session of House Called to Remove "All Obstacles"

PREMIER'S GREETINGS

Answer of Government to Challenge of Validity of Act

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—First session of Ontario's twentieth legislature, convened for the specific purpose of removing "all obstacles" to the collection of succession duties from estates closed by former governments, held out of the shortest throne speeches on record today.

Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews, acting in his new capacity for the first time, delivered the 200-word throne speech. It said collection of succession duties had been challenged in the courts and that bills would be submitted to make effective legislation passed in former years.

No Mention of Other Laws

There was no mention in the legislation of any other nature would be brought down at the special session, expected to last a week or two days.

Succession duties collections by the Hepburn government reached a record amounting to $12,000,000 in the fiscal year ending last March. In his last budget speech Premier Hepburn said collections would total about $18,000,000 this year.

Decision to call the special session was made when a Commissioner appointed under the Succession Duty Act was restrained by a court order from proceeding with an investigation respecting the $12,000,000 estate of Ottawa. The government sought to collect $4,500,000 from the estate.

NO COMMENTS POWER CONTRACT SAYS CHAIRMAN

Dr. Thomas Hogg Refrains From Comment as to New Agreement

RESERVE POWER

Government And Commission Reported Desirous of Expediting Power

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—Chairman Thomas Hogg of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, said today he did not think there would be any announcement this week on a revised contract with the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company for a power supply to the Commission.

Dr. Hogg refrained from comment on reports that basis for a new agreement has been reached but that the Dominion government has refused to permit export to the United States of Ontario's share. The reports said the pending agreement depended on ability to export surplus power.

No Statement At Present.

"I'm not prepared to say anything at the moment," said Dr. Hogg.

Export of additional Niagara power is desired by the Ontario government and its Hydro Commission, it was reported, because of the contract with the Gatineau Power Company which provides that before Ontario can contract for additional power purchase the full 12,000 horse power held in reserve by Gatineau for the Commission must be purchased.

BOATS RESTORED TO THEIR OWNERS

Japanese Officials Express Regret And Incident Closed

Shanghai, Dec. 1 (CP)—The United States gunboat Isabel launch Pelling and two Italian tugs were restored today to their owners by the Japanese military authorities.

Instituting follow-up protests by United States Consul General Clarence E. Gauss and by the Italian Consul Inspector over the seizure of the vessels by the Japanese, The incident was regarded as closed.

The Italian authorities explained that the boats were given to a "misunderstanding," Japanese officials expressed their regrets.

The Chinese government today reportedly protested to Italy over its recognition of the puppet state of Manchukuo.

Japan also reported here that the provision headquarters of the Foreign Office at Hankow wired instructions to the Japanese ambassador at Rome to make the protest.

(An article in the Popolo D'Italia, believed written by Premier Mussolini, urged China to take the only course left to it and sue for peace with Japan).

Japanese reported capture of Kiangyin forts, where Chinese had blockaded the Yangtze River approach to Nanking with a boom of sunken junks.

Duchess of Windsor Enters British 'Who's Who' Today

She And Duke Are Listed in Royal Section

HAILE YET EMPEROR

London, Dec. 1 (CP)—The Duchess of Windsor entered British Who's Who today with publication of the 1938 edition.

The Duke and Duchess were listed in the section reserved for the Royal Family, their names appearing thus:

The new Who's Who is 28 pages larger than the 1937 edition, having 3,783 pages.

The editors still list Haile Selassie as Emperor of Ethiopia and give him the same amount of space as Premier Mussolini of Italy. Each receives 23 lines of biography. Mussolini's biography is in Italian.

Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, occupied five and four lines, respectively.

WILL SOUND OUT CZECHOSLOVAKIA ON CONCESSIONS

Possible Concessions by Question May be Considered

PEACE IS OBJECT

Desire to Help Germany in Return For Peace Commitments

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—Great Britain and France, informed sources disclosed today, will sound out Czechoslovakia on the question of concessions to Germany on the problem of the German minority within its borders in the hope that discussion by Austria also will be examined.

This next step in the campaign for European security—part of a vast plan which Premier Neville Chamberlain has taken as a result of the just concluded French-British diplomatic talks.

London and Paris, showing willingness to help Germany, hoped in return they might draw concrete commitments from Berlin to join the British-Rome diplomatic axis.

Conduct Inquiry.

French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos, who arrived here today, held views at length in two days of talks which closed yesterday, will conduct plans of Ontario's Premier Hepburn's situation on a visit to France's central and eastern European allies starting later this week.

The nature of the concessions which might be expected of Czechoslovakia and Austria was not disclosed.

(There have been recurrent rumors of an imminent German protest in German-populated sections of Czechoslovakia to remind the more than 3,000,000 Germans under the Prague government with Chancellor Hitler's new Germany. They have remained merely rumors.)

WAR INEVITABLE IF SOVIET ENTERS

Dr. Koo Says China Must Face Question of Enlisting Aid

London, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP)—Within the next two or three months China must face the question of enlisting the support of the powers opposing Japan, and in the hands of the Soviet lies the key to world peace or war, in the opinion of Dr. V. K. Koo, Chinese statesman. "If Russia goes to the help of China, a world war is inevitable, he said.

More than 1,000 Londoners last night heard Dr. Koo speak under auspices of the Student Christian Movement of Canada, Western and Western Ontario. He spoke in support of the Canadian relief fund being collected for university students in China.

The Chinese statesman today reportedly protested to Italy over its recognition of the puppet state of Manchukuo.

Japan also reported here that the provision headquarters of the Foreign Office at Hankow wired instructions to the Japanese ambassador at Rome to make the protest.

(An article in the Popolo D'Italia, believed written by Premier Mussolini, urged China to take the only course left to it and sue for peace with Japan).

Consult Dominions over Germany's Ex-Colonies

Undue Taxation on Land Plea Made to Commission

Municipal Assessments, Increasing Tax Arrears and Increase of Land Acquired by Municipalities Through Tax Delinquency

By CARL REDDEN

Winnipeg, Dec. 1 (CP)—Municipal responsibilities under the present division of governmental duties have placed an undue burden on land, the main source of municipal revenue, Attorney General W. J. Major told the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations yesterday.

While it was admitted taxpayers' income had been materially reduced in recent years, and before 1930 that statement was justified, he said, by increasing municipal assessments, increasing tax arrears, increase of land acquired by municipalities through tax delinquency, municipal deficits and reductions in controllable expenditures.

Assessments Down.

Total municipal assessments in Manitoba had declined almost one-sixth since the 1922 peak, Mr. Major said. Last year gross assessment was $638,940,890, but of this $150,619,926 was excluded by exemptions of one kind or another, leaving total assessments of $477,320,964, that last amount $18,054,688 taxes were imposed in the year.

Capital debt of the municipalities was $114,010,180, against which were sinking funds with a book value of $42,785,454.

Book Value of Sinking Fund.

Questioned by Chairman N. W. Rowell as to the significance of the qualification "book value" Mr. Major said that the book value of sinking funds differed materially from actual value in some cases. Sinking funds were invested in the municipalities' own securities, he said. Beyond that he did not advise. Municipal tax arrears amounted to $33,221,122 last year, compared with $17,469,259 in 1922 when assessments were at their highest, he said. At the end of 1936, there were defaults in Manitoba totalling $2,629,234.

Municipal Finances.

Outlining the close relationship of municipal finances to the provincial government, the Attorney-General said the province had loaned funds to some municipalities to carry out their share of relief work, funds which the province in turn had to obtain from the Dominion.

The province has financed certain schools, the salaries of the municipalities, sometimes issuing debentures for the purpose and guaranteeing municipal issues. Drainage works, municipal telephone systems, and some judicial district costs were all included in these projects.

Canadian Stilton Cheese Sells at Record Price 35c

Twelve Boxes Show Cheese Sold to Mr. Wm. McCreary

SPIRITED BIDDING

Native Show Cheese Sell at 17-18¾c—Highest Price in Years

Canada's best cheese, the complete exhibit specimens of the final cheese Exhibition held in this country went under the auctioneer's hammer at the city hall this morning, bringing a record price for the sale of that of Stilton, recorded in the industry.

A top price of 35 cents per pound for the twelve boxes of Stilton offered was paid by buyer William McCreary representing Canada Packers, at the finish of spirited bidding which commenced at an initial quote of 19 cents.

The auction sale, 180 boxes of large were sold at 17 cents to Mr. McCreary from-an initial bid of 15 cents.

In the white class, 200 boxes were sold at 18 cents to Lloyd Hart, Belleville, from a starting bid of 13 cents.

Thirty-one boxes of colored were sold at 18¾ cents to Richard Hart, advanced from a bid of 15 cents.

"The prices paid are the best advertisement that cheese industry of this country has ever had," it was summed up by Dominion Grader J. H. Irwin of the local cheese factory particularly to the price paid for the Stilton offering.

Auctioning of the cheese was conducted by Walter C. Morrow, past president of the Dominion Cheese Board, assisted by Secretary Fred H. Mallory. The auction was attended from all sections of the province and Quebec, though Belleville was limited to about three or four buyers, Lovell and Christmas, Montreal; W. McCreary and Sons, Brockville and the Belleville Cheddar Cheese Co. most prominent.

CUSTOM RECEIPTS SHOW INCREASE

Customs receipts for the month of November this year show an increase of $29,282.19 over the same month of 1936, according to figures released by the local Customs Office.

Figures for the month just past show receipts of $187,644.05 as against $142,621.90 of November, 1936.

CULBERTSONS TO PART

New York, Dec. 1.—(AP)—The 14-year bridge romance of Ely Culbertson and his wife, Josephine, has ended. Culbertson said last night.

Mrs. Culbertson, the noted bridge expert said in a statement through her attorneys, will seek a divorce decree in Reno, Nev.

Disruption of their marriage, the statement said, will not affect Culbertsons, Inc., from which each receives $100,000 or more annually.

They have two children, Joyce, 10 and Bruce nine.

Ten Freighters Clear Before the Deadline

Port Arthur, Dec. 1 (CP) — Ten Great Lakes freighters cleared from Port Arthur and Fort William with grain today before navigation rates were increased at midnight last night, probably the largest fleet to leave the twin ports before navigation closes Dec. 12.

The fleet carried 2,062,000 bushels of which 1,170,000 was wheat. This was not expected any of the ten ships would clear before midnight but it was possible some might return to carry grain in winter storage.

The increase of 1½ per cent. in insurance rates is effective until Dec. 9 with a sliding scale of increases at three-day intervals until navigation closes.

PAIR QUARRELLED IN DRESDEN HOME

Evidence in Murder Case Given by Chief Blackburn of Dresden

Walkerton, Ont., Dec. 1—(CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Turner quarrelled frequently before her death and considerable drinking was done in their Dresden, Ont. home, according to evidence before the coroner's court here in the inquest into the death of Mrs. Turner's trial on a charge of murder.

Testifying for the Crown, Police Chief Archibald MacDonald, of Chatham, on several occasions when the two apparently had been quarrelling, he said Mrs. Turner once stated: "I'm afraid to live with him."

Mrs. Turner's battered body was found in a woodpile in her home Nov. 7. Walter Turner was arrested on a charge of murder after he reported to police he had found his wife dead. He brought here from Chatham to stand trial after a coroner's inquest returned a verdict of murder was made by police council.

Once, the Chief said, when he had found the couple quarrelling Turner had accused his wife of having "another man" in the house. Mrs. Turner told him they fell and broke "while I was carrying the case down the stairs."

Under cross- examination, Chief Blackburn said "I gave her (Mrs. Turner) police protection when I was called." Asked whether he thought Turner would kill his wife in the future the Chief answered: "No, I wasn't afraid he would."

CHINA ADVISED TO SEEK TERMS BY NEWSPAPER

Italian Paper Says Country Can Expect No Help From Powers

CHANGING MAP

Article Says Japan is Invulnerable Even to Great Nations

Milan, Dec. 1 (AP)—Premier Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo D'Italian warned China today she could expect no help from other powers in the conflict with Japan and advised her to ask Japan for peace terms.

The editorial, generally ascribed to Mussolini himself, while offering this counsel referred pointedly to the recent inconclusive Brussels peace conference.

"The world believes in any assistance of a collective character," the newspaper said in part, "this means it is destined to suicide.

"It may displease the Anglo-Saxon capitalists but public opinion now holds that the cannon roaring in the Far East can be heard louder and louder in the present and future meetings at Geneva and elsewhere."

Informed persons saw in the suggestion that China seek peace terms a possible index of Mussolini's willingness to mediate.

Conditions Not Severe.

"Collective action having failed once more, it remains only for China to demand Japan's peace conditions," Il Popolo D'Italia said. "These conditions may not be as severe as one might think.

"But one thing is certain—Japan is changing the geographical map in the Far East and anyone who thinks differently has taken the wrong bearings."

The article said:

"Now the first American participation in a Brussels conference for collective action for which participation the Chicago speech had given occasion in hope has had as a sequel unhappier than ever.

"Norman Davis (United States representative at Brussels) henceforth will be convinced there is never to be a second conference and the futility of which would be clear before its birth.

"A little knowledge of history, geography and the forces in play in the Far East is sufficient to convince one that nothing may be done against Japan. What can Great Britain, France or Great Britain do separately against Japan, or together? Japan is invulnerable."

3 Mandatory Dominions Australia, New Zealand, S. Africa are Concerned

Britain And France Take Steps to Consider Revision

GERMANY'S SHARE

Belgium Determined to Maintain Integrity of Congo

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Dec. 1 (CP)—Great Britain is to consult the Dominions over Germany's old colonies. These Dominions are primarily concerned—Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

These three Dominions all hold former German colonies under "C" mandates. The Union of South Africa holds Southwest, Africa. Australia holds Mandated Territory of New Guinea. New Zealand has Samoa. Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand jointly administer the small island of Nauru.

Under "C" mandates a former colony is administered by the mandatory power as an integral portion of its territory, subject to safeguards in the interests of the native population.

"B" Mandate Colonies.

Great Britain formerly holds former German East Africa, now Tanganyika, as part of Trusteeship for the Cameroons. These are held under "B" mandate, stiffer than the "C" class colonies. This means that the mandatory to promote to the utmost the material and moral well-being of the Inhabitants, to abstain from militarization, to repress slavery, and to maintain equal opportunity for opportunity for all members of the League of Nations, plus the United States.

Great Britain and France made it clear today that joint consultation between them they cannot consider Germany's colonial claims "in isolation". Otherwise expressed, they are willing to consider revision of mandates in returning Germany is prepared to make a material contribution to a peace system which would end the arms race and restore Europe to normal conditions.

No Carving of Congo, Says Belgium.

Brussels, Dec. 2 (CP-Havas)—"Belgium will never admit any question regarding the territorial integrity of her colonies or the sovereignty of the Belgian Crown," the Belga News Agency said today in a semi-official communication.

The statement so far reports that German colonial demands considered by British and French statesmen in London this week included a proposal to cede a 99-year lease on the Belgian Congo and Portuguese Angola which would be ruled under the mandate system by a German company controlled by the Reich.

Germany Rejects.

Berlin, Dec. 1 (CP-Havas)—The French and British statesmen made a mistake in considering Germany's demands for a return of her pre-war colonies as a basis for general international problem, Nazi newspapers asserted today.

Semi-official circles, however, agreed with the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung that candidates for mandatory power have a new understanding of the claims to Germany of the colonial question.

The Berliner Tageblatt characterized the communique issued in London last night at the conclusion of French-British conversations as "a new edition of outworn formulas".

"The longer this continues the less it interests us," this newspaper added.

3 - Star System Discovered, Baby Star Large as Our Sun

B Capricorni is Found to be Group of Three Stars

FISSION THEORY

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 1 (AP)—The naked eye seen B. Capricorni as one of the sky's brightest stars.

The telescope shows it to be two stars.

Today, Dr. Roscoe F. Sanford, using a spectroscope attached to one of the Carnegie Institution's Mt. Wilson laboratory reflectors, discloses it as three.

Fabulous, two stars revolving about a common centre of mass, are comparatively common," the astronomer said today.

"But to find a system of three stars is unusual. In fact, in ways it is the first of its kind discovered."

If the three stars revolve around one star breaks off from another and the two go whirling around in a long-accepted theory, they must keep the same face toward each other," said Dr. Sanford.

"In the case of B. Capricorni, the larger star might have given birth to another and then the daughter became the mother of the third.

The daughter and third child rotate about a common centre of mass over a period of 2 2/3 days. While they keep up this motion they together rotate about a common centre with the grandparent star over a period of 1275 days.

The baby star is about the size of our sun, the mother is four times as large and the grandparent is six times as large as the sun.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

PRINTED NEWSPAPER SINGLE HANDED

Denver, Dec. 1 (AP)—Mrs. Emme F. Langdon, 65, who single-handed wrote, set the type for and printed her husband's newspaper during a mine strike in the Yukon gold and silver area in 1903, will be buried here today. She died Monday.

Her husband, the late Charles M. Langdon, and his entire staff were jailed by State militia. Langdon had criticized use of troops in the strike.

Mrs. Langdon's paper carried the page one headline: "Slightly disfigured but still in the ring."

NO CHINESE LILIES BECAUSE OF WAR

At least one effect of the Sino-Japanese conflict is seen in the store of Chinese lilies this year. These beautiful blooms imported annually by local Chinese from the mainland country will be conspicuous by their absence, according to a prominent Front Street Chinese restaurateur. "Too much war" he said last night. "The people at home are too busy defending their lives and property to send us the lilies this year. There is a small lilies called the Japanese navy which may be something to do with it." He shook his head sorrowfully, "no lilies this year."

Obituary

MRS. JOSEPHINE C. JOHNSTON

Following an illness lasting approximately one month, Mrs. Josephine C. Johnston, a well esteemed resident of the fifth concession of Sidney, passed to her final rest at her home on Wednesday, Dec. 1st. Deceased was in her seventy-third year.

The late Mrs. Johnston had resided in Sidney township for the past forty years, and was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church, attending the church of that denomination at Foxboro for a number of years.

She leaves to mourn her passing her husband, John W. Johnston, one daughter, Eleanor, at home; one sister, Miss Victoria Reed, Detroit, Mich., one half-sister, Mrs. William Turner, St. Paul, Minn. and one brother, Richard Reed, of Buffalo, N.Y.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

Experiments indicate that material memorized during the drowsy period preceding sleep is likely to be better retained in the mind than when memorized several hours before bedtime.

QUINTIN BOYD GETS PROMOTION

Appointed as Master Mechanic at Capreol And Assumes Duties

Quintin Boyd, well known Belleville Canadian National Railway engineer, was recently promoted to the position of Master Mechanic of the Capreol Division of the Canadian National Railways, headquarters, at Capreol. Mr. Boyd is well known in Belleville in railway, fraternal and Great War veteran activities. Mr. Boyd has already taken up residence in Capreol where he has assumed the position of Master Mechanic of that division. Mrs. Boyd will join her husband later.

The many friends of Mr. Boyd will be glad to know of his recent promotion and his good success. Quintin Boyd was born in Scotland, coming to Canada in 1913, where he became affiliated with the C. N. R. as a fireman. Mr. Boyd was promoted to engineer in 1919, and assumed the call of his country in August, 1918, going overseas with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces and remained until the termination of the late war.

Upon his return to Canada in 1919, Mr. Boyd resumed his duties upon the C.N.R. as fireman and later as a classed engineer, running out of the Belleville Division until his recent appointment as Master Mechanic at Capreol.

Mr. Boyd was Past Grand Patron of the Eastern Star in Ontario, Past Patron of the O.E.S. No. 55 at Belleville, Past President of the Army and Navy Veterans Post No. 31, all of which he took an active interest. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd will be missed by their large realm of friends in the Belleville district, Mrs. Boyd also being a Past Grand Officer in the O.E.S.

Police Blotter

Said by police to have been polishing ladies' gloves and a ring, a transient, who authorities say gave his name as Peter McKenzie, no address, was arrested at 2.20 on Bridge St. east late yesterday afternoon, following complaints received from irritated citizens.

Subsequent investigations by the authorities revealed the gloves and ring had previously been the property of a Bell Block store and were identified by the store manager. How the man came into Mackenzie's possession must be proven by the authorities, however.

Police are investigating a report pertaining to the continued practice of persons stealing pastry from the premises of Linn's Bakery, Dundas St. Mr. Linn informed the solicitor relative to the matter that he noticed through a cellar window and through the pantry and fancy buns were being stolen nightly.

Alleged by eye witnesses to have sideswiped a parked automobile and then driven rapidly northward on Front St., a motor car, the police say was bearing Ontario license plate number 1938-H-3 and being operated by local police officer, shortly after 4.30 p.m. last evening the driver of the above mentioned vehicle is alleged to have stopped, William Cook's car, while it was parked in front of his place of business and subsequently failed to stop at the scene of the accident. It was an out-of-town car, police believe.

MR. H. YEARDSLEY MOVES TO OTTAWA

Insurance Company Promotes Him to Important Post

Howard Yeardsley, assistant manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in the city since 1935, has been appointed Field Training Instructor at headquarters at Ottawa and will leave for his new post on Monday next. The staff at the office did not allow the occasion to pass without recognizing the efficient service Mr. Yeardsley had shown while here and presented to him with all good wishes, a beautiful Gladstone Bag. At the same time Miss Ruth Cronk, stenographer in the local office, who has been a member of the company for ten years was presented with a ten year medal and the staff with ten roses with the gift, much appreciated by the recipient. Both replied briefly thanking the staff for their kindness.

Mr. Yeardsley entered the employ of the Insurance Company four years ago starting as an agent in Kingston. He was transferred to Belleville as agent, then as an agent and in the same year was appointed assistant manager, which position he has held until promoted to Ottawa. While in the city Mr. Yeardsley has made a host of friends and he will be missed in many circles especially in the Kiwanis Club, where he was a valued member.

Trenton

TRUCKER BY-LAW NOW IN EFFECT

Trenton Council Licences All Owners of Trucks in Town

Trenton, Dec. 1 (Special)—Final reading of the 1937 town council took place in the municipal office as usual with the members dealing with a few by-laws. After the monthly accounts were passed a by-law authorizing the inauguration of Trenton to issue $105,000 worth of debentures at an interest rate of 4 1-2 percent was sanctioned. This new bond issue will retire due Trenton debentures which have been paying 5 to 6 percent interest. Mayor Guy Ireland and his colleagues in the sum of $33,000 was being paid to bondholders cashing in on their debentures. The trucking by-law amending by-law 1132, making a truck owner operating one vehicle pay $10 for a license to operate within the town and $30 for a truck owner operating two or more vehicles was read for the second and third time as was the by-law permitting the Bell Telephone to erect new lines over certain streets in the town. It was specified in the trucking by-law, that the operator with one truck could not carry more than two tons to a load. A trucker operating one truck and transporting over two tons to a load will be licensed the same as a trucker operating two or more vehicles, $30.

Sicale Money

Glen Kittel, son of George Kittel, Trenton, was sentenced to from three to six months in the Ontario Reformatory when he was found guilty of stealing a sum of money from Mrs. J. Funnel, by Magistrate J. J. Gillanders in Police Court here yesterday.

SPEECH OF 200 WORDS

Text of Speech.

Following is the text of the Speech from the Throne:

"I desire to extend cordial greetings to you all as you assemble to inaugurate the twentieth legislature of the Province of Ontario.

"This session has been convened under special circumstances for one specific purpose, and I think it fitting therefore that my remarks on this occasion should be confined to that subject.

"The validity and effect of certain sections of the Succession Duty Act have recently been challenged in the courts, impeding the collection of duties which form a substantial part of our provincial revenues. My ministers deem it of paramount importance that all obstacles to the collection of these duties shall be removed with the least possible delay.

"This will accordingly be submitted to you with the object of making effective the purpose of legislation passed in former years and generally for facilitating the administration of the Act.

"Provision will also be made so that the proclaiming of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1937, shall not be effected by reason of this legislation.

"I command these measures to your earnest consideration and I trust that under Divine guidance your deliberations will enhance the public welfare."

SAYS RAILWAYS PROTECT SHIPPER

Railways Will Provide All Information Commission Is Told

Toronto, Dec. 1. (CP) — Lower transport costs to consumers have resulted from motor truck competition with railways, J. A. Argo, Chief of the Freight Tariff Division of the Canadian National Railways, said today before the Chevrier Royal Transport Commission.

R. L. Kellock, counsel for the Ontario Roadbuilders Association, asked Mr. Argo if motor truck competition in so far as it decreased railway rates had benefited the consumer. The competition had led to reduced transport costs to the consumer, Mr. Argo replied.

In cross-examination Mr. Kellock asked that if railway freight rates were fixed on the principle of what the tariff will bear, would the tendency be for traffic to go to truckers where truck rates were lower.

Mr. Milk and Cream of Traffic.

"That is the tendency to a certain extent and we are attempting to meet it," Mr. Argo replied. "Railways must take the milk with the cream, and we hope there is enough cream."

The railway executive said the railways provide the cheapest shipper by public filing of freight tariffs. Station agents will receive explicit business and assist shippers in interpreting tariffs, he said.

Chris Carmichael, counsel for the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario, charged the railways were withholding information concerning rate structure at the inquiry.

"There is no question but friend's clients have brought about this inquiry," Mr. Duncan said, referring to J. Gillanders, counsel for the Railway Association of Canada.

"We are not concerned about the fight, if there is one, between certain railways," said Mr. Justice R. R. E. Chevrier, Commission chairman.

Mr. Gillanders assured the Commission the Railways would provide all information which their powers if the Commission desired it.

"The basic principles of railway rate structure were required, Mr. Duncan said, adding that he wanted engineers and experts to appear at the Commission hearings and be cross-examined.

Track Competition.

He feared, however, that if he supported Mr. Edward Beatty, Canadian Pacific Railway president that Mr. Beatty would be left witness and cross-examination by him would be prohibited by court rules.

The passenger agent told Mr. Argo that there was not enough truck competition to force railways to provide pick-up and delivery service for settlers in Northern Ontario.

"That is out of my jurisdiction and a matter for the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway," Mr. Argo replied.

Steps Taken to Form A Lay Association

A meeting to organize a Lay Association in Hollowy Street United Church, was held last evening and the representative gathering of the congregation decided in favor of such a move and a committee composed of H. B. Petterip, chairman, Harold Bird, William Warren, Mrs. M. Denton, Mrs. Hobbs and Arthur Ellis was appointed to draft a constitution and submit a report at a subsequent meeting.

The gathering was under the direction of the pastor of the church, Rev. H. E. Newman and the meeting was addressed by H. B. Petterip, president of the Lay Association of the Bay of Quinte Conference and Dr. John Coburn representing Social Service and Evangelism of the United Church. Both addresses were most helpful and stressed the need for an organization of this kind. Winnifred MacLaurin and Mrs. Gordon Hall rendered solos and community singing interspersed the proceedings. The meeting was most successful in every respect and there is no doubt a live Lay Association will be formed in this church.

CHEESEMAKERS, VISITORS WELCOMED TO CITY

Comparison of Different Countries' 'Makes' is Highlight of Session

Jos. Burgess Conducts Technical Examination of Cheese

VERY INFORMATIVE

English Farm Cheddar Cheese Given High Rating by Delegates

"The finest examples of cheese I have ever examined. And the best exhibition ever held in the Dominion of Canada."

Thus, succinctly and concisely, did Mr. Jos. Burgess, Chief of the Division of Dairy Products, Ottawa, sum up the country's finest, largest cheese exhibition now being held in this city in connection with the tenth annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, in the presence of many exhibitors and visitors at the opening session in the city hall yesterday afternoon.

The Central Ontario Association of Cheesemakers, its officers, and all who have helped stage this exhibition, are to be congratulated on the holding of such a show," added Mr. Burgess.

Study of Contrasts

Yesterday's afternoon session was a study of contrasts in the cheese industry, contrasts which were afforded through the smelling and sampling of various grades of cheese, selected from the centres of the British Empire. New Zealand and South African cheddar ranked with the finest cheese in the farms and factories of the British Isles. It was placed on the table, sliced and "ironed" before the eyes of a filled hall and passed around in its company with other samples of Canadian cheese from this district, representing the most fastidious cheesemakers of this country have to offer, for smelling and tasting. Each of the samples was found that characteristic which brands the cheese as good, and the verdict of experts both here and abroad.

The meeting which opened with invocation offered by the Rev. A. R. Payne, had, in its official guest, Mayor D. D. Arnott who welcomed the delegates and visitors on behalf of the city of Belleville.

"I trust the convention will be successful, profitable and enjoyable. And we do appreciate your holding it here," expressed Mayor Arnott.

"Even when the last sound for the final round, however, when you are ready to depart for home, I hope you have your affairs finished up, please believe that Belleville will still extend a welcome."

A Great Industry

"The cheese industry is a great one, and one which means much to this district's prosperity," he continued, citing the millions of dollars ready cash that annually come to this district through the sale and sale of this country's famous product.

On behalf of the County of Hastings, Warden Gray also extended his welcome to the many in attendance. "We of the county can appreciate what this industry means to the county and the district."

Thanks of the cheesemakers and others connected with the industry was expressed for the welcome given by W. E. Cooper, Sunbury.

"It is for all of us to come to Belleville on these occasions of this kind," he stated. The first nucleus of the Central Ontario Association was founded in this city, he said, and that was 10 short years ago. Since then we have always been glad to be at some of the conventions of the time we have since met."

"We know what this great industry has done for the country, and we have hopes of yet greater attainments to accord to it," added the representative from Sunbury.

Comparison Made

Mr. Jos. Burgess, Chief of the Division of Dairy Products, Ottawa, one of the experts engaged in the Judging of the five hundred exhibits on the two floors of the auditorium of the city hall, found himself facing new tasks in the judging of samples of New Zealand, South African and English farm and cheddar cheese, which had been brought to Belleville by Mr. James Cook for comparison with the Canadian made product.

Facing him as he addressed the audience was a number of this type cheese on the small tables.

His complete report is reproduced elsewhere on this page.

"I have been closely connected with the industry of cheese and cheesemaking for many years, almost all my life, you might say, and yet during all that time I have no recollection of any cheese exhibition being held anywhere in Canada or elsewhere where the value of prizes reached anywhere near the value of the prizes at this exhibition, almost $1,600 with additional trophies and shields," declared Mr. Burgess.

He recalled that at the present exhibition there are samples of the

A Guessing Game

How much does an average-large silo cheese weigh?

Nine hundred pound children of the city's and district's schools gave guesses on a 166-pound Silo Cheese exhibited at the Convention yesterday at the city hall during the general Convention Cheese Exhibition ranging from a weight of 30 pounds to 1,000 pounds. In a contest arranged by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

One dollar bills offered children in each school for the closest guess have been awarded to Helen Dafoe and the Farnham Rural School; Geo. Silver of the Ontario School for the Deaf; Arthur Bridge of the Belleville Collegiate; Betty Lynch of King George's School; Carl Smith and Rosemary Scripture of Queen Alexandra School and Queen Mary School.

The children were guests of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at the Dominion Exhibition.

REFRIGERATION TO HANDLE PRODUCT MUCH IMPROVED

N. R. Nickalls, Supervisor Perishable Traffic of C.P.R. Claims

FOOD POURS IN

Education in Itself to See Food Loaded in Old Country

Problems of marine refrigeration and the manner in which his company was co-operating with product shipping in that matter, were dealt with by Mr. N. R. Nickalls, Supervisor of Perishable Traffic of the Canadian Pacific Steamships Ltd., Montreal, in his address to the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association yesterday.

"I feel that it is a great honour to be asked to say a few words at your meeting here today and I assure you, it will be a pleasure to me as I am an engineer and as such have had this time to devote to the study of public speaking.

"To you gentlemen whom I have not had the pervelege and pleasure to meeting, it might interest you to know that I have been one of the many C.P.R. wharfs in Montreal, our Atlantic steamships and our docks in London, Liverpool and Southampton, but also in our Pacific fleet of steamships that ply between the Orient, and I was politely informed when I was appointed some five years ago that I could not be a specialist supply of cheese, Incidentally, one of our ships was torpedoed in convoy and was landed into a hospital in Belfast, Ireland.

"I could tell you many tales about this old ship, but I am trying to keep to the point in connection with advancement made in marine refrigeration. In the first place, prior to the present day, when we find that refrigeration and ventilation air conditioned, domestic chambers containing food in as many cases as possible, and more so, than any luxurious hotel ashore.

Faced with Tile

"By means of accurately regulated temperatures, our "Empress" liners, when fully loaded, carries delicate fruits and vegetables right across the world, for the benefit of the consumer.

"The ordinary commercial cargo steamer is built of steel, while an aluminum lacquer tiles which are easily kept clean by periodically they are sprayed with an antiseptic and deodorizing fluid over vapour temperatures are controlled to a degree. Now this has all come about, not only by made between old proved machinery and equipment; but through experiments which were done in our research laboratories and the spread of knowledge of the operating staffs and here I would like to pay some little tribute to the engineering staffs for their care and watchfulness we all so much depend.

"It is not uncommon to hear that our company has erected cold storages on shore and refrigerated chambers at sea. There is an old saying that "Engineers are always conservative" and I assure you that this comparison is particularly odious to the Marine Engineer, as his problem is different.

"Ventilation of ordinary stowage has been improved by means of fans fitted in the ventilators which face all weather ventilators, and from the top of the mast, so that even in heavy weather the air is being constantly changed and it is now no longer necessary to close the ventilators and batten hard down in order to protect cargo from sea water damage.

Refrigeration Advanced

"Marine refrigeration has advanced and is advancing so quickly that it is a whole time job to keep pace with it. In 1875, just 62 years ago, the first successful refrigerator cargo was carried at sea and this was a consignment of frozen meats from the United States of America, but during this long little old island of Great Britain from all parts of the globe and it brings home to us the importance we have in the world to open the trade routes to enable the commodities necessary to live and peacefully, with their valuable cargoes of merchandise.

"I feel sure you will forgive me for reminiscing for a moment, but it was in the year 1914 that I was called immediately after the war, I was called to a great ocean liner temporarily stiff to Venice with a cargo of coal. She was a slow old ship and deep down in the bowels of the ship, down through the Bay of Biscay and Mediterranean Sea, and was submarine than anything else. Called in at a little port on the southeast coast of Italy and on arrival there we were picked up by a small Italian merchant, which we were ordered to escort us up the Adriatic Sea through the mine fields, which had not yet been swept up, but we got way but, unfortunately, after a few days' steaming we had to put into our own mines. We carried on, however, and got to Venice safe and no small amount of luck made Venice without further mishap.

Still in Infancy

"It took three weeks to discharge the coal and by the time we were ready were expensive we decided to call in Malta for fresh fruit supplies and stores, as we were now bound out South Atlantic to Saint John, N. B. Marine Refrigeration was then still in infancy when this vessel was built and as far as refrigeration was then took on board, amongst other things, about two dozen carcasses of lamb which were destined for the Troops. We had no domestic refrigerator, but we had a number of cases of two Chinese cooks. I was now in command for the first time and within about three days out from Gibraltar when I noticed the ice box door was open, so I put my head in to see if the food supply was holding out and found to my it was not a very appetising sight.

At this hour of the day, after a full day's work, the smell of dirty filthy water flopping about the dock, and the unsavoury conditions about in this with the noise of the ship; one of our delightfully picturesque Chinese cooks was concerning himself between two carcasses of lamb and a bag of rice, each, and with a long handled scrubbing brush was endeavouring the lavatory opposite was busily engaged in brushing the green slime from the bulkheads, and, color of being the first form in which milk was conserved for future usage.

"It is estimated that the value of the cheese exports to Great Britain alone during the year March 1936 to March 1937 was $9,234,456.00. Now this volume of business represents a tremendous amount of work and organization in which we all play our parts and I venture to say that our Transportation Companies have done their share.

"In the last few years considerable improvements have taken place in the handling of cheese, more storage in steamers, ventilation of ordinary steamers and the modernization of refrigerator methods.

Less Handling

"The cheese is delivered to the wharf in better condition, there are fewer broken boxes and there are only two handlings now from rail car to ship's side instead of three or four, whereas just a few years ago each box was handled at least four times, and in some cases six.

"For those of you who do not quite understand our transit through cold storages on shore and refrigerated chambers at sea. There is an old saying that "Engineers are always conservative" and I assure you that this comparison is particularly odious to the Marine Engineer, as his problem is different.

EXPLAINS GRADING

Says Central District Greatest Producers of Cheese in Ontario

Official details of all cheese judged and graded at the city hall at the present Dominion Convention were given by Mr. Jos. Burgess, Chief of the Division of Dairy Produce, Ottawa, at yesterday's session of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association in his address to the many delegates and visitors.

High praise for the work of the Central Ontario Association during the event was also voiced by him. "If you have ever seen the display of cheese in the next room, you can probably understand why I say that when I say it is just a little difficult for me to find words to express my full appreciation of the splendid exhibit and the high standard of quality in every section. Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association has always contributed towards making this Exhibition one of the largest, and, I believe, also the most successful ever held in the Dominion of Canada, to be highly complimented and congratulated on the success of their efforts in connection therewith this the Cheese Business for a long time, almost fifty years, and I have excellent records of the Dominion Exhibition being held, where the value of the prizes reached anywhere near the value of the prizes at this Exhibition, almost $1600.00 and, in addition, three trophies and a valuable shield.

Wonderful Co-operation

"Central Ontario with Belleville as the centre, and all those who have been recognized as a district which produced a large percentage of very high class Cheddar Cheese and it therefore goes without saying, that the Cheese Makers' Association in this district should take the lead in putting on such a large and successful Exhibition. You realize, of course, that such a thing would not be possible were it not for the splendid co-operation which you have received from Cheese Boards, Cheese Buyers, County Officials, Citizens and Business Men who have been most generous in contributing to make the Exhibition the huge success.

"The Exhibition is Inter-Provincial in character as there are cheese from as far as that in Guysborough, Nova Scotia; the Western Province of Alberta. In fact, the Exhibition might almost be termed an Empire one, as in addition to the Canadian cheese, there are also samples cheese which were made on the farm and in the factories in New Zealand; Australia; South Africa; and cheese from New Zealand. The Exhibition is, therefore, unique in its representation, and it affords an opportunity for cheese makers to learn something of the latest methods in other countries; also the class of competition Canadian Cheese are subject to on the British Market.

463 Boxes Exhibited

There is a total of 463 cheese in the regular classes; 248 from Central Ontario; 197 from Eastern District of Quebec; 103 from Western Ontario and 11 cheese from the District of Lanark, Renfrew County in Ontario.

This particular district produces the greater part of the total cheese made in the Province, and, as far as I can see, the quality of the cheese are made in this district is excellent. However, only one factory took part in the Exhibition and I am at a loss to understand why the Eastern men are not taking a greater advantage of the opportunity to secure honours and advertise to the world the goods they are manufacturing. Evidently, they have not realized the value and benefit of such an Exhibition but it is to be hoped that in the future they will see fit to change their attitude and take some active part in the competition.

"I am particularly delighted with the large exhibit from the Province of Alberta, which is the largest which is largely on a par with Ontario, and the quality is excellent, and a number of prizes. The number of Cheddar Cheese in the Exhibition is greater than has ever been shown at any exhibition which has ever been held within the Province and I am sure their success will encourage the Alberta makers to take part in future competitions.

"Western and Central Ontario both made an exceptionally fine showing and while Western Ontario secured the majority of the prizes in more than one class, Central and Eastern Districts also managed to get into the prize winning groups in various classes.

Alberta only had two exhibits, one of which won a prize and that is a very good showing for the climate, the lowest scoring cheese which got into the prize money was scored 94.7 points, and there was very very fine cheese which were close up to the last group of winners.

Milk Marketing Board Of Britain Explained

Dr. A. L. Gibson of Eastern Ontario Dairy School Tells of Visit

GREAT PROGRESS

Impressions gained through his recent visit to England and Wales of the British Isles the summer were given by Dr. A. L. Gibson, superintendent of the Eastern Dairy School at the afternoon session yesterday of the annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association.

"I should state that my trip was in no sense made in an official capacity. It was merely a short holiday taken at my own expense after a period of three years without a vacation.

"Naturally, having received my early training in agricultural training in the Old Country, I spent this holiday visiting old friends and dairy institutions which I have known for many years. In this time at my disposal, the only able to get a brief insight into present dairy conditions. On the four places, which included England, North Wales and Scotland, I was fortunate in being able to visit Ireland, where I first worked as a county agricultural instructor. I was unable to make a visit to the Old Country as it is today may differ from conditions which I describe. Although Canada has now been my home for nearly 26 years, when I visited the Old Land I cannot help but think of the Canadian farmer. He has accepted the conditions and during other visits since the war, which have led up to the conditions of today, I have found that a visitor not knowing this background of the industry would not have been brought about recent developments in the industry. Great improvement and he rather critical of the schemes adopted. No matter what the individual opinion may be, we can rest assured that the procedure followed in the Old Country is especially regarding agriculture, is along well considered and sane lines. I mention this because I found in the other country has made such bold and strenuous changes in agriculture and especially in dairying during the last 5 years. In visiting another country I think it is wise not to be too critical of methods condition and the manner in which they are handled by the government and local authorities.

Old Cattle Law

12 "The code of administration of the entire scheme in England and Wales worked out under one-fifth of a penny with the cost of collecting through the Board repre- senting less than 1 per cent of sales, and leaving a healthy surplus from the levy assessed.

"The administration has been given by the Government to assist the dairy trade, last year's total amounted to $3,560,895, but one can readily assured that the Government does not give such assistance without seeing value for the money expended and the increased revenue therefrom. This subsidy has been more than compared with the volume of business transacted. Moreover it should be remembered that the administration of the Board is paid out of their own funds and not by the Government.

"One could go on indefinitely enumerating the activities of the Milk Marketing Board, but time will not permit. I do not for one moment think that the methods at present practiced by the Milk Marketing Board of England and Wales would suit this country. Conditions here are very different. I do think however, that this country is not dealing with its accomplishments and methods in the worthy of the time to devote to a careful study in detail. It is openly acknowledged in England that the success of marketing scheme is by no means perfect and mistakes have been made. One of the most important defects is the approval of the Minister of Agriculture. These members are elected by the votes of the producers of the regional and special members retiring annually. The appointed by the Minister is very clearly and definitely stated in the Act of Parliament, so as to ensure that they are a truly representative body.

Producers Registered

3 "All milk producers are registered with the Board, except those who have not more than four milch cows. Producing milk for sale, or who do not sell milk otherwise than through their servants for consumption in their households.

"This year there were 94,610 registered producers selling milk wholesale on 91,583 contracts registered with the Board.

5 "There are 84,844 licensed retailers of milk under this Board.

6 "The total volume of milk sold through the board during the year 1936-37 amounted to 1,594,000,000 gallons, and of this 699,372,377 gallons, or 44 per cent, approximately 342,500,715 gallons were for manufacturing purposes.

7 "The price of milk realized from sales under wholesale contracts with the Board for last year amounted to approximately $220,- 913,355. This equals the value of all the milk produced in Canada. This is a colossal figure for such a young organization to administer.

The whole of this sum, with the exception of one-half cent per gallon which was levied for seven months for expenses, liabilities, and other branches of dairying, then reserves and a publicity levy in May of one-quarter cent per gallon, was returned to the producers.

System of Pooling

8 "By a system of pooling all registered producers in each region receive a uniform price for their milk. The average price for all regions last year amounted to 11.82 pence per gallon, which figures out to over $2.10 per 100 lbs. This price was paid to all producers, no matter whether their milk was sold for liquid or manufacturing markets. In addition, those producers on the Roll of Accredited producers, that is those producing milk from tested herds and of special quality, receive an additional penny per gallon or nearly 20 cents per 100 lbs.

9 "Milk for liquid trade is manufactured at a loss and the above paid price is arrived at after deducting this loss. Such a pool price meant a loss of nearly 6 cents on every pound of butter made last year.

10 "Last year there were 1970 farmhouse cheesemakers' contracts registered, which was an increase of 197 over the previous year. Under any of these contracts as much cheese is made as in one of our small factories. In addition, the Board has licensed 1,000 manufacturing plants owned and controlled by the producers themselves.

11 "Under the general business of marketing milk and its products the Board has controlled the wholesale of publicity and education to increase the sales of liquid milk and its products. For last year this campaign increased the liquid milk sales by 12,237,000 gallons. During the previous year, It has also created 644 Milk Bars supplied milk on school days to 12 million scholars, also amounting to 22 million gallons, also 96 factories and workers' canteens all over England and Wales to the extent of 3,000,000 gallons. Expectant and nursing mothers and children under 5 years of age are supplied milk at reduced rates. In 1936 the Commissioners of South Wales, Durham and Newcastle, 1541 mothers and 1760 children are being supplied with milk at 4 cents per pint per head per week.

"The supplying of milk to children in the schools is a very important part of the work of the Board and is assisted by the government and local authorities.

New Dairy School

"Before long it must mention the new dairy school and modern cheese and butter factory which I understand is to be established. The new Dairy School for Scotland situated at Kilmarnock, which is on the road from the Hannah Dairy Research Institute, which was constructed to take the place of my old school at Kilmarnock. We have been in close touch with the Hannah Dairy School. It possesses its own herd and its own farm and good without being too elaborate. They have been fortunate in having a manufacture, lecture rooms, laboratories for chemistry, bacteriology, and dairying, and also modern buildings of a dairy farm. Not only will the Hannah Institute study the dairy dealt with from the laboratory and research point of view but also stock nutrition, farm crops and soil fertility, It is truly a complete dairy institute. It is intended that the school what they consider a perfect dairy farm. Personally I should think it would be difficult to find any farm perfect, but no doubt they will be able to manage except for caps. Cracked cows and other troubles peculiar to them. They also could not understand our main trouble of tuberculosis, but I think it is a defect that they seldom, if ever, experience. Perhaps the best of this very annoying defect is due to the fact that the herds are tested and taken care of before it is made into cheese. They also continue to make a study of the milk from the time along with the Actimeter during the manufacturing process. As a matter of fact, the process of making cheese from the milk from cows in practically the same in all details as it was 30 or more years ago.

Modern in Every Way

"At present I am in the cities from this school, I visited a new creamery built by the Scottish Milk Marketing Board, which is similar to the Old Country means both what we call cheddar and Canadian cheese. This factory is modern in every way and is typical of the equipment of its kind in this country. In addition it possesses a consistency and milk reception room to take care of the products and surplus milk. It has a capacity of 1,000 lbs. milk per hour, of cheese per day and a large proportion of the milk from every farmer supplying the factory is tested weekly. Three tests are taken in a week, Acidity test, fat test, and Sediment test, and a report issued to each farmer of milk according to these tests is sent to the farmer. In the cities of the Old Country and also I is refused until a special test showing improvement is made. By the adoption of these tests, eventually all milk in Scotland will be of the best cheesemaking, will have to be of the same standard as that received for the finest milk trade.

"My visit was all too short, and

CO-OPERATION THE KEY

President Wilkinson of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers pointed out in his inaugural address at the annual convention of the association here to the fine demonstration of interest and co-operation by the producers of Quebec in the exhibition of cheese. This and the wholehearted response of the makers from all parts of Ontario are a happy augury for dairying. The industry is fully conscious of the great place it plays in the national and international life and with co-operation of Federal and Provincial Departments and the workers, the future should be bright.

Central Ontario makers caught the gleam years ago when they organized for the sake of the improvement of products.

This thoroughly alive industry will keep step with scientific advance as applied to the dairying and with the latest marketing methods to reap a harvest which will come only with co-operation by Canadian producers.

WHEREVER SCOTS MEET

St. Andrew's Day brings Scotsmen together in one of the happiest of festivals in the history of the race or of any race. Scots preserve in the midst of modern kitchens and cookery their haggis and they possess an instrument, the bagpipe, one of the strangest instruments to some people, but somehow to a Scot and to others expressing in music the land which gave them or their ancestors birth and the spirit of the land. In this, too, it is the spirit of the first days of Christian teaching, associated with their patron saint, Andrew, son of Jonas, one of the fishermen of that noble group who walked and labored with Jesus of Nazareth.

When Scots meet on St. Andrew's Nicht, theirs is not a melancholy festival, but a gathering of living spirits with which the enduring spirit of Scotland is associated. Nothing that ever was great in Scotland has been lost for whatever was great remains in her sons, even in such a man as the late Right Honorable Ramsay MacDonald, who a day or two ago was laid in his last rest in the quaint village of Lossiemouth where he was born. If there has been a blessing to Scotland in lack of comforts and in poverty, that blessing still drives on the Scot, it inspires him to thrift and keeps him from too great worship of things merely material. If there was heroism in the ancient forbears of the Scots of today—and history, ballad, song and romance are replete with tales of heroism—it is part of the Scottish nature today. If there is a love of freedom and if there is a love of religion as in old Scotland, they are in modern Scotland and in the Scot today. Be the man who names himself Scot born in lands thousands of miles away, the genius of the race rocks him in his cradle and follows him through his life. He may never see Scotland but he is a Scot.

Scotland is blessed in her racial genius. Rugged men, used to labor and hard ways, they were men of heart and spirit, brave in battle, kindly and affectionate at home, clannish with their compatriots. But a Scot is a Scot and a setting upon romance, ballad and song. Scotland never sought an empire, for she loved her Highlands and Lowlands, they are her home, but her sons travelled and found places of abode, where they have done it the best of citizens, while retaining their spiritual nourishment from ancient Scotia, the "meet nurse for a poetic child."

Herein the Scots are so different from some of the men one reads so much about in the papers today. They do not start plotting for the expansion of a Scotland, anywhere and everywhere. So many other individuals, when they go to a new land, want to remake that land over again to the pattern of the land politically. But Scots are loyal and enrich the community in which they live. Theirs is an empire of the spirit, not an empire of so much land and power through territory.

But just because they are so compatriotable wherever they live, the Scot influence permeates everywhere and moulds the life of every community. Canada itself everywhere gives a great deal to the Scots who came as founders to this country or arrived in later days. Wherever they go they are a benign, orderly and kindly influence.

In the course of history, destiny made no mistake when it placed a people in the rugged, yet lovely Scotland where they grew up and developed into the fullness of national life, to take their part in the world's civilization. They have had no mean place in British imperialism which exerts influence far good beyond the bounds of the Empire and when that better day comes of a world civilization and brotherhood Scotland and Scots will be found to have no small part in it. In the day of the world's emancipation from fear and threat of war, Scots will be there in that world's day of rejoicing with their bagpipes and national traditions and their kindliness and gentleness, blessing the united world.

Surely no race ever chose a patron saint more in keeping with the spirit of their race than Scotland in the choice of St. Andrew, the man, who according to the Gospel was he who brought his brother to Him, who has exerted the greatest influence on the history of the world and on the human soul.

NOVEMBER

There is something in November
Lulls the "gypsy blood" to sleep;
When the North-wind strums its harpstrings,
Sighing notes that moan and weep;

When the trees wear sombre mantle,
And the sky dull low'ring clouds
When the earth is wrapped a-slumber
In approaching Winter's shroud.

But the "gypsy blood" is joyous,
Living in rich mem'ry's dream;
Autumn glory, wooded hill-top,
Summer's peace beside the stream.

"Gypsy Blood" will be a-stirring,
And will laugh and romp and sing,
When it hears the robin's song-note
In the symphony of Spring!

SHORT WORDS, SHORT SENTENCES, SHORT PARAGRAPHS,

make for the best writing. So newspaper men of the Dominion were told at the Canadian National Exhibition by P. D. Ross, veteran journalist, and the man behind the Ottawa Journal. P. D. quoted a number of popular poems to illustrate his point, including Kipling and Tennyson. If the newspapermen present profited by the counsel of this newspaper sage we may expect shorter editorials and news stories, shorter sentences, and shorter paragraphs. A whole mess of big words that've been sneaking up for a long time will now have to be scrapped—and what a pity, for they were monstrous fine big words, pruned to fit every idiosyncrasy of individual or incident breaking into the news. P. D.'s recollections of big men, big news and libel suits, culled from many years experience in the newspaper game is a most interesting volume and should be read by every newspaper man, young, middle aged and—but newspaper men never grow old.

PEACE ON EARTH WILL NEVER BE ACCOMPLISHED until a generation arises which has been taught the vital principles of peace from the cradle. Catch 'em young and squeese all the war virus out of their systems. Thus spoke a student of world affairs who recently addressed an audience in Belleville. Looks like he was everlastingly right when one considers his book recently published by the son of Mussolini glorifying war, especially aerial warfare where he described the impact of bombs upon a crowd of natives as resembling "the opening of a rosebud"—as seen from the air. Frying pans to the grave the human instinct is to fight, and most of man's sports are fashioned after the combat idea, breaking out in family feuds, neighbors' quarrels, lawsuits, and assault and battery and all that kind of thing. It sure looks like the peace idea would have to be planted in the cradle.

GLORIES OF MODERN WARFARE as described so enthusiastically by the son of Mussolini for the edification of the youth of Italy must have shocked people of good will the world over. What a thrill, and subtension of spirit, young Mussolini got flying high over Ethiopia and dropping bombs on Emperor Haile Sellasie's cavalry. Safe above the clouds, dropping bombs on helpless natives who could not fight back—what fun! Now one understands why Great Britain must spend billions in modern armament. With Russia, Germany and Italy, ruled by war-loving dictators the world must be regarded, drilled, and steeped in war culture, or barbarism, it is as if a multitude of mad dogs were being loosed on the world, and the glories and horrors of modern warfare being glorified and horrified more particularly for the glorification of one man in each country, the dictator thereof. Centuries of the teaching of Christianity have apparently turned the savage nations Christian and the Christian nations savage.

It is certainly a very important lesson, to learn how to enjoy ordinary things, and to be able to relish your being without the transport of some passion, or the gratification of some appetite.—Steele.

Imprudence, silly talk, foolish vanity and vain curiosity are closely allied; they are children of one family.—Fontaine.

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

Dexter W. Fellows Press Agent Extraordinary

Dexter Fellows who died in Hamilton, Mass., on Nov. 26, was the most successful press agent ever developed. The following account of his life and methods of publicity has been taken from the New York Times:

Traveled for Four Decades.

In the gentle art of inducing hard-boiled city editors not only to accept but to clamor for news copy of that variety, Dexter Fellows, dean of circus press agents, was extremely successful. For more than four decades he traveled with the big circuses in this country, in Canada and in Europe, and his keen sense of humor, his delightful ways and his broad-culture gained him entree into cities where such exalted personages had to wait in ante-rooms to be let in unheralded.

He had a knack, had Mr. Fellows, of penetrating a defensive attitude of closeting a frown with a smile and a few words. Many have tried to imitate his ways; but there was only one Dexter Fellows.

A press agent who could make nationally known news writers "by-line men" — happy to write about himself and the circus he represented; whom cub reporters gave assistance to because the man was Dexter Fellows. And newspaper reporters, young and old, are not enthusiastic about press agents as a general rule.

Mr. Fellows' first letter to him as "minister plenipotentiary of the greatest show on earth," "public relations counselor of the circus," "promoter of pardonable publicity," "transgressor-extraordinary," He was invested with titles: Colonel, Commodore, Admiral and Excellency. He was like the beloved child of many aunts.

Memory Was Phenomenal

Mr. Fellows, whose memory of faces and names was phenomenal, made friends with everybody. He had the unusual knack of knowing what would "make the front page"; he knew when and how to present it to back it up; there was generally a touch of it in the galaxy of circus beasts, human freaks, clowns, equestrians and all the rest that go to a circus.

He would talk—talk readily of everything and everybody—but he was reticent when the subject was himself. Many times reporters have sought information about Mr. Fellows's past was deftly side-tracked by a happy reminiscence, or the telephone—any pretext to change the subject.

In later years he relented somewhat and would recall incidents of his days at Fitchburg, Mass., where he was brought up, and would tell of his first experience with the circus, Pawnee Bill Show. His conversation was of the unhurried kind, for he was much too intelligent to harp on his knowledge for exploitation. Within five minutes he is known to have discoursed upon air-legged bumblebees, the work of Dr. Balzac, chemistry, the superiority of certain religious cults over the circus and the symphonies of Beethoven.

During many years that he travelled about the continent Mr. Fellows used his spare moments in addition to excellent advantage. To chat with him was a treat, for he is informative without pretense or pedantry, and his conversation was as well understood by the bizarre allusions and bon mots that interlarded it.

With dull people he used a finely disguised brand of ironical flattery. He could at one glance appraise whoever approached him at whomever he was approached. His judgment was almost infallible, for he was a keen student of human nature.

And yet he had a streak of sentimentality. He read incessantly, but only the old 'authors: Dickens, Balzac, Hugo, Faubert; even old Eugene Sue, who wrote "The Wandering Jew" and "The Mysteries of Paris."

Deplored Editing Dickens

When he heard rumors, in 1934, that publishers were cutting down Dickens's works for "modern consumption," he exclaimed: "Shall I fear far has this gone? Is it true?"

Told that the rumors were true, he replied: "Why, that's monstrous. It's deplorable. It's like taking the clowns out of the circus, the lions out of the highbrow and the elephants out of the sideshow."

His autobiography, written by him and Andrew A. Freeman, was published in 1936 under the title: "All Way to the Big Show; the Life of Dexter Fellows." In it he sketched something of his boyhood in Fitchburg, of his youthful admiration for Buffalo Bill, of his first sight of P. T. Barnum, of his work for Pawnee Bill, his thousand and one adventures in the press business. In the book he wrote that public feeling against child animal acts was gradually wiping them out and that those circus stunts which were really "death defying" were pretty much in the discard.

His was once more the advance man of the circus in 1937. In that capacity he made a typical announcement, hailing the coming of Robert Wadlow, 8-foot-7-inch giant from Wadlow, Ill.

"A man if ever there was one! He is coming to Hamilton right here to California. He's not one of your skinny, beanpole fellows, with a sunken chest. He's monstrophic. He's America's own Goliath, the tallest human colossus that ever trod the earth. We've got medical, scientific and Harvard records to prove it."

Asked how the 1937 circus compared with that of 1936, he said: "I don't answer that. I can tell you we have more new and great acts than we've had in years.

Noted for Love of Animals

His love for animals, large and small, was touching. He knew the elephants in the circus and they knew him. It was a sad blow to him and to Mrs. Fellows when their pet terrier named Mischief after the dog in Balzac's short story, died at Harvard, Mass., some years ago.

Dexter Fellows was born in Boston on July 4 in 1871. His father, a druggist, moved to Fitchburg, Mass., when he was still an infant, and there he went to school and had his boyhood days. Old-timers still remember a stundy redhaired youngster as a "wild" but likable boy, full of boyish pranks, harmless as they were.

When he reached fourteen he left school. Dexter Fellows went to work for his father, who owned a drug store. He was a pharmacy where pills were mixed and prescriptions filled, but he also had a flair for concoctions to explain, a drug store where books, sandwiches, beer and all other wares but medical are sold.

His uncle, James I. Fellows, had been a circus man. So, too, had Mrs. Fellows's father, who elected to be known as "Professor" Frank Bailey shown the Ontario cheese from as far east as the Ottawa district and Quebec from the western provinces as well.

COMPARISON OF TWO COUNTRIES

Technical Explanation

During the address by Mr. Burgess in which full details of the exhibits were given, reference was made to printed circulars in this issue, while quoted statements were made about the lack of reducing the various imported cheese to small sizes.

"We had to disqualify some of the cheese exhibited for other faults than lack of flavor, poor texture or other mechanical faults," continued Mr. Burgess.

"One cheese I have in mind was a beautiful cheese. It should have won first or second place. Yet when we examined it we found no less than seven pin-holes in it. (Sorings into the cheese by makers and others to discover its quality within). We felt we were quite justified in that case in marking this cheese down below."

"But these exhibits in that next room are the finest and best cheese I have ever examined in my nearly fifty years in the business."

Little Disappointed

"There is just one little thing I am disappointed in—that is the fact that the makers east of Frontenac County have not been represented with their exhibits, nor worked in hand on their make as I believe they can. The east can't afford to stay out in exhibition work. If they do not come across next year we will be trying to feel awfully disappointed."

Mr. Burgess held aloft a large section of the New Zealand cheese.

"Let's just dissect this," he insisted.

"In the first place you can see that the rind has become dry and cracked. That is the truth with New Zealand product. The outer rind is apt to become dry and cracked when the cheese is cut on a counter. Neither grocer nor buyers like that. Yet, this cheese is made of pasteurized milk and this condition seems to go with pasteurization.

"How do you like that South African cheese submitted as samples of that were passed out to the large audience.

"Fine," was the immediate response of several who had slowly nibbled their samples, while smelling the bouquet in careful fashion.

"Mr. Henderson tells me that this South African cheese—notice what he has done to the rind—that he has—is to be a strong competitor soon. Do you agree to that?" asked Mr. Burgess.

Again agreement was given by the audience.

A typical New Zealand cheese grade, the one in mind in the instructions of that cheese was received by Mr. Chief of the Division of Dairy Produce. Heavily wired and bedded, with open slots, it was shown the audience.

Objects to Crate

"There is an objection to that type of crate," declared Mr. Burgess. "It lies in the fact that the openes between the slats permit the cheese to get at the cheese, and there have been complaints in the past that cheese have arrived after shipment and found to have been badly gnawed.

"What was the matter with the New Zealand cheese?" asked Mr. Burgess as samples of that make were passed around on the paper plate by assistants of the department.

"Too mild in flavor" was the general response of those who had sampled that.

"It is a little too mild," agreed the Chief.

Samples of English factory cheddar cheese were handed out at this point. Audible comment from the general high quality of this make was at once heard from the experts. It stood in direct contrast with the own peculiar tang and flavor to the New Zealand and South African cheese previously tasted.

A 55-pound cheese of English cheddar form was the next sample. Again perfect agreement as to the quality was manifested.

"If you've ever tasted a finer cheese in your life just hold up your hand," said to see where," said Mr. Burgess as samples of this went out for inspection.

"It's simply wonderful cheese. That about describes it," declared the Dairy Chief. "It's a make which commands premium prices in England and elsewhere, premiums which are justified."

Solemn "hear, hear agreement" that that particular make, from the farm houses of England was of the highest cut grade were given by the roomful of experts.

Mr. Burgess called attention to those Canadian cheese which had been shipped to export in the early land and then returned to Canada. "A very nice Eastern Ontario cheese with a registered number that was made near Ottawa," they were classified by him.

Comparison Made

"Compare this cheese with the English farm cheddar," he asked.

"To me the farm cheddar is much more mature than the Canadian. And the Canadian cheese has not that fine flavor, that fine farm cheddar has."

Samples passed around of the Canadian imports showed the cheese to have a slightly rancid flavor. A sample of colored cheese was on the table before him was shown by Mr. Burgess to have a coarse and dry texture.

"That is one condition inspectors in the Old Land tell us they do not want. These cheese were from the Belleville district, graded at 92½. There has been no complaint received with their exhibits, nor worked in hand on their make as I believe they can. The east can't afford to stay out in exhibition work. If they do not come across next year we will be trying to feel awfully disappointed."

Shell of Steel

"In the first place a modern cold storage warehouse ashore is usually built of concrete, a very excellent insulation in itself, but the chambers of a steamship are built into a shell of steel, which is a good conductor of both heat and cold. The rooms of a cold storage plant are large and spacious, the operator leaves himself room to walk around and examine the commodities in his charge, but the space in a steamship is too valuable to permit of this luxury. The chambers must be stowed to capacity and once the doors are closed after loading, the commodities must be left entirely undisturbed with general cargo and the engineer has to rely entirely on the thermometer reading and bring the refrigerating machine to the careful stowage and dunnaging at the port of loading.

"Again, a ship is not designed for pre-cooling purposes; or in other words, extracting the animal or field heat from a commodity, but should be looked upon as a vehicle of transportation intended primarily to maintain the temperature at which the cargo is delivered.

Strengthen Beams

"Furthermore, a ship is not stable, as the rolls and pitches, at many of you know to your personal discomfort, and the cargo, however well secured, is moving with the vessel so that the weight and consequent pressure is continually being shifted, and the cargo must be held to the other and from box to box, and it is necessary to construct quite apart from the risk of damage by handling, that any measures you have taken or may take to strengthen your boxes, is time and money well spent.

"Now gentlemen, listening to me talking, you may have thought that I have overlooked the hard work which you have been putting in and the extra expense involved in the improvement of your own commodity, only in a preliminary but in packing and handling and I shall in assure you that that is by no means the case, nor have I forgotten the good work done by the Department of Agriculture in this connection.

"The successful final outturn of your freight depends as much upon the condition in which we receive it. The most we can hope to do with any commodity is to land it in as good a condition as it is given to us. All the refrigeration or ventilation in the world will not improve it, and while this thought is in our minds I would suggest that the members of this Association give very serious consideration to the question of the proper organization for the carriage of your export cheese during the next few months, such as we have experienced this year, I refer particularly to the months of July and August, and in this connection there are two important points I would like to bring out:

Ship in Refrigerator Cars

Firstly: "If export cheese shipped from here to Montreal during the hot weather are overheated prior to its arrival on the wharf, there is nothing the matter of the steamers to improve its condition, for the last night, later, and I feel very strongly that the extra cost in furnished the shipper in refrigerator cars during this period would be well repaid by the improved condition in which it arrived.

Secondly: "The cheese which you keep so carefully in your cold storages is bound to sweat badly when taken from it and the highly humidified atmosphere to which I have referred, thereby gentlemen the only satisfactory answer to this problem is steadfastly refrigeration during this period, a fact which is already recognized by some of the cheese shippers.

"Now I hope I have succeeded in interesting you a little in my side of your business and will say that we cannot believe anything we have not only half of what we see which reminds me of a story concerning three rival fishing clubs which are to be found in nearly every town and village in England. They were all keen on some nearby river every week-end, the banks are evenly marked out with stakes and each man fishes between his markers, etc., etc., which goes to prove that the things we see are often very deceptive. However, when all the gentlemen are down, or is it up, in Montreal it will be the duty of some to have the opportunity of showing you round our steamers and perhaps going a little deeper into these subjects I have only touched slightly on, I have concluded.

if time and money would permit, I would pay another visit to investigate conditions more thoroughly. I have a keen feeling that the Mother Country is progressing with the times. She may not have the Dictatorship, but agricultural organization has progressed on long pace with the methods of Dictatorship. In case of emergency, the British farmer will be in a much better position to supply the food requirements of the nation than in 1914", concluded Dr. Gibson.

The Stars Say—

Excellent Prospects for soliditying the affairs and putting the fortunes on a firm foundation are presaged by the day's astral intervention. The breaking up of old stagnations dould make way for decisive movements in investments, property values, labor and all old matters.

If The Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which there may be a definite stabilization of fortunes after a period of inertia and congestion. This may mean about through labor, inheritance or insurance, investments or increased property values.

A child born on this day may be a profound thinker, a deep student and dependable worker. It may have a genius, lovable and gracious nature. It should succeed in art or in business or industry.

YOUTH TRAINING SCHEME BY GOVT IS WELL UNDERWAY

James F. Marsh, Deputy Minister of Labor Explains Details

VARIOUS CAUSES

Speaker Asks Cooperation of Industry in Taking on Apprentices

Co-operation of the industries and other labor interests of the city was sought in the furtherance of the aims of the Dominion-Provincial youth training program inaugurated this year to facilitate the problems of alleviating the youth unemployment of the country, in a splendid address given by James F. Marsh, Deputy Minister of Labor for Ontario before members of the Belleville Rotary Club at the weekly banquet held in the New Queens Hotel yesterday.

Recommendation that particular interest be paid to the apprenticeship and membership phases of the program was stressed by the speaker in his description of the origin and aims of this great work. "The problem to be met," he said, "is the problem of a conference of the youth of the Dominion that received governmental recognition at the Ottawa conference between the Dominion-Provincial youth training program."

One million dollars has been set aside for the rehabilitation of unemployed youth of the country, $240,000 of which has been allocated to Ontario, said Mr. Marsh, and the Provincial Government granted a like amount.

The entire resources of the country are being utilized in the experimentation of the plan, the speaker pointed out. Lands, forests, mines, agriculture and labor interests are being approached with a view to cooperation.

Learn to Swing Axe.

"In the lands and forests alone, 30 young men will be given work learning to swing an axe and pull a saw. These boys were taken from the unemployed list and this work lasts for were on relief. In their forestry training they spend one month each week at technical instruction and are paid one dollar a day and given their board. At the expiration of the course the youths are fully equipped to take lucrative employment," he said.

"Youths with some technical training are being given courses in various mining centres," Mr. Marsh said in touching on the mining industrial phase of industry. "At present we have about 200 boys in a school at Haileybury where they are being paid ten dollars a week and they help their board.

"Model farms throughout the province have been selected by the agricultural representatives of the districts," Mr. Marsh told his listeners in relating to the present 410 boys who have been placed. They are paid $10 per month by the farmer receiving a like amount for his individual training. In this way the boys are fitted to take a job in the spring."

"Encouraging the young girls of the country to stay at home on the farm is also being considered. In various centres located at widely separated points at which the girls are taught arts, dress-making, cookery, etc. Taking into consideration the fact that there are large number of girls looking for jobs in factories, plus the fact there is a decided shortage of housekeeping, etc. Here they are given three months training, uniforms and a salary of five dollars a month.

"At the end of this time," the speaker said, "we undertake to supply them with jobs. There are 500 girls at present in these centres. Their transportation is paid both ways."

Helping Employer.

Stressing the importance of labor and industry, Mr. Marsh pointed out that through the immigration given apprentices is paid the employer by the government.

"Fifteen municipalities specially equipped are at present canvassing unemployed youth with a view to their taking on apprentices. "There is a decided shortage of skilled labor in Canada," he declared, "so much so that the speaker declared, "is to take on one young man would be a change in the production. We have an objective of 3,000, but if any man takes off the list is a potential family."

Constant demand for male nurses and the improvement of a training centre in Whitby, where 45 young men are being trained in this interesting vocation, Mr. Marsh dealt with the completion of the centres these youths will be given positions and other classes started."

At the YMCA.

At the YMCA last night Mr. Marsh reiterated his appeal for cooperation of parents clubs, industries and city organizations in the furtherance of the program. "The program" he said "is not a charity institution, was instituted to provide for industry a growing of skilled persons to fill the places of those passing on. There is a constant parade of skilled workers to the cemeteries" he continued, "and we are trying to provide a certain parade of young men and women to fill their places."

"There is a lack of trained men today in Canada due to the heavy migration to the United States and Europe. Better conditions in other countries of late have brought about another heavy drain on our skilled labor. As far as Belleville is concerned aren't our young men and women as capable and efficient to learn a trade as the man from overseas?"

Only Lack Opportunity.

"The only thing they lacked," declared the speaker, "was the opportunity, and the employers of today are willing to provide that power to give our boys and girls a chance to train themselves. Employers should look upon this thing as an investment, that will pay dividends in the years to come."

In Ottawa classes in retail salesmanship have been set up where 104 boys are being trained. The business men of that city are taking these trained men as they need them, and the merchants of Belleville feel that they can co-operate with such a class here the Department will gladly co-operate with the instruction of young men and women.

Mr. Marsh was guest at the employers banquet held in the New Queens Hotel yesterday.

"I want this distinctly understood," Chairman Todd told his listeners "there will be no discrimination shown in the selection of youths and young women for these training centres. The program is open to every one regardless of race, creed or political persuasion. It is open to young men and women between the ages of 18 and 30."

George Hall, Belleville business men endorsed the plan as did representatives of service clubs and educational institutions of the city.

A temporary committee consisting of Mayor T. J. Deacon, C. MacKenzie and Ross Silver was appointed to contact various organizations of the city with a view to getting the program under way locally.

President Riddle Logan of the Belleville Rotary Club acted as chairman. The speaker was introduced by Rev. W. MacLaurin and Elwanian appreciation voiced by Jack McVeigh.

"White Gift" Service Held At Plainfield

Plainfield—A white gift service in the form of a Christmas pageant was given in the United Church Sunday morning under the direction of Mrs. Harry Harrison. The pageant entitled "Star Night," by Clarence Hall. Carl Platt read the lesson. Miss Irene Pfaff was introduced a solo. "Silent Night, Holy Night," Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilcox standing beside the improvised manger in which lay sleeping the baby child, sang "Away in a Manger". Bill Dorsey, Bill Hall and Norman Pennington acted the part of the shepherds, while Gordon Emerson, Carman Emerson and Oscar Moore,exemplifying the Three kings sang, "We Three Kings of Orient Are", and after presenting their gifts to the new born king knelt beside the manger acknowledging his sovereignty. Following this the members of the local school beginning with the primary class presented their gifts. Mrs. Clarence Hall offered prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Latta of Dartford were recent guests of his parents Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert Latta.

Rev. George H. Campbell, of Trenton, preached a forceful sermon to a large congregation in the United Church on Sunday evening.

Mrs. Orville Sills, of Foxboro attended Divine service in the Mount Pleasant United Church on Sunday morning.

Weddings

MANSFIELD—SMITH

At Bridge Street United Church Parsonage at eight o'clock last evening a pretty wedding took place when Doris June, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Smith became the bride of Mr. Frederick J. Mansfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mansfield all of this city. Rev. James Semple officiated.

The bride wore a frock of midnight blue chiffon velvet with matching accessories. She was attended by Miss Irene Charlton who wore robin's egg blue crepe trimmed with rhinestones and matching hat. Mr. Bud McMartin was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, Dundas Street, at which a large number were present. Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield will take up residence in this city.

S.A. Music Group Photographed in "The Musician"

"The Musician," the music publication of the Royal Academy of Music, London, England, contains in its November issue, a splendid photograph of the Bandsmen of Mark Wilson's Party, which was formed about six years ago. Its members are Bandsmen Thos. Adams, Arthur Pudge, Roy Wilson, Jack Wardle, Vic Mason, Eric C. Naylor, Jack Green (leader) and Fred Wardle. It will be remembered that this group broadcast some time ago, from Kingston and Toronto, by special recommendation from listeners.

Incidentally, in "The Musician" is to itself a fine tribute to the Belleville group as this publication formerly known as "The Bandsman and Songster" records the high-lights of musical activities of the Army, internationally. It also publishes very worth while articles on music for band and vocalist and is well known to musical circles, especially in England.

Ontario Pair High in Bridge Tournament

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Mrs. J. A. Pinkerton of Belleville, Ont., and P. E. Sheardown of Toronto, Ont., tied for first place in a duplicate match play for the mixed pair championship in the 11th annual tournament of the American Contract Bridge League, their score was 178.

Mrs. M. O. Young of Ingersoll, Ont., and C. H. Goren of Philadelphia were second with a score of 250 p.

Tournament officials explained that each played first because of the team played three less boards.

GAILY COLORED LIGHTS ADD FESTIVE TOUCH TO FRONT STREET

Shop windows on Front Street reflected back the gay, festive spirit of colored lights last night giving the main thoroughfare a fairyland appearance. Main "Christmas Lighting System" was turned on for the holiday season.

Strung diagonally across the street, the colored lights gave admiring pedestrians the impression of masses of colored lights when passing beneath one or other of the street.

If sidewalk comment is any criterion, the added illumination of the city's main thoroughfare fills a long-felt want. Many admiring spectators passed the evening routine to watch the effect of gleaming lights shining down in colored illumination by night and blend with the garish yellow of street and window lamps.

MRS. G. KINGSLEY, PICTON, FALLS FROM SPEEDING CAR

Hurled into the ditch through the door of a swiftly moving automobile driven by her son, Bernard, Mrs. George Kingsley, Picton, escaped with a slight cut on the left bridge while on a trip to Toronto recently.

Mrs. Kingsley, who was riding in the rear seat of the car, opened the door to relieve a rug that had became wedged there. The door opened with such force that Mrs. Kingsley was catapulted out of the car into the ditch, striking her shoulder of the pavement into the ditch.

Mr. Kingsley was driving just below the speed limit of fifty miles per hour when the accident occurred. Mrs. Kingsley proceeded on her journey.

Stay home and like it if you wear a pretty housecoat. Warm and beautiful is a housecoat of moss green velvet with gold braid outlining the zipper closing and a half belt in back of wide gold kiddskin.

Scandinavian Countries Are Described by Former Resident

Harold Eccles of Toronto Speaks at Women's Canadian Club

SLIDES SHOWN

The fascination that Scandinavian countries hold for the European visitor were brought vividly before an interested audience of members of the Women's Canadian Club at a meeting in the Christ Church parish hall last evening, when the guest speaker was Mr. Harold Eccles, of Toronto, Mr. Eccles, a former resident of the city, was given a warm welcome on behalf of the club by Mrs. G. C. Wright, President.

The beauties of scenery and architecture of Denmark, Sweden and Norway, the economic system of these countries and successfully by the people of the country and something of the habits and customs of the people described by the speaker. Titled slides shown in connection with the lecture added to the interest of the audience.

Although these countries are in the same latitude as Alaska, the Gulf Stream makes the climate ideal. Mr. Eccles, who conducts tourist parties to Europe each summer, took his hearers on an imaginary visit to Nordic land starting with the first of the being the Danish city of Copenhagen. The great halls, parks, the Tivoli Gardens, famous Rosenborg castle with its treasures of state and the crown jewels, the deep love of the Danish people for the arts, while the thoroughly modern but up to date architecture and commerce displayed the keen business and artistic spirit of the people which has guided the nation to prosperous times.

Ingeborg Castle

The Rosenberg castle contains among other priceless stones, the crown jewels of Denmark. It is built in a four fire feet square in the central room of the castle, the jewels are on display. Christiansborg castle for no sooner are the cases or the jewels of another coronation bundled than the box in which are the crown jewels are, disappears into the floor, to the top of which is finished in such a manner, that it is impossible to detect the floor and cannot be detected.

Although the Danish royal family does not end with adolescent and possess many noble traits. The Royal Danish Ballet have worked out a plan which enables those interested to establish a study of the economic question which has the country co-operative system of farming has been developed to a high degree of efficiency as only in Denmark, Sweden in Norway and Sweden. Unhampered by tariff barriers these countries have had time and means to develop one of the most successful business plans today. Farming is carried on according to right plan and standard which knows no better, for example, are keen rivals of the Danish in the matter of the British market and maintain their supremacy by keeping a consistent standard of excellence.

Co-operative people take full advantage of the Government's credit afforded by the coast and island forests. Co-operative banking is very popular with all classes. The Carl Bro Agricultural School and other training methods is known the world over and is attended by instructors and students from many countries each summer.

Food of Culture

Turning to Sweden, Mr. Eccles showed slides of the beautiful city of Stockholm with its wonderful buildings and parks. Stockholm, like Denmark, the people of Sweden are actively interested in various forms of culture. Thus the citizens support the opera and musical establishments in a manner which is the envy of other countries.

In this city some of the most advanced thinking in regard to city development. Apartment houses, in which about seventy per cent of the population resides are financed by the parts of the city built on a huge scale. Adequate playgrounds and centres are provided for the children in all the residential districts.

The greatest wonder of Stockholm is the City Hall. Twenty years of painstaking work produced this building which is acknowledged by artists and architects to be the finest example of modern architecture for the world. Golden Hall, which can be used by any group obtaining the municipal council's permission is covered brick, its tapestries and the frescoes, which line its wide corridors are works of unforgettable beauty.

Model Mining Town

Mr. Eccles told of the model mining town, where gold is mined within the Arctic circle, and of the Lapland people, a primitive race which wanders in the northernmost parts of the Scandinavian countries.

Sweden's mountains, he said, the visitor finds a rugged country, which, nevertheless makes a deep impression. Travelling is as adventure as the mountains, lakes and streams of Nordic and the unusual trails. It is here one finds authentic Viking relics preserved by the people as a link with their glorious past. The Kiruna iron mines, which gives one a glimpse of "Hell," because a railway station is so named. Mr. Eccles' lecture was most interesting and the sincere appreciation of the audience was ably expressed by Mrs. Wright at the conclusion of the address.

How Maid Is Treated In Family

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

MANY PARENTS of young children have difficulty in finding a good maid and when they do find her she may not stay long.

Although the presence of growing children in a home means more work for the maid, it is not the extra work itself that the average maid objects to. Rather it is the annoyance, indignities and humilities she must be subjected to because of the way the children sometimes treat her.

Often the younger children are left with her who is given no authority to discipline them. Sometimes she is left in charge of course. Frequently indeed, these children are not disciplined when the parents are at home. The tot may be allowed to muss up the maid's things in the kitchen, rule absolutely to her and treat her little better than a dog. Parents should be heeded about so much by them. It is simply delightful when they object to most. You and I would do so in their places.

Child's Character Suffers

But the most important person in this picture is the child. Rather it is the child and his moral character. How can he cultivate right ethical attitudes when he learns to be so inconsiderate of the needs of another individual? No doubt many a child grows into an intolerant selfish priggish person if ever there was one because he never admits because he had practice in these trials at home in relation to the maid.

It seems to me we owe it to the moral character of our children to set a good example ourselves in being considerate and courteous toward a persons who serve us especially in the home. Then we also owe it to these children to train them in right conduct and attitudes toward others and their human beings who minister to them and the rest of the family.

Some school principals have told me that often the maid has higher standards for the conduct of the children left in her care than the parents have. Sometimes there are many fine, conscientious, faithful parents who have maids. Some of them are blind in the matter of toward servants, and in the way their children are trained to treat these servants.

Fashion Flashes

By Alice Alden

Color goes out in the form of handsome travel and sports coats. A beauty is a fitted model in blue tweed barred in dark green and green, detail being supplied by using the dark green for sleeves of sweater. With a wide navy leather belt and fringed scarf pulled through blue leather loops are finishing touches.

Evening hats are on the increase. A beauty is an off-face model of fine blue felt caught with cobwebby blue lace painted in gilt.

Keep warm and look pretty at the same time in one of those handsome fur trimmed suits. A model in light cocoa brown woolen with notched collar and long sleeves of brown. Worn with a beige satin blouse.

Swing time is right when it comes to swinging fringe. A charming evening frock is made entirely of fringe. The high-waisted skirt using the fringe, which is shirred with the pink fringe is placed over a silver lame sheath.

Off down are the pillbox crowns that are so popular for afternoon wear. A nice little pillbox is of black velvet trimmed with a border of circles, half black, half gold, and a long veil draped in back.

A contrast in the color card is magenta, seen a lot in evening things. A reefer of magenta tweed is worn with a gray top coat of magenta jersey, and the accessories are deep wine.

Proper Make-up Enhances Blonde's Natural Charms

USE RIGHT POWDER SHADE

Alice Faye

Proper make-up enhances the beauty of blondes.

By Helen Follett

There are more kinds of blondes than you can "shake a stick at" (not that you'd want to do that). There are yellow heads of all descriptions—real blondes, brownish blondes, dark ones and drab ones.

Add the copper tops and the red ones and even then you won't get started on the list.

As there are degrees of color in the hair, so are there variations in the shades of complexions. That's why an ordinary blonde powder won't suit all types. The complexion must be matched carefully if the face is not to look floured. The tone should be slightly darker than the skin.

Rachelle powder with a bit of mauve added looks charming on the blonde who has brown eyes. It imparts a luminous, transparent quality to the skin.

Few blondes can use dark shades of rouge. They offer too great a contrast to the fair complexion. Nor should they play with carmine tints, which produce the doll-baby look. The happiest choice is a true red with a slight bluish cast.

The lipstick should match the natural coloring, or be slightly darker.

When the hair is oily and the water hard, making the shampoo a difficult job, melt the soap and add a pinch of borax to a cup of suds. If the rinsing is thorough, this small amount of borax will not make the hair brittle.

No rinsing can be successful unless it is done with spray or shower and a rousing strong current of water.

No woman is smart enough to disguise body odors by the use of perfumes. The only way she can fight them is to bathe daily, use a heavy flesh brush, then soap and elbow grease to remove dead skin scales and chemicals deposited on the skin by the sweat glands.

Every woman should use a deodorant in the arm pits and an astringent dusting powder over the body after the bath.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

He's Not Too Old For Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 24 years of age and have been going "steady" with a man fifteen years older for more than a year. He says he will be true to me, I believe, for he has been spending all this time doing things to please me and to make me happy. He wants to propose, I believe, but sometimes he's been saying that he is "old and set in his ways." He is always bringing up the question of his age, and asking me what I think about marriage when a man is so much older than the girl. I know only one case like mine and it was a very unhappy marriage.

I love this man very dearly but can't decide whether I should let him go and I love him, or just go on being friendly as always. Do you think it wise to marry one so much older? If not, please tell me how to help him along.

A Daily Reader

I cannot imagine why a man not yet 40 should be considered too old for a girl of 24, especially when they have been in love with each other. If you weren't in love, that would be another matter—it's not the difference in ages that matters or marriage, but difference in tastes, lack of compatibility, and failure to keep on hand reserves of mutual affection and respect. You can intimate delicately that you like older men, and here are my best wishes.

She Has Lost Her Faith in Men

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much for a certain girl of 28, with whom I have been going for about three months. I see her or her date her out about three times a week, but she doesn't seem to much enjoy our company. This is because a certain fellow with whom she had been going for two years broke off abruptly, and started taking out another girl, and she has lost her faith in men.

She says she doesn't believe anybody much any more, because they are all insincere. Can you tell me how I can make her know that I really love her, or how to change her idea of all men?

X.Y.Z.

It seems to me the girl is exaggerating her opinion of men for reasons of her own. Perhaps she wants pity—which as you know is supposed to inspire love. She must be making an exception in your case,

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Godparents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me some of the things expected of a godmother?

R.

The chief duty and privilege of a godmother or godfather is a spiritual one for the godparents act as sponsors for the child at the christening ceremony, and they act too as foster parents for the child throughout its life. Godparents look after the religious training of the child. They should be interested in its education and career. They remember the important events in the child's life, such as birthdays, graduations, and so forth. While being a godparent involves no financial responsibility, the responsibility being essentially a moral one, the ideal godparent always is willing to give advice, and, if ever it is needed, material help according to his or her ability.

As a "love of grace", the godparent gives a christening gift to the child. This may be the conventional gift of a silver cup, a silver food set, baby pins or gold or enamel, or a small (or large) sum of money or a bond to start a bank account in the child's name.

It is the godmother who holds the child during the christening ceremony. And it is she who gives the child's name to the clergyman.

And . . . wasn't it proper to pronounce the name distinctly, for the name the minister repeats is the child's legal name.

Sunday Night Supper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to invite the parents of my daughter's boy friend to supper on Sunday evening. How should such an invitation be worded?

Reader

May I tell you how delighted I am that you have the right taste about giving this invitation yourself? So many mother these days pass up or she wouldn't go out with you. If you permit she will probably reverse her judgment.

"Air" Tactics

Dear Miss Fairfax:

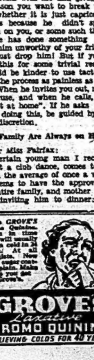
When a girl has gone out a few times with a certain young man and does not want to continue doing so, what would be a good way to "drop" him. And if you know the reason, what would be the proper way?

Jane

You should have been a little more frank with me and given me the reason you want to break with him; whether it's his manners, or perhaps because he didn't spend enough on you, or some such thing.

If he has done something to make him unworthy of your friendship, you owe it to him to tell him so. In doing this for some trivial reason, you would be wise to be tactful and make the process as painless as possible. When he invites you out, make it a point to say that you will not be "out at home". If he asks why you cannot, be guided by the same discretion.

The Family Are Always on Hand



Dear Miss Fairfax:

A certain young man I recently met at a dance, comes to see me on the average of once a week. He seems to have the approval of the entire family, and mother is always inviting him to dinner. But we never get a chance to be alone together. He helps mother with the dishes, and after dinner my dad takes him off to the living-room and the play checkers until it's time to go home.

The family all stay in the room till he goes, and I never get a word with him alone so I can give him a hint I love him, how can I manage? He's 36 and I am 21.

Doris

Mothers and dads often do the kind of thing you tell me. They probably want to have time to talk and play, but are a distinct obstacle to their daughter's prospects. Considering that you are 21 and he's 36, I think you might have a heart-to-heart talk with your mother and say that you'd like to have a little time alone with your boy friend. My best to you.

Education In Disease Important

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

(CLENDENING is that time of year when it is the vogue, for the layman, to write of death, in that vague, wishful manner in which he should be so healthy and so full of life and vigor, is forgotten. During the times of sensitive reaction, 30,000 young people die annually in the United States from tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is a disease which usually begins in childhood, but which takes different forms in early adult life and adolescence. It is easier to recognize in adolescence than it is in childhood. The incidence of tuberculosis in the period between 15 and 21 is the greatest at that between the ages of five and ten years. This has been proved by tuberculin tests.

Diet, clothing fads, exposure and physical exercises, which occur in the body at this age may have something to do with it, but it is principally the fact that the disease, which has begun in childhood is now manifesting itself. Most people of this age are under some kind of supervision in school, and the habit of routine examinations to pick up these cases and treat them early is becoming quite general and must receive general approval.

The hopeful thing about it is that treatment at this time usually means treatment of an early case, and the chances are fifty times better that permanent cure will be obtained than if treatment is begun later in life or later in the course of the disease.

Young Folk Given Instruction

Young people at this age should receive instruction in tuberculosis especially so that they may help themselves to bring their signs to the physician.

In a series of 100 cases, the first symptoms noted were as follows:

Fatigue, tiredness	25 per cent
Cough	25 per cent
Loss of weight	14 per cent
Loss of appetite	7 per cent
Hemorrhage	7 per cent
Severe cold	7 per cent
Hoarseness	6 per cent
Pleurisy	4 per cent
Night sweats	4 per cent
High pulse	3 per cent

It will be noted that most of these symptoms are insidious, and often do not bring the patient to the physician unless their significance is known. It is pain that usually makes people go to a doctor.

Fatigue is explained in many different ways, always to the satisfaction of the victim. As a matter of fact, fatigue at this age is almost always unnatural, and even extreme exertion should not bring it on.

Draped and Sculptured Lines Liked By Those Who Manipulate Fabrics

Graceful Scarf, Trailing Skirt Typical of More Formal Fashions

By LISERETTE

GIVE SOMEN women and men a few yards of material and they begin draping it in various graceful forms, catching it here and there; letting it flow freely, loop over an arm or a shoulder, or trail gracefully on the floor.

This season is a greater joy to these artistic dressmakers than for a number of years. The so-called sculptured line, the draped silhouette, and various other popular stylings are "check score" for them. One can hardly go wrong in whatever whimsies they may take upon the public, for there are many decidedly distinctive influences at work to spur the original thinker.

I am showing you the front and back views of one of the sculptured evening dresses shown by Kahnovy gowns. It is made of fine jersey, and has an empire line, a draped bust, and a long scarf that may be worn in as many ways as a graceful woman can devise. The best bet seems to be caught at centre back with an ornament, and the skirt has a graceful trailing panel.

Brassiere Top Favorite

The brassiere top is used in this dress, is a favorite this year, and is seen in many smart women gather in evening costume.

Fringe is another medium that is being used a good deal this year. It also has infinite possibilities for graceful styling effects, and is slenderizing in its effect.

The dinner dress is a winner this season—dress or costume. It is slim and graceful, with long molded lines and it may have a little jacket or some sort. Some have fur jackets or capes, others boleros that shine or are trimmed with gold or something else that is bright.

Black is the favorite, of course. It always is in this type of dress. It is practical for the woman who has only occasional need of an evening dress, as without the jacket—provided it has one—it is a formal.

Black crepe in a simple tailored line is very, very good. But it may be in lafette—if you're young, black velvet or satin. It lends itself to different embellishments and changes of accessories, so that one dress may seem like several. It may even have a light top—but all black is best, with colored or sparkling trimmings or accessories.

A festive air dominates the dresses intended for holiday wear, and later to be included in southern resort and cruise wardrobes. There are wide-skirted dresses in sheer, crisp fabrics, designed for dancing, and glitter constitutes an important part of the trimmings for dance and dinner dresses.

V - Shaped Neckline Best

Joan Marsh

V neckline becoming to her.

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty Operator" stimps in the past you've written about the effects of the lines and colors of frocks upon the figure. However, you have, as yet, made no mention of necklines. They are coming and full—you know, one of those moon faces. What sort of necklines would be most suited to me? And might I wear those wide, soft collars that are now so popular? MILDRED.

Necklines have almost the same effect upon the face and neck as necklaces. The principles involved are almost identical in both cases. The girl with the round, full face should avoid rounded necklines. They will only increase the width of her face, and the squatness of her neck.

For her, the oval or V-shaped necklines are more flattering. They will make her appear more longer and slenderer, and will help to reduce the apparent width of her face. The rounded necklines should be adopted by the thinner-faced damsel who wishes to make her face and neck appear fuller and more softly rounded.

Although those popular wide, fluffy collars do create an impression of daintiness and femininity, I would advise you to forego them. They will only exaggerate the broadness of your face. The narrow collars are just as smart, and you keep them always immaculate, and will add just as much chic to your ensemble as the wide ones.

"I've been following reducing instructions and have managed to lose the 24 excess pounds that were giving my figure such "not-so-girlish" lines. However, my abdomen is full a bit too well-padded. I feel that a few extra exercises to supplement the diet, would help to hasten the reduction of this part of my body. Can you prescribe any such exercises?" YANNIE.

The following exercises, practiced vigorously every day, will help to break up the fat tissues that have accumulated on your abdomen:

Stand erect, feet together, arms raised overhead. Bend back as far as you can, and then bend forward touching the floor with the tips of your fingers. Keep your knees stiff during this exercise.

Lie on your back on the floor, arms extended overhead. Bending at the waist, and keeping the knees stiff, rise forward and touch your toes with the tips of your fingers.

"I have very pretty, large eyes, but recently I've been having trouble with them. When I awaken in the morning I find a heavy crust formed on the eyelids. This is not only unpleasant in appearance, but makes it difficult for me to open my eyes. A friend says I have trachoma but I haven't any idea what this is. Can you tell me, and also advise a remedy? BETTY.

Your friend is probably right in her diagnosis, for the symptoms point quite clearly to trachoma. Trachoma is an inflammation of the mucous membrane of the eyes, and is commonly known as "granulated eyelids". You may also see a weak solution of boric acid to soak off the crusts that form on your eyelids each morning. But professional aid is really needed to correct this condition fully.

Seven Sins Are Listed As 'Deadly'

By VIRGINIA LEE

UNDER THE caption of "The Seven Deadly Sins", Mrs. Katherine Bleecker Meigs of New York, has given her idea of what they are. Mrs. Meigs is president of the New York League of Business and Professional Women, and the lecture was given under the auspices of the bureau of occupations of Hunter college.

"Here are her seven deadly sins". I am interested in seeing whether you agree with me as to their deadliness:

"1. Not riding in the office when the boss or his wife, customer or personal friend enters, or not rising when introduced to an older person at a social affair.

"2. Chewing gum in the office.

"3. Saying 'pleased to meet you', and using similar incorrect forms of speech.

"4. Signing a letter, 'Miss Alice Smith' or 'Mrs. John Jones'.

"5. Giving presents to the boss.

"6. Borrowing money from fellow employees.

"7. Making tactless personal remarks."

To my mind the second and seventh are the deadliest, and the second only so under certain circumstances. Of course I do not want to encourage gum chewing, that is, not chronic chewing. I recently ought to pay a bill in an office where, as I stood at the wicket, I was faced by a roomful of young people busily running typewriters and energetically chewing gum. All those moving mouths did affect me unpleasantly, and I caught myself thinking that it was made for over this office, the first thing I would do would be to issue an edict. No gum chewing during business hours."

But I've seen gum chewing that has been turned to customers it would not have mattered so much, although I maintain that gum chewing moving jaws are irritating.

I think it is better for either disrupting to business if the workers were required to rise when the boss, his wife or his best pal entered. Usually men leap to their feet when the boss' wife enters, but how is a mere working person to know when a man enters if it be the boss' best friend or his best enemy? And I am sure I would not like to go into an office where I felt I were disturbing everyone present. Would you?

Saying "Pleased to meet you" is incorrect, I suppose, but it would rather a person it met me that cordially than look me over from head to foot with a haughty air and how slightly—you know the manner. Makes you feel like a worm, or that your slip is showing.

Bringing apples to the boss—or to the teacher—is considered bad form now, as it is supposed to indicate a "hand-shaking", "teacher's pet" policy.

Borrowing money from fellow employees is bad if it grows to be a chronic practice—especially if you forget to repay the fellow employee. But who hasn't been "caught short" on pay day and needed lunch money, and asked for a hand-out from your office pal?

The only really deadly sin in the whole lot, to my way of thinking, is the last: "making tactless personal remarks". I'd put that at the head of the list and work on it. The "kind" may be indiscreet, but not deadly. Don't you agree with me?

DESERT BLOOM: Of course I think parents should tell children about the "facts of life". If sex is never made to seem indecent it will solve all life problems easier for the young folk, and they will not be so likely to get into trouble.

Slim Black Coat Is Tops With Well Dressed Woman

By Central Press

THE SLIM black coat is undoubtedly the favorite model of the season. It may be belted, or it may be minus that trim looking but always-to-be fastened appendage, but it is a smart looking wrap and definitely alluring to the not-so-slender person.

The model shown is from Creed, young English designer who has made a name and business in Paris. It is collared in red fox. The black felt hat is from Rose Valois, and the large bag and wristlet shoes are black.

Looking over the new silhouette for spring, as the winter one seems pretty well settled, we can't dresses that stay up the front. Shoulders may be broadened and squared, and in that case the body of the suit, dress or coat may be slim. Or the skirt of a suit may be narrow and the jacket straight in front flared behind.

Backs may be bloused in coat or dress. Boleros are seen everywhere. They are becoming to everyone so they will be no remaining at the bar at that edict.

Generally necklines are high, there seems little change in skirt lengths—at least they are no shorter—thank goodness!

Huge, wide sleeves also call for slim body silhouette. The bracelet length sleeve is favored.

SIMPLE BUT HEARTY IS THE WINTER MENU

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Beef Stew With Vegetables
Raw Vegetable Salad
Cherrio Pudding Coffee or tea

Nothing simpler than this menu, and it is high in food value, and good to eat. I recently gave you recipe for steamed cherrio pudding, I believe. This good pudding is baked.

Today's Recipes

CHERRIO PUDDING — Two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, two tablespoons shortening, one-half cup milk two cups cherries, one pint liquid, one cup sugar. Crumble shortening into dry ingredients, sifted together, until mixture is fine. Add milk. Pour into well greased baking dish, about 10 by 15 inches makes servings of attractive size. Cover with drained canned cherries, sprinkle sugar over them and then pour over all one pint of liquid consisting of cherry juice and boiling water. Bake 45 minutes in 350-degree oven. Serves eight to ten.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Cooking Wild Duck

Soak duck 24 hours in several solutions of salt water. Stuff with bread dressing, seasoned with poultry seasoning and chives. Bake in hot oven, basting constantly with lemon juice. This gives a delicious flavor.

Avoiding Mildew

That household nuisance—mildew—can be avoided. Damp articles are never placed in clothes hampers. Dry all clothing and household linen thoroughly. Don't let it collect in damp basements. Mark closets or other spots that are likely to be damp.

Noted Poems That Live On

THE PILGRIM
From "The Pilgrim's Progress"

Who would true valor see,
Let him come hither!
One here will constant be Come wind, come weather;
There's no discouragement
Shall make him once relent
His first-avowed intent,
To be a Pilgrim.

Whoso beset him round
With dismal stories,
Do but themselves confound;
His strength the more is.
No lion can him fright,
He'll with a giant fight;
But he will have a right
To be a Pilgrim.

Hobgoblin, nor foul fiend,
Can daunt his spirit;
He knows he at the end
Shall Life inherit:
Then, fancies, fly away;
He'll not fear what men say;
He'll labor, night and day,
To be a Pilgrim.

We Suggest—FOR JUNIOR—At Christmas

New automobiles and officer's uniform.

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

WHEN YOU go toy buying, better be careful and not get anything too frivolous for Junior, sister or baby. Educators are telling us that even the baby's rattle has a definite educational effect on the young mind. So watch your step.

Junior and his playmate from next door may think that these toy autos and the policeman's suit are only given them to play with. They stage a smashup just for fun, with the third boy in policeman's uniform taking names, addresses and particulars, etc. But these boys, unknown to themselves, are learning the procedure in case of a real accident—and let us hope, learning, too, how to avoid them.

There are many different types of wheeled playthings this year—more than ever, and perfectly adjusting even to the adults who buy them.

The autos are streamlined, you see, and they range in size from the shoe-box type for the wee tots to huge things just like the real article.

Children of 1937 want toys that will help them imitate grownup activities, says Dorothy Shay, says James L. Fry, managing director of the Toy Manufacturers of the United States. "Because of autos, radio and movies, children have broader experience today. More than ever before they are sticklers for toys which reproduce the very newest adult designs .... By increasing the purposefulness of playthings, their imaginative appeal and educational value has been greatly increased and, consequently, the market for toys has steadily broadened. This year many former "luxury" toys have been produced for the first time in low price ranges."

Allan Shields of the Maroons Scores Only Goal in Game To Defeat Chicago Hawks

Incidentally Goal Was First of Season For Defence-man

A LONE RUSH

By Victory Maroons Moved Ahead of Canadiens in Standing

Even when they're idle, Toronto Maple Leafs are making news. Their goal-getting bunch stand in high contrast to the scoring attempts of the rest of the National Hockey League.

Montreal Maroons and Chicago Black Hawks gave an example of what's going on elsewhere in the N.H.L. when Maroons edged out the Hawks 1-0 at Montreal last night on Allan Shields' goal. Though the Leafs play but once in the next two weeks they probably still will lead the league in goals at the end of the period. With 39, they have more than twice as many as any other club now.

Shields' counter, coming in the middle of a scoreless period, was his first of the season. Any players in the game with hopes of catching Toronto's Busher Jackson, Gordon Drillon and Harvey Jackson missed their chance to gain in the mild display.

LEW HAYMAN

ART MASSUCCI

Small Attendance.

Otherwise the contest was noteworthy through the fact the smallest attendance of the National League season was recorded. All but 4,000 Montreal fans stayed away, many of them preferring tomorrow's battle between Canadiens and Boston, leader of the American division.

Shields scored on a lone rush, letting fly just after crossing the blue line. As it rose, the puck struck the defender's ankle and slipped past Goalie Mike Karakas before he saw it.

Hershie Cain, moved from a wing position to centre, led Maroons' 2-1 victory over Detroit Sunday, pivoted the Bailey Northcott-Sweeny Thompson again. Pleased at his showing last night, Clancy said Cain would be left at centre.

The result broke Maroons' third-place tie with Canadiens and left the Habitants in the cellar. The Hawks are still where the last placed Detroit Red Wings in the American division.

BOB ISBISTER AND STIRLING TO MATCH PUNTS

Sarnia And Argos Meet in Semi-Finals on Saturday

SARNIA OUTWEIGHED

Argos Will Start Teams Averaging 189 and Imperials 184

By ELMER DUMAGE

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP) — For the first time in many a day, Sarnia Imperials will be outweighed when they come here Saturday and face Toronto Argonauts in the eastern football final. The weight difference doesn't amount to much but it favors Argos.

Two of the biggest punters in the business will match shots when 207-pound Bummer Stirling of the Imperials goes up against 200-pound Bob Isbister of the "Big Four" champions. It's just possible they'll wage a manoeuvring battle for control of the airways.

Not every Ontario Rugby punting supremacy has been virtually unchallenged. Frank Turville of the Hamilton Tigers could give the Bummer a battle two or three years ago and Ab Bee, the Balmy Beach boy, always made it hot for Stirling. Now Isbister is ready to make his bid.

The good old University of Toronto graduate led the Scullers to victory over Ottawa Rowingchers on Saturday with punts that travelled 45 and 50 yards. This is approximately the mean Stirling has been achieving for years. With a heavy, strong-necked ball, his kicking is matchless.

Argos Little Heavier.

But Argos have a kicker at least as big as Stirling and a startling lineup that averages 10 weight 189 pounds, compared with 184 for Art Massucci's O.R.F.U. champions.

Following are the probably lineups with weights as given out by the clubs:

Sarnia—Flying wing, Roach (235); Halves, Bennett (140), Stirling (207), Geary (162); quarter, Hayes (145); snap, Starr (177); Insides, F. Butler (175), Paterson (200); middles Cawman (230), Sarnia (215); outsides, Norris (174), Vahorne (165); subs, Pierce (200), France (188), Wickware (175), Moore (196), Butler (166), Stevenson (183), Woodcock (180), Trepanier (158), Ewener (155), McWatters (145).

Argonauts — Flying wing, Morris (165); halves, West (170), Isbister (210), Storey (200); quarter, W. Stuart (164), Amy, Baxter (180); insides, Stanghton (200), Palmer (184); middles, Gault (230), Evans (186); outsides, Cutler (195), Rouge (165); subs, Vail (189), Young (194), Perrin (183), Sellers (177), Bowes (219), Deady (188), Edwards (182), Macpherson (185), Hall, Smith (184), Gairdner (186), Barber (173), Reid (180).

Argos and Imperials last met in a Canadian Rugby Union game in 1923 when Argos defeated the Canadian title at Sarnia 4-3. Tommy Birns, now of Montreal Indians, kicked a field goal during the contest on a frozen field.

Stanghton, Vail, Morris, Cutler, Palmer and Perrin are the Sculler survivors of that notable occasion. Bill Bell-Irving, Jack Hamilton, Hayes, Butler, Paterson, Parsons and Stevenson.

Sub-Committee of O. H. A. To Decide Eligibility

The eligibility of Napanee hockey players playing with either Belleville or Kingston, in the Ontario Hockey Association this coming season, will be determined by the sub-committee of that organization. It was announced following the recent groupings of the various clubs throughout the province.

The status of the Napanee hockey players Fred Bentley and Kent Murphy, who played for the Belleville Redmen last season and of Roy Wilson, who also resides in Napanee, are being questioned by the Kingston Frontenac Club, the officers of which claim the services of these players, Bentley and Wilson having performed in Kingston regalia some years ago.

Rule Quite Definite.

In passing the matter on to the sub-committee, however the O.H.A. pointed out that all players in the province must play with the nearest hockey town "BEACHED BY A WELL THRALLED BOAT" which should prove quite favorable to Belleville, as the old York Road from Marysville to Napanee is a well-travelled road a portion of which is paved today. This road makes Napanee two miles closer to Belleville than to Kingston and should settle the matter.

Other business conducted by the O.H.A. consisted of the following questions:

The following players were allowed to play with Chatham interscholastic "A" and "B" teams: Gregory Haggerdy, Renfrew; Peter Lismaki, Vegreville, Alta.; William John Hepburn, Saskatchewan; Oliver Wain, Gananoque.

Calgarets like Ont.

Application of the Niagara Falls club for the use of United States players could be brought in to play in Ontario teams. But use of Bishop, substitute player from British Columbia, was allowed.

Defaceman Connell of Riepeler will be permitted to play with Port Colborne senior. Two transfers were approved, Hugh Cassidy, from Durham to Galt, and Leonard Hamburger from Kitchener to Galt.

Application for the use of intermediate clubs were granted, Delhi to play in the "B" series at Simcoe and Kingston Cartiers to play in the "A" section.

BASEBALL MOGULS WAITING BREAKS

No Single Deal of Importance Made at Milwaukee

By PAUL MICKELSON

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 1 (AP)—Everything was ice cold from beer to weather to player deals today as baseball moguls stalled about lightly packed hotel lobbies waiting for bargains.

Except for a few players transferred to minor league clubs, not a single deal of importance with a revealed though rumors of sales and trades popped up every one of countless insidies. Many of the clubs said they hoped to accomplish a "big deal" momentarily but the general guess was it would take a week more of concentrating before they were forthcoming.

Out of yesterday's shopping tour, during which such names as Van Mungo, Dicky Medwick, Dennis Richmond and Hadley Cutt were mentioned, only one actual major league trade was made. Eddie Maddeal, reserve catcher of championship New York Giants, who was sold outright to Portland in the American Association, Giants, have also strengthen their Jersey City farm, also sold Joe Dwyer, Jersey City outfielder and pitcher Lou Fette to Cincinnati last season, to Little Rock.

New York Yankees also yielded a bit of roster shifting when they sold George Stumpf of their new Kansas City farm to Buffalo.

Most of the trading and selling that will occur before the mart moves to Chicago next week is expected to be made by the American leaguers, who have to worry about Yankees 154 games a year instead of just a world series. There was quite a deal afoot between Detroit Tigers, Chicago White Sox and the Cleveland Indians, but Connie Mack, St. Louis Browns holding a trump card in Cliff Bolton, Cleveland catcher and Detroit all were after him while Brown officials played a waiting game.

9 TEAMS COMPOSE NORTHERN LOOP

Trenton And Belleville to Have Squads in Trent Valley

Trenton, Dec. 1— (Special) — Trenton hockey followers will be seeing a new brand of hockey in this district, will be seeing the kind of hockey, that the Trent Valley League promises, the type of hockey that makes the pulse do the big apple and keeps one generally interested after a game. Providing the present plans work out satisfactorily, the Trent Valley League will be made up of nine teams this winter, representing as many centres. At a meeting in Madoc on Monday night league officers were elected for the coming season and Earl Fox of Stirling was chosen as president, Bert Bowerman of Tweed, secretary-treasurer of Madoc, vice president and A. Webb of Madoc, secretary. The executive committee consists of H. M. Moore, Trenton, "Duke" Smith of Belleville, Jack Campbell of Campbellford, A. Simpson of Tweed, J. Wills in the province, Niagara Falls and Port Colborne playoffs separately at their own discretion, the Cup will be awarded on a two game category. The T.A.H.A. winners will be awarded as senior "B" trophy and the lower group of Peterborough, Lindsay, Orillia, Campbellford and Stirling in the southern group and Madoc, Marmora, Deseronto, Tweed and Bancroft in the northern group. Peterborough will have a double schedule and the winner of the south will battle with the district winner of the north to represent the league pottery. Trenton and Belleville teams will be permitted to enter the Valley League under certain conditions. One is that neither Trenton or Belleville can ice an O.H.A. player and another is that a player in Belleville and Trenton can't carry more than 15 players on their line-ups through out the season. Cost of entering the league was set at $5 a team and $10 a player. The names and certificates of a team's players must be handed in with the entry fee it was decided.

The O.H.A. groupings handed by Fordham, were awarded, at down on Monday night should assure local hockey fans of some real- the second straight year, the Acgar ly good games. Leagh Eddie Thomas and the Belleville Redmen are most unhappy about the whole thing. "It was bad enough to raise our classification to intermediate "A" but then if we should be fortunate enough to win our group, we have to play-off with a senior "B" group winner, before meeting any other intermediate "A" group winners throughout the province, which is about the most ridiculous system I ever heard of," asked manager Thomas today. Taking into consideration that Belleville, Gananoque, R.M.C. and Kingston City are grouped in intermediate "A" loop No. 1, while Peterboro', K.O.A.F., Kingston Garrison and Queens are listed as senior "B" clubs in group No. 2, it does look rather odd that an intermediate "A" group minus should have to meet a senior group winner before winning the intermediate "A" title at that.

No doubt Gananoque and Kingston will strongly object to such a proposed play-off system, when the local intermediate group meets the Kingston in the near future, of course there are only a few senior "B" clubs in the province, Niagara Falls and Port Colborne playoff separately at their own discretion, but the Cup should be awarded on the same category. The T.A.H.A. winners will be awarded a senior "B" trophy and the lower group of Peterborough, Lindsay, Orillia, Campbellford and Stirling in the southern group and Madoc, Marmora, Deseronto, Tweed and Bancroft in the northern group. The Pittsburg Panthers' football team, unbeaten and tied only once by Fordham, were awarded, at the second straight year, the Acgar Lambert Memorial Trophy for the outstanding Eastern eleven in the U. S. A., yesterday. Thirty-one sports writers from the east gave the Panthers the trophy by a margin of four votes over Fordham. Pitt was the choice of 17, while 13 named Fordham and one Dartmouth. Incidentally it is understood the Panthers will not accept an invitation to compete in the annual Rose Bowl game at Los Angeles on New Year's Day even if invited this year. The Panthers were always popular on the west coast.

Getting back to the question of the Napanee hockey players, we are where the O.H.A. definitely stated each players must play with their nearest O.H.A. town "reached by a well travelled road." The old York Road is as well a travelled road as one can find in Eastern Ontario, sometimes more traffic being observed from No. 2 highway along the twenty road from Marysville to Napanee as the road is a fine improved 16 foot gravel road, much of which is actually paved today— and it's three miles shorter; no wonder now you like it.

The 30th annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues (minors) opens today in Milwaukee. On the eve of the meeting, Frank "Shag" Shaughnessy, of Montreal, was elected president of the International League for the next three years, despite threats by a group to take up residence in New York City, Buffalo and Rochester. Considerable trading of baseball talent is expected before the curtain rings down on the convention, which "Under Dan" Howley already in the saddle as manager of the Cubs, but not before it was a necessity.

Despite talk to the contrary, it is fairly certain that the International League will make a change in the rules on the convention, when Roy Stockton of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, will present a plan to abolish the "Sacrifice Hit" rule, vice-president of the Browns.

"After the Yankees had followed the Giants in their footsteps, there were reports that the American League was prepared to set as a unit in opposition to any change in the liveliness of the ball," reporter Stockton will say, according to DeWitt, the stories were merely propaganda.

"Naturally, the Yankees are satisfied with the ball and everything else connected with baseball. Why wouldn't be satisfied, to win by comfortable margins and clean up the lion's share of the receipts of the shortest possible time? But when the votes are cast at the December meeting, unless I am badly mistaken, and sadly misinformed, they will be only nine votes for the Yankees for League for the lively ball and against the liveliness of the ball."

Do you remember when Hamilton Tigers, fielding one of Eastern Canada's most powerful teams in years, punched out a 22-3 verdict over Sarnia Imperials for the Eastern Canadian Rugby championship at Toronto two years ago today. Later, Winnipeg took the Grey Cup West for the first time with a decisive 18-12 victory over the Beuglers.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—Scouts report from Milwaukee: "Big baseball men are there in droves, but not only apt to see Dizzy Dean and Van Mungo traded. But the Yanks are more than interested in John Vosmik of the Browns....Also, the Indians put Earl Averill on the block....Can't say about the rumor that Ducky Wucky Medwick is signed, sealed and all but delivered for the Giants, but Bill Terry is walking around looking like a guy who has just swallowed a nice, fat canary."

Charlie Dressen already is in a jam at Nashville....He gave out an interview saying the only way he ever would get another Major League managerial chance was to win the Southern Association pennant by 20 games....Report went wrong and he was quoted as saying that Nashville would win the pennant next year by 20....Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern Coach, is the banquet record....Says he has taken only three meals at home from the close of the football season to Christmas in three years.

So it was Phil Lepins who holds the National Hockey League record for fast scoring....We always thought that jerry-bird could outski us in with the best of the sharpshooters....Word comes from Milwaukee is that the Yanks are figuring on getting rid of Pat (Old Biddy) Malone....Say it ain't so, Joe McCarthy....Reason Pitt turned down all those "feers" bids is because most of the team are juniors and seniors and have had plenty of travelling.

California Indians were the most skilful of primitive people in the art of basket-making, says an anthropologist.

Criticism of Y. T. P. Results In Offer of Position in North

Deputy Minister J. F. Marsh Replies to Critic in Audience at the "Y"!

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

Sharp criticism of the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training Scheme was levelled at Deputy Minister of Labor, James F. Marsh, following his address to a number of representatives of labor, industrial and other organizations, members of the Y. M. C. A. by a member of the audience last night resulted in the offer by the Deputy Minister of a position for the critic's son who it was claimed is not under training in one of the projects sponsored by the Y. T. P.

"The program is not watertight, inasmuch as it offers no protection for the employer or the apprentice," charged the member of the audience following office of the speaker to answer any questions asked. "This question affects the directly as I am the father of a boy who is at present under training in one of the projects," continued the speaker.

"He has been away for three months in the north country, has lost that much time in his studies at the Collegiate Institute here, and will return tomorrow to what he left three months ago, unemployment. What guarantee has the employer that these apprentices will not leave him if offered more remunerative wages by a competitor, after he, the employer, has spent his time and money in training the youth?" he asked.

"There is no government guarantee behind this program. You can't get it and you know you can't," he charged.

Deputy Minister Marsh, rising to his feet told the speaker that all apprentices would be fairly indentured and all parties fully protected in the program. "We are doing our best to see that the youth and industrialist derive the fullest benefits from the project," he said.

"I would like to ask this gentleman," Mr. Marsh continued "what project his son is working with and where he is at the present time?"

"He is out with a group of twenty boys to train in forestry near Gilmour and Kaladar. Right now he is in the forest ranger's hut on the road between Millbridge and Barkcroft. He will be home tomorrow," came the reply.

Again the Deputy Minister arose. "When your boy comes home," he said, "send him to me, or to the local Employment Office, and if he likes his work in the north country after receiving this training I will see that he gets a position."

"What about the remainder of the class who are coming home with him. I do not want discrimination shown my son" declared the member of the audience.

"They will be looked after. That is one of the proposals of the program, but we cannot do this without the co-operation of all concerned. We must work together in harmony. There must be a conciliatory attitude taken and not an antagonistic one. If there is complete harmony among all concerned the program will go forward in success, I am sure," concluded Mr. Marsh.

Ameliasburgh Conservatives Hold Successful 'At Home'

250 Guests Enjoy Fine Social Evening at Quinte Inn Last Night

G. TUSTIN, M.P. SPEAKS

Pronounced by many of the two hundred and fifty people present as being one of the outstanding social affairs of the community this season, members and guests of the Ameliasburgh Conservative Association held the first of a series of "At Homes" at Quinte Inn last night.

Under the chairmanship of Earl Cronkrite, president of the association, a fine program of highly entertaining events catered to the amusement of the large crowd that filled the hall to capacity.

Starting off the highlight of the early part of the evening with several talks being in order the witness were ladies Mrs. Alex. Tickle, Mrs. John Garbutt; consolation, Mrs. Morton West; gentlemen Messrs Hugh Wesse and Harold Wannamaker; consolation, Ray Jamieson.

Following a delicious luncheon served at eleven o'clock by many brief address was delivered by brys and ladies of the association, G George Tustin M.P. Prince Edward Lennox, who congratulated the association on their progressiveness, which he said, augured well for the future. Later in the evening Mr. Tustin drew the ticket for the door prize which was won by Mrs. Keech.

After intermission, old-time and modern dancing was indulged in to the music of the Trenton Peacock orchestra of Wooler. Novelty dances featured this part of the entertainment, with a spot-dance prize being won by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kinner.

The committee of president Earl Cronkrock, Laurel Grover, Gerald Anderson, and the various poll chairmen, delighted with the outcome of their initial venture in the social realm announced that the "At Homes" would be a monthly affair, be the forerunner of many similar events to come. A fine sum of money representing the proceeds of the event will swell the coffers of the Association.

Interest in Night School Classes Reaches New High

Nine Hundred Adults Enrolled—Display Great Earnestness in Application to Studies—80 P. C. Intend to Take Second Term Course

"It has been a revelation to me and a grand success from the standpoint of the aim of the school and attendance," P. C. MacLaurin, principal of Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, told the Ontario Intelligencer today, commenting on the first term of the adult night classes which terminated last night. The second term will open on January 4th and will conclude on March 31st.

Evidence of the interest taken in the many subjects being taught is seen in the fact that over eighty percent of those attended for the first term signified their intention of returning and resuming their studies in the second term. "This is an unusually high percentage," Mr. MacLaurin stated, "usually a large number of students quit after studying for the first term."

"There is a real desire on the part of the adults of the city to secure further education along the lines that they are following," the principal continued, "and is proved in the fact that even yet we are being swamped with applications for enrolment. As a matter of fact, they are coming in so fast for the second term that it is a question of accommodation, and whether we will have room enough. As it stands the first week is the same as the first served."

During the first term, the school had an enrolment of over nine hundred adult students, practically constituting a record in this form of education. "I have never seen a greater number of adults seeking education, since I have been here," Mr. MacLaurin stated, "They are generally are between the ages of 21 and 35, and their behavior is marked with a feeling of sincerity and application to their studies that is greatly to be admired and praised.

"I knew there was a demand on the part of the general public for education along the lines we are pursuing," the principal said, "but I never dreamed the response would attain the proportions that it has done in the first term."

Has Fine Staff

Mr. MacLaurin eulogized the staff of night instructors at his disposal. "They have co-operated wonderfully well with me, and have shown a sincerity in the pursuance of their duties that equals that of the students in following their instruction. All members of the staff have given their best and I am greatly appreciative of this fine efforts they have expended. It is easily the best staff I have had in years and that includes the special teachers we have brought in to teach subjects not in the collegiate curriculum."

Self Improvement is Keynote

A casual survey of the many classes in the course of their studies bore out the principal's statement. What might be termed the educational cross-roads of the city is seen in the many walks of life that twice-weekly wend their way to the Collegiate Institute to devote two hours of studious labor to the course they are interested in. Youth stands side by side with the middle age, poring over various problems or listening intently to the voice of an instructor. Woodworking shop, welding and machine shops, auto-mechanic workshops, all held their quota of adult citizens seeking and learning either new or of a "refresher" nature, in a manner that bespoke utter sincerity. In the cooking, dressmaking and other phases of domestic life, middle-aged women, even the mothers of students taking various courses, bent over their studies in a manner that gave an observer the impression of a seminary. Other classes held their quota of knowledge-seeking citizens intent upon the work at hand and profiting by their very sincerity of purpose, and studious application to their work, the interest taken in their educational welfare by the members of the staff of the Collegiate Institute.

"I am sold on the theory that there is a place in this world for the practice of co-operation among individuals and among individuals and among nations," Arthur Capper.

JAMES DAWSON IS COMMITTED

Magistrate Butler Finds Prima Facie Case in Action

James Dawson, Deseronto, was committed for trial at the next criminal court of competent jurisdiction on a charge of making a false declaration in the matter of proof of loss, by stating he had no other insurance on a building recently destroyed by fire, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. for judgment yesterday.

His Worship heard the evidence submitted by the Crown in the matter last week, reserving judgment until yesterday. At the preliminary hearing Charles A. Payne, K.C., representing the accused man, informed the court he was not electing at that time, but would consider the evidence of the crown, submitted by R. O. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney and the Fire Marshals Department, under whose direction the charges were preferred against Mr. Dawson.

In the previous court, held last week, His Worship dismissed one charge of making a false declaration, but reserved judgment on a second count. It is alleged by the Crown, that Mr. Dawson held two insurance policies on one building, without the consent of the respective companies concerned. The building burned.

Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn today announced the Dawson trial would be held before a County Judge and jury in Belleville on December 7th. The jury panel was selected this morning," added Sheriff O'Flynn.

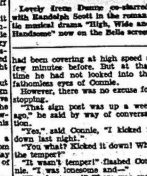
AT THE CROSS ROADS

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

Connie wasn't exactly bored, because she loved the country tremendously, but she felt that she would rather enjoy a little entertaining chat. She was swinging in her hammock, down by the front fence, watching the countless motors swishing past on route to various sunny resorts that forked off the main highway.

"If just one post were a lady, it would be most flattered at the hundreds of glances it gets," Connie mused as she saw practically every motorist slow down as the cross-road, cast a look at the white-armed directions and then take the right turning.

"I have a good notion to go out some dark night and kick that darn post down—then they will all have to stop and ask me questions!" she thought hopefully; "Somebody awfully nice might drift along this way—one never knows."



There was a wobbly support, a high wind and a good twist from Connie's tennis arm. The post lay useless to motorists in the centre of his triangle of grass.

By four o'clock the following day, which was Saturday, Connie was ready to drop. She hadn't supposed there were so many motorists in the world nor so many motorists with no road sense. At half-past four she telephoned to her brother to look up whoever the authorities were and demand that the sign post in front of the cottage be restored.

Then Connie went back to her hammock and was comfortably settled among an army of cushions when a young man peered over the fence, saw who was there, raised his cap swiftly and inquired the way to Oyster Bay.

Connie beamed. This was more the type of motorists she had hoped for—in fact, the very kind her dreams called for—well built, with crinkly smile and sunny hair. She told him slowly and with full detail the exact roads to follow.

The young man seemed most loath to take up the trail that he had been covering at high speed a few minutes before. But at that time he had not looked into the fathomless eyes of Connie.

Lovely Irene Dunne co-starred with Randolph Scott in the romantic-comedy drama, "Theodora Goes Wild and Handsome" now on the Belle screen

However, there was no excuse for stopping.

"That sign post was up a week ago," he said by way of conversation.

"Yes," said Connie, "I kicked it down last night."

"You kicked it down! Why the temper!"

"I wasn't temper!" flashed Connie, "I was lonesome and—"

"You lonesome!" There was such a world of unbelief in the young man's eyes that Connie blushed hotly and turned on her heel.

"I've as much right to be lonesome as you or anyone else!" she informed him, and then added a chilly "Good afternoon."

"Whew! Some temper," muttered the young man, and hopped into his roadster with a bit of temper all his own.

Connie pounced into the hammock, kicked all the cushions and wondered why she had been so catty. Also she wondered why her brother didn't know any men as nice as that one. Connie felt suddenly as if she would not be a tremendous effort on her part to love a man like that.

And Tommy Randall, driving his car at a fiendish speed, could see nothing on the road but Connie's eyes and wondered what particular crowd she roamed about with in New York. He could spend much time going about, he knew, seeking her. He had no right whatever to approach the cottage again.

However, the summer drifted past and the first few weeks of winter joined it. Tommy had about given up the quest and decided that he loved little Joyce Lane well enough to ask her to marry him. He wanted a cosy home and somebody waiting for him there with love in her eyes. He hated to think of Joyce Lane with her black hair standing in the sun with him. Tommy loved golden hair and always had hoped that the right girl would have it. Black hair didn't mean anything in the sunlight—it just stayed as it was without any dancing reds and golds.

They were at a big dance that night in December and Tommy decided to make his declarations to Joyce. He was horribly tired backing it. The girl by the gala probably had had a number of men ought even be married and have children by this time—others with many hair that glinted in the sun. Tommy sighed and turned to greet Bob Alexander, who had given him a mighty slap on the back.

"I say, Tom, you wanted for ages to introduce you to my kid sister but she's such a sight with tan and freckles—" He drew her forward from somewhere and afterwards wondered where "Connie, this is Tom Randall—I've told you enough about him to put you on your guard. Now get acquainted." He laughed and turned away.

"I wouldn't say we needed much prompting," said Tom as he took Connie's hand and held it.

"Not exactly," agreed Connie.

SLAPPED BABY AFTER IT CRIED STATEMENT GIVEN

Edmonston, Dec. 1 (CP)—The 22-year-old wife of Hector Dansery, charged with slapping their three-months-old baby girl to death last Friday, testified at the inquest yesterday Dansery's "nerves went to pieces" while he was working on the night-time core of an Edmonton packing plant.

Mrs. Lucienne Dansery said it was two until after her husband started working at the plant that she saw him slap the child. Dansery, aged 23, was charged with murder after his wife told police Friday he slapped the baby because her crying irritated him.

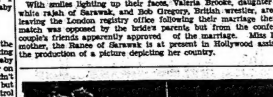
The coroner's jury returned a verdict attributing the infant's death to "cerebral hemorrhage caused by bruises on the face and head."

The statement quoted Dansery: "The baby kept on crying and would not take its bottle. I slapped it on both cheeks and on the top of the head, also on the buttocks.

"The baby would cry a lot and it seemed to get on my nerves. I felt that I could not stand the baby crying."

Working Hard At Plant.

"I was working pretty hard at the Swift Canadian Co., Ltd., packing plant at the time, and when the baby started to cry I used to slap her on both sides of the face. I didn't intend to use so to do so, but it seemed that I could not control myself. I knew I have a bad temper, but after slapping the baby it would keep quiet."



"There was an awful change in him—in his nerves—soon after he started the job there," Mrs. Dansery said. "He'd come home and sit down and shake like a leaf."

At about the same time, she said, his attitude "altered slightly" toward both the child and herself. "He wanted us to keep quiet. If I made a noise, he'd ask me to try to keep quiet. He would pick up the baby and kiss her, and at first he didn't hit her when she'd start crying.

"One time he did hit her, and then he took her and loved her and kissed her and said he was sorry he had done it. I remember that on the 22nd he came home and picked her up and she started to cry be-

With smiles lighting up their faces, Valeria Brooke, daughter of the white rajah of Sarawak, and Bob Gregory, British wrestler, are shown leaving the London registry office following their marriage there. The match was opposed by the bride's parents but from the confetti, the couple's friends apparently approved of the marriage. Miss Brooke's mother, the Ranee of Sarawak is at present in Hollywood assisting in the production of a picture depicting her country.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Cloistered"

Novelty seems a light term to use about so moving a production as "Cloistered," the new motion picture at the Capitol theatre Friday until Friday night, for it is truly a production of awesome, inspiring, spiritual beauty. Yet it must be classified as a novelty in screen fare, for the picture is totally unlike anything that has ever been shown before. In fact, opening the doors of the Cloistered Convent of the Good Shepherd, it discloses for the first time in any medium, the intimate life of the nuns of one of the greatest of all Roman Catholic orders. This convent alone houses 800 Sisters.

Your reviewer is not a Catholic, and so he approached "Cloistered" primarily with an air of curiosity. For, like you no doubt he has long wondered about the mysteries of the cause of Catholicism which the Church has veiled in deepest secrecy for more than two thousand years. But, if he came to wonder, he stayed to marvel: for no more inspiring drama has ever been unfolded on the screen. It is a foregone conclusion, of course, that every Catholic will see "Cloistered." It is our confirmed opinion that no one person can afford to miss it.

"Cloistered" tells the simple story of a girl who seeks admission to the Convent of the Good Shepherd and, as the picture unfolds in scenes of simple grandeur, it traces her daily life throughout the five and one-half years that elapse before she takes her perpetual vows as a Sister of the Good Shepherd. And, as the tale progresses, the film seems to have caught the very spirit of the Convent.

"Cloistered" is an authentic picture. There are no stagey scenes. Robert Alexander, the director, devoted two years to the making of the production, photographing his art, the actual scenes of daily activity that were necessary to tell his story. Much of the story is told by the dialogue of the nuns, whose sincerity is more forceful than the studied efforts of many a Hollywood star. There is a further explanatory recital by Reverend Father Mathew Kelly, a Long Island priest; and throughout the picture there is a background of the inspiring choral and organ music that plays so important a part in the life of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

"Love in a Bungalow"

Romance and laughter, those twins of entertainment responsible for many of the top-flight films that come out of Hollywood, are in full sway again at the Capitol Theatre during the run of Universal's gay comedy drama, "Love in a Bungalow." Opening today as a Bungalow, it changes to mid-night No. 2.

Beautiful blonde Nan Grey portrays the leading role of a model home and Kent Taylor is seen as a supersalesman out of a job. One morning when she comes to work, Nan finds Taylor comfortably reclining in the best bedroom of the model house. The young man is broke, but has a breezy charm and a disarming wit. Nan finds herself forgetting to be angry. In fact, she gets his breakfast. The two become fast friends, and one evening, just as a lark, they enter a radio contest. Five thousand dollars is to be given to the young married couple writing the best letter telling why they consider themselves the world's happiest husband and wife.

The fireworks begin when they are awarded first prize. Their letter had declared they were married and possessed a home and two children. The prize donor arrives in person, to discover how happy they are. The climax of the film revolves about the attempts of the "happy couple" to get themselves out of their predicament.

FURNITURE FOR A BRIDE

By RUDOLPH RICHARDSON

Michels "Telescope" Syndicate, WNU Service.

It was early one spring morning that May Belle started from her humble home in the hamlet of Sandy Cove to the antique shop at her side. For five years she had been decorating furniture to make couples' homes, while she herself lived in a room too tiny to be beautiful.

Today as she changed from jaw to throat car and a strong pull on the accelerator started, she was unusually happy. A little bride who was to start housekeeping in a wee apartment had commissioned May Belle to find her her quaint odds and ends of furniture and decorate them according to May Belle's delightfully taste. It was therefore necessary to seek the bargains far from the beaten path. Down a back lot by May Belle walked and into an abandoned stable where instead of horses, one found musty piles of furniture.

"Mr. Cobblestone?" May Belle called, "I want to talk to you about the quaint bed and table if you aren't holding up today."

There was a flurry from behind the plunder that did not have the quaint tones that marked Mr. Cobblestone's mirth, and a pleased face peeped around a battered highboy.

"He's asking nothing less than a pound of flesh for one of his junk," the stranger ventured.

At once the bargaining began and overlasted in May Belle's ordering the quaint old bed and table sent to her studio.

"I'll think more about the sideboard" the other purchaser said to the dealer, and followed May Belle into the alley.

"I it's sideboards you're interested in," May Belle suggested, "I think you'll find better examples at mine. I'm going there now to look for the hall set I'm to decorate for my bride."

"So your profession is making the very beautiful. Miss Just selling real estate and filling in the furniture gap in a wonderful old home my grandmother left me three miles from here."

May Belle clapped her hands in excitement. "Oh, can't I help you?" she asked and for her life when she realizes that she really didn't know the man at her side.

"Heaven knows I need all the help I can get" he replied and then seeming to sense May Belle's approbation he handed her his business card, witnessing the syllable connection that was his.

"Howard Amblet" read the girl at his waiting car and drove out where the air smelled of the growing tidings of spring. The way to the house led through a grove of timber to a garden where box hedges and old-fashioned flowers had been reared for by someone who loved them. The house was perfect Nineteenth colonial, with its peaked roof, its gables, and its tiny porch.

"I was wondering," Howard Amblet began, when the tour of inspection was completed, "if I could get you to dinner and in fact what you should be in all the books. I'm so tired by free here, and I want to be take me after working hours to the restaurants on the road."

After that May Belle was happier than she had ever been.

Then one day everything went wrong. Someone else bought the four-poster May Belle had spotted at one of the shops and had many hours waiting for the chance to tell Howard about—the bed that exactly suited the big south room. Next the little bride came into the studio. Her husband-to-be had been transferred to the Californian territory, and freight would be so enormous it couldn't May Belle find the lovely things to someone else? Of course, May Belle could and would, but as she went on painting the colonial wreath on the back of the little carved rocker, she threw that a the joy in the work had gone.

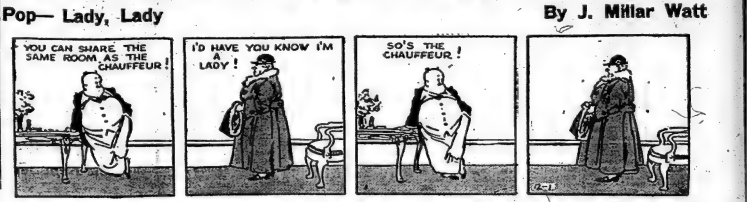
Late that afternoon Howard came to take her to the old house. As he led her toward the rustic seat he said, "I'm simply mad about you—you're so pretty, and I'm afraid you aren't selling that beautiful stuff you've been decorating. It all suits the little bedroom. In the all and the upstairs sitting-room."

"Did it was meant for a bride," May Belle echoed.

Howard Amblet was bending close to her, for his face looked as she had not seen before. "But, then she had not seen before. "But, May Belle," he said gently, "you're not free. I'm here hoping to bring a bride into grandmother's house. Will you come, May Belle?"

But the little girl her eyes to Howard's, the sloping again in her heart.

DINNER BY PLANE



John Weston, a 30-year-old art student, ate a Thanksgiving dinner in New York City eating his mother had sent piping hot from her kitchen in Minnesota.

The dinner, stuffed chicken, cranberry sauce and all the trimmings, and three pumpkin pies cost him $7 in air express charges. It arrived in a special container which had been flown away from home on Thanksgiving, yearned for his mother's pies, so she arose at 5 a. m. and by 7 the dinner had been cooked, put in the special container, sent by express to Cedar Rapids, and delivered at the airport. John was waiting at the Newark, N.J. field when the plane came.

Tweed—Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gerald have removed to Stirling where the former has entered the employ of Mr. Tom Cranston who recently opened a butcher shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O'Keefe of St. Catharines, Ontario, are spending an ocean voyage to the West Indies and South America.

Miss Frank Mayer of Smithfield, is making favourable progress in Belleville General Hospital, following a recent operation.

Mrs. Benny Conneyes still remains confined to bed at her home on Victoria street.

Mrs. H. B. Ballard has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ballard in Montreal during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Myles and children, Jean, Peter and Ruth, of Toronto.

Mr. Arthur McMichel and Bruce have recently arrived from Brandon, Sask., to spend the winter in Tweed for the winter. Mr. McMichel has resided in Brandon for a number of years. During the past nine years crops have been a failure there owing to drought.

Mr. Cyril J. Cassidy, a Stoco boy, and the official photographer for the Skyline Express, Ltd., recently took a number of aerial photographs which appeared in the Toronto Daily Star. Before entering his present employment Mr. Cassidy was in the employ of the Robt. Simpson Co.

St. Edmund's R. C. Church, Stoco was the scene of a quiet wedding on Tuesday when Miss Agnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Goulah, Stoco, was united in marriage to Harry Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moore, Smithfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Meagher in the presence of relatives. Miss Mildred Goulah, sister of the bride, and Miller Moore, brother of the groom were the attendants. A reception was held in Stoco Parish Hall on Tuesday evening during which many useful gifts were presented to the young couple. After a brief honeymoon the happy pair have taken up their residence in Smithfield.

Walter Kitchen, member of Canada's Olympic team, who was a visitor in Tweed a few days ago. He has retired from hockey where he established a record as one of Canada's outstanding players and has gone into boxing.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church observed its forty-sixth anniversary on Sunday, November 28th. Service was held at seven o'clock in the evening. The guest speaker was Rev. Dr. Duggan of St. Andrew's Church, Trenton. Dr. Duggan has recently came from the western part of the coast where he was one of the foremost preachers in his section of the country.

The choir of St. Peter's Church, Madoc, provided the music. Mrs. Macdonald, A. T. C. M., was the organist and choir leader, presided at the organ. The choir sang the anthem "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me." Mrs. Hawthorne, Jr., sang "My Master Knows."

The heavy electrical storm at 4 o'clock Sunday morning put the electrical downpour of rain, kept the attendance down and delayed the arrival of Dr. Duggan.

The high wind on Sunday evening played havoc with the Hydro service. During the Anniversary service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church the lights went out several times.

Nearly an inch of rain fell during the storm in the early morning hours of Sunday. The phone was littered with limbs and broken branches.

Mr. Peter passed away at his home early on Monday morning after an illness of several months. He is survived by his widow and four small children, Allan, Peter, Lois and Jack. The sympathy of the community is extended to them in their sad bereavement.

Marmora

Marmora—Mr. and Mrs. T. McCarey of Madoc visited the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Phillips on Sunday.

St. Paul's A.Y.P.A. met in the Rectory on Monday evening for the regular meeting, the president, Joyce Brooks, in the chair. Rev. Dean A. R. Caldwell opened the meeting with prayer. Evelyn Brooks followed with an interesting talk on his visit to England where he attended the Coronation ceremonies and attended some English Boys' Schools. The varied features of his talk were followed closely by his hearers. Plans were completed and made for the attendance of branch members at the service opening in Belleville on Wednesday evening upon the invitation of the Christ Church A. Y. P. A. of that city. The branch decided to make a grant of ten dollars to the missionary apportionment of the province.

Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion met in the Legion Room on Monday evening with the president Comrade T. Dounis in the chair. It was decided to hold an Amateur Night in the Town Hall, the proceeds to be for the Christmas Cheer Fund. Initial work for the Christmas Cheer Fund work were drawn up. A committee was appointed to meet the Village and Township Councils with a view to getting their co-operation for a Santa Claus parade as held two years ago.

Stirling

Stirling—The church parlours of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, were very tastefully decorated on Tuesday when the Young People's Society were hosts to a similar number of Mr. and Mrs. Hall's pastoral charge of West Hunting-don. The various features of his pastor, Mr. Roy Joby, president of the Young People's Society, presided over a brief devotional period the remaining portion of the program was directed by the visiting Society. A short song service followed with the Scripture lesson which was read by Mrs. John McIlroy and prayer by Rev. Mr. Hall. Pianist Miss Milton Shaw then offered a pleasing soprano solo accompanied on the piano by Mr. Hall. The speaker of the evening was Miss Hilda Haverty who delivered a splendid paper on the "Friendliness of Jesus". The manner in which this interesting study was conducted revealed careful preparation of the subject by the speaker. This part of the service closed with the use of another hymn and prayer by Mrs. Wm. Shaw.

Social Period Enjoyed

The social period which followed under the direction of Mrs. John Wallace and Rev. Kofford was very much enjoyed by all. New and novel games were introduced to the gathering, many of them for the first time and a keen feeling of fellowship prevailed throughout the entire evening. At the conclusion of the program the members of the Stirling group served luncheon. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the visiting organization for the excellent program provided. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Ontario Appeal Court To Review Decision

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—Ontario Court of Appeal will review a decision of Mr. Justice R. O. Fisher that Clarence Decker, of Lake Consecon, former National League hockey player, is not entitled to compensation, it was announced today.

Mr. Justice Fisher decided that Decker had a binding by Judge Ian Macdonnell that Conacher had been duly elected in the Trenton-Northumberland-Durham riding on October 4, but reduced his majority from 37 to 32.

Russell Nesbitt, on whose behalf the decision was reviewed, was defeated Toronto Brucedale constituency as a Conservative candidate with Conacher, Liberal candidate.

POLICE RECOVER LOOT

Toronto, Nov. 30—(CP)—Police have recovered $6,000 in stolen goods in suburban Scarboro. Chief Hedley Padgett of the town force said today. An organized gang of youths is blamed for a series of thefts in the Lakeshore District and arrests are expected in a few days, he said.

"This gang apparently breaks into homes and stores the loot in a warehouse for a period," said Chief Padgett. "When they have a large quantity I understand it is disposed of in Welland."

THREE CHARGES AGAINST MILLS

One Charge Alleges Conspiracy With Fred Armitage

London, Ont., Nov. 30—(CP)—Three charges, involving the same $15,000 worth of bonds, were read in city police court today to Charles W. Mills, 64, Hamilton real estate dealer and alleged "big money" man, said to be arrested in the probe by the Canada Security Frauds Commission.

One of the charges alleges conspiracy with Frederick Armitage first read to be charged in the series of arrests during recent weeks. Mills was charged with theft of $3,500 in bonds from two New Jersey banks, obtained by the same bonds by false pretenses with intent to defraud, and conspiring to defraud the women.

Magistrate Donald Menzies set bail at $5,000. Mills told the court he could get bondsmen from Hamilton who would provide security for $15,000. A telephone call was made to Hamilton, asking them to appear to post bail.

While Mills was not given an opportunity to plead to the charges, he started to disclaim guilt before Magistrate Menzies interrupted.

Magicians Want Acts Kept Secret

New York, Nov. 30—(AP)—Magicians from both sides of the Atlantic today took steps to keep the public from finding out how they pull rabbits out of silk hats and perform other astonishing feats.

Horace Goldwin, inventor of an illusion for sawing a woman in two, joined the J. R. Reynolds Tobacco Company in Federal Court in a $50,000, libel suit charged the company exposed his trick in a cigarette advertisement.

On the West Coast, Ole Californian section of the Society of American Magicians formally urged the ousting of Julien J. Proskauer, President of the Society's New York assembly, after he had allegedly exposed secrets for commercial purposes.

Proskauer recently published a book entitled "Illustrated Magic" to perform a series of parlor tricks.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and Puds Simkins and Shorty Bolton motored down to Hollywood what to do with Scatcher, being as how he was convicted of such an strange front doors to get himself a home, and I said, Well hay, how do ya know it's a home? From a famous pedigree and suite turn out to be a girls dormitory. Himself? Sloky zombies all we have to do is sneak up and stealthy on him like sleepy looking and enter him in a dog show and the judges will just take and say, Look at that cur! He's obbous all over him and he'll be the winner. Ma said, Is that a dog show? Puds said, Meanhile Mr. Bolton was a bum idea, with it proberly was, and Shorty Judge Crabtree and I, Ma and Puds said, How about making a famous trick dog out of him? Shorty only knew enuff enough to have the idea to scratch on front doors must be smart enough to bark at the right time every day, and that would make 7 tricks a week. Ma said, But how do ya know 14 tricks or at least 13 in case he's sick him? Every other day on Sundays, and we could rent him out to circuses and moving pictures, he said.

"And he stuck out one leg, saying, Shake Scratcher.

With Scratcher didn't, just barking himself, and Shorty said, Maybe nobody ever taught him the English language in the first place. I guest maybe that's a dum trick too.

And we told him to do a few more tricks just for luck, such as sitting up and standing on his hind legs and shaking hands, but all he did was wag his tale like somebody trying to make their good nature to make up for having to show their ignorance.

AT THE BELLE

"Right Wide and Handsome"

The Sounding of "High, Wide and Handsome" at the Belle today for three days the latest contribution of America's musical drama to Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II, one of the most prolific and successful writer-composer combinations of the modern screen.

The Kern-Hammerstein record is plentifully studded with hits like "Wild Flower", "Rose Marie", "Sunny", "Show Boat", "The Siwash Song" and "New Moon" all of which ran for more than a year on Broadway; "Rose Marie", which has been a favorite ever since then, ran for two years in London and on a record in Paris, with a packed run for five years.

Together they have written a "Melody" score in each of their film. The songs include the title song "High, Wide and Handsome", "Folks Who Live on the Hill", "Can I Forget You?", "Allegheny Al", and "The Things I Want".

Kern and Hammerstein point out that the score of "High Wide and Handsome" is the first courtship screen melody.

Hammerstein has blended two distinct elements in his screen play for "High, Wide and Handsome". The story is concerned mainly with the romance of Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott and a colorful romantic setting which is the background for a gay little song-fest every eleven. The story of a hard-boiled Scott and a gay little song-bird Dunne and a gay little song-fest of a carnival show (Irene Dunne) is one of the most touching one Hammerstein has written. Oscar Hammerstein has the reputation of being international in his appeal. For five years the Drury Lane Theatre in London played nothing but Hammerstein shows. His plays have made him famous in France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, South Africa, and Australia. At one time there were nineteen companies producing his shows simultaneously in different parts of the world.

Some of the songs for which Hammerstein is known seem destined for generations of popularity, "Love Came Back", "Make Love Alone" "Indian Love Call", "When I Grow Too Old to Dream" seem to be the biggest of the big-time. The latter tune is one of the biggest hits of recent years.

The cast of almost 5,000 which brings Hammerstein's newest show to the screen includes Dorothy Lamour, Raymond Walburn, Elisabeth Risdon, Charles Bickford, Ben Blue, Akim Tamiroff, William Frawley and Hale Hamilton. Norman Taurog, who won the New York Critics' award for the best picture of 1936, was the director.

"March of Time" arrives . . . something entirely new is revealed in "The March of Time", the editors of Life and Time have made this thrilling feature revealing twenty minutes of sheer drama, including among other interesting events "War in China", what the undeclared war in China is all about. "March of Time" tells the complete story from the excited beginning to the tragic present, other unusually interesting events are included in this twenty minute twenty minute feature which is announced for exhibition on the same program, and is to be a new feature on the Belle screen, relaxing once a month.

COULD HARDLY CLOSE HANDS

Had Rheumatism and Neuritis

"I suffered severely from Rheumatism and Neuritis," writes Mr. Wm. T. Lloyd of Tweed. "I could hardly walk for weeks at time and my hands would be so stiff I could hardly close them. After taking Fruit-a-tives four days I was greatly relieved. I have taken in all seven boxes and am now entirely free from pain and stiffness in my joints and can walk and ride as well as ever. I have also used other medicines but they did not give me one bit of relief like Fruit-a-tives. They are worth their weight in gold and I... Yes, without reservation, I recommend Fruit-a-tives."

SO IT HAPPENED THAT ONCE UPON A TIME—OF ALL GOOD DAYS IN THE YEAR, ON CHRISTMAS EVE—OLD SCROOGE SAT BUSY IN HIS COUNTING HOUSE

IT WAS COLD, BLEAK, BITING WEATHER: FOGGY WITHAL: AND THE COLD BREAK THE PEOPLE IN THE COURT OUTSIDE GO WHEEZING UP AND DOWN, STAMPING THEIR FEET UPON THE PAVEMENT TO KEEP THEM WARM.

THE CITY CLOCKS HAD ONLY JUST GONE THREE, BUT IT WAS QUITE DARK ALREADY: IT HAD NOT BEEN LIGHT ALL DAY; AND CANDLES WERE FLARING IN THE WINDOWS OF THE NEIGHBORING OFFICES.

THE DOOR OF SCROOGE'S COUNTING-HOUSE WAS OPEN THAT HE MIGHT KEEP AN EYE UPON HIS CLERK, WHO IN A DISMAL LITTLE CELL BEYOND, WAS COPYING LETTERS. SCROOGE HAD A VERY SMALL FIRE, BUT HIS CLERK'S ... LOOKED LIKE ONE COAL.

Hurricane House
by BRUCE HENRY

She wanted to tell him what she had been thinking these last hours that he had made her see herself as she was and that for the first time in her life she yearned for something more substantial and more satisfying. She wanted to say to him, "I'd like to strike out on my own, Benny. Get a job and live in a hall room, and make my life over, make it real and simple and honest." She wanted to say that and more and was wondering how to begin when Chet said, David came back into the room.

David wanted to be off at once. She kissed him good-bye, shook hands with Benny. He would be back; she felt sure of it. As the door closed, she turned back to Chet.

"Canary feathers are all over your chin," she smiled. "You're interfered mousey!"

"Best thing," Chet said agreeably. "This is going to be the biggest christmas Eve and the happiest. Christmas generally we've had in years."

Sandra put her arms around Chet. "I don't know what I'd do if I do hope it pans out, Chet."

"It's all settled. Or will be Christmas Eve." He held out an open palm and wrote across it with an imaginary pen: You" He writes my name on the dotted line, this hand—and I'm rich—and you're over."

There was something immature and very unlike Chet in his unbashfulness, something just a little pathetic. Last night he had seemed like an old man, beaten and without hope. And now came this promise of something he wanted and a dozen years dropped from his head.

"I'm glad—" Sandra told him—"glad Glad for you, darling."

He had given no clue to his good fortune, but now he said, "Having money is the most marvelous feeling in the world, child. Other material satisfaction can match it."

She had known from the first it had to do with money, but only this moment the significance of something he had said a minute ago came to her..... "Just write my name on the dotted line—and our troubles are over." ....He was borrowing money, then. Assuming a new obligation—repaying one of his creditors by creating another. Sandra's heart sank. Then they lived, hazardously, paying constantly because their lives completely circumscribed by money.

"I won't go on like this!" Sandra thought suddenly, "I'll get out and find a job and work out my own salvation."

But she would never have found the courage to do it if she hadn't learned the source of Chet's borrowing astounding condition under which it was to be made.

DETAILMENT

Not until Chet came home to dinner Christmas Eve was Sandra able to shake off the feeling of impending disaster that had clung to her all day. She had never seen Chet so elated, so buoyant with expectancy. Remembering the dependency of the past weeks, she told herself he would not be able to take the blow if anything went wrong with his plans.

He had come home for lunch and brought David along. He was very talkative. Giving Sandra no time to make his own explanation, he told them Benny Macallister had gone to Alaska on a broadcasting assignment and would not be back for three days. David's trial was set for a week from today. Ancell knew the judge and there was every confidence to worry about. Ancell was all right—very difficult to understand sometimes, but a substantial sort. Yes, Ancell was all right, the kind of friend who did you a favor and wanted nothing said about it.

Luncheon over, David told Enid good-bye, gave Sandra a knowing wink and went off, the Sayat Chet Sandra had not seen in years.

Sandra was in the library a little after four o'clock when she heard Enid talking on the phone in the living room. She paused and could hear her mother's voice distinctly. There was a strange shocked note in the usual voice at first, a note of incredulity that presently gave way to one of resignation, grim, painful resignation.

And then Chet came home, no longer buoyant, no longer boyishly animated, no longer jubilant, but somehow sure of himself. It was immediately apparent that he had succeeded in his purpose, equally apparent that something had occurred to deprive him of the full satisfaction he had expected.

Sandra observed that Enid was avoiding her husband's eyes and when after dinner Enid went to her room, Sandra followed her there.

She found her mother lying across the bed, an arm across her face, and sat on the bed and pulled her mother's arm away and was full that she was crying.

"Enid—what is it?—"

Her mother shook her head and shut her eyes tight to stop the tears.

"Listen, darling. I'm not a child any longer and I've a right to know. I heard you talking to Chet on the phone this afternoon—couldn't help it—and I know everything isn't as it should be. Chet's borrowed money, probably a large amount. I've guessed that much."

After a time Enid sat up and dried her eyes. She looked at her daughter and saw in her composed features a quiet strength which she Enid, had never had. It was not merely poise, but a stability of character clearly portrayed in her small face. She loved her father and she suspected something had happened to tear his little triumph—but she was not afraid. There was a se—fear in her; nor was there—be, ever. And—though a moment before Enid had had no intention of telling Sandra the truth; she suddenly changed her mind.

"Your father borrowed the money from Anthony Ancell, Sandra. As you've guessed, a large amount."

"But why from Ancell?" Sandra asked, trying to conceal her increasing uneasiness. "Why not from a bank?"

"You can't borrow from a bank on your signature, Sandra. And your father hadn't anything she to offer. Trying to duplicate Anthony's success in speculation, he lost all we own and possibly more than we own."

"But why—" Sandra asked again —"from Ancell? Mr. Eddy—"

"Anthony refused to lend him the money," Enid said quietly, "and Mr. Eddy did not."

Sandra sat down slowly. "I see." Understanding not only that Ancell had offered to lend her father money but why he had done it. "And having offered to lend him the money to them thought up typically filthy trick to make it difficult for Chet to take it."

It was a question, though there was no inquiry in her voice, and Enid said:

"Anthony imposed a condition before Father disliked. And because she knew she must presently announce it, Sandra made question, anyway, she told Sandra in a little rush of words: "Your father must either repay Anthony's loan in six months or—or he must give me a divorce."

Sandra thought, "This isn't Enid, this isn't my own mother talking like this." And she thought Enid was not looking at her, she was sitting there beside her, a little pale but terribly composed, her very calm substantiating the all but incredible thing that had been revealed.

And suddenly it all seemed very clear to Sandra. Ever since they have left them long ago and gone to Ancell except for the fact that she had no legal grounds; and Chet had refused to give her a divorce, and now she and Ancell had hit upon this ingenuous plan to force Chet's hand. The night Chet had come home in such high spirits was the night Enid had gone to Ancell's then, "Anthony's Horse Marbles," she had said. It was all very clear and yet it didn't make sense and Sandra told herself, "I don't feel really upset about this. I don't feel very much of anything because its too impossible to believe. And then as she rose from the bed, she heard Enid saying:

"You shouldn't be so ready to judge people, Sandra. You're young and inexperienced and are likely to be unfair."

Sandra said in a dry voice, "I'm not judging you, Enid."

"I was thinking of your father," Enid said. "He had to make a choice."

"If she had been blaming Chet! As if she could ever again blame Chet when she knew her mother had turned against him! "Oh, Chet—darling!" Abruptly Sandra turned around her way across the room and along the hall to her own bedroom. For a long while she stood with her back to the door, her wet face crushed in her hands, her body shaken by deep, spasmodic sobs.

But at last she was quiet and after a time she moved across the room and began to open the drawers of the French chest....

It was the day before the trial that David called Benny and found him in. "Why don't you stay put sometime?" David asked. "I've been calling three times today since you came back from Atlanta. Not letting a man have a minute's rest."

Benny laughed. They had been keeping him pretty much on the jump, he said. "How's for having lunch with me in about twenty minutes? I'll call for you. Hold on! Forty-Second street where we held that party for Ann, O.K.?"

Benny was already seated at a table when David arrived. His rose glittered, and he shook hands cordially; but Benny detected something in David's eye he didn't like. When they were seated, he said:

"Not getting jumpy, are you, fella?"

David looked up. "About the trial?.... Not a bit. They can't send me to the chair."

"That's the spirit." He searched David's face. "On the other hand —"

"I know," David said quickly. "They've been plenty unpleasant and they may be. I'm set to take anything they want to hand out, Benny."

Benny nodded his complete approval. "He's a swell kid," he thought—"in spite of his Park Avenue bandicap." He said, sampling his concoction, "All right, that's the end of that—until today. What kind of a Christmas did you have?"

"Lousy," David said with feeling. "Sandra's not on us Christmas Eve."

"I don't get it." The spoon nearing Benny's lips sank slowly.

"Neither did Father or Mother. But I think I do. She was fed up with—well, things in general. There's a lot you wouldn't be interested in, Benny, but things have been in a sort of dumb misery."

"But where is she now—back at home?"

Snapped in their box at the races in Ascot, France, were the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. While the Duke absorbedly watches the horses round the far turn, through his binoculars, the Duchess sends her entry on silently. Plans for the couple to visit the United States have been planned for in the future, according to friends.

Miss Helen Wolcott Bedford, 26-year-old heiress to a $40,000,000 Standard oil fortune and one of America's best known amateur horsewomen, is shown at the (RIGHT) with a favorite horse shortly after her engagement to Arthur McCobbin (LEFT), was announced. McCobbin, former steeplechase jockey has been groom in charge of Miss Bedford's stables for the past two years. The engagement was announced formally at the Bedford estate in Westport, Conn., and was greeted with surprise akin to astonishment in Connecticut and New York social circles.

M. MOREAU DE LA MEUSE DUKE OF POZZO DI BORGO HENRI MOULER

Following the discovery of a nation-wide rightist plot to overthrow the Popular Front government of France and establish a monarchy, French police arrested several lithe Frenchmen as well as prominent businessmen, whose stores contained huge supplies of arms and ammunition. In custody of government agents are the three men shown ABOVE. At (LEFT), is M. Moreau de la Meuse, French textile administrator, who is accused of being one of the leaders of the recently-discovered plot of "les Cagoulards" (The Hooded Ones) to seize control of the government. The Duke of Pozzo di Borgo (CENTRE), former lieutenant of Francois de la Rocque and head of the secret group "having relations with wrongdoers." The finding of arms and munitions in his antique store brought about the arrest of Henri Mouler (RIGHT), French antique dealer also charged with the plotting.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—Signs of interest failed the Stock Market today and leading issues slipped backward fractions to a point or more.

A few gold mining stocks resisted the trend but in general the adverse drift applied to all divisions.

Turnover was about 800,000 shares.

Losers included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, American Smelting, U. S. Gypsum, Du Pont, Phillips Petroleum, Santa Fe and Lowe's.

TORONTO STOCKS

Turonto, Dec. 1 (CP)—The Western oils were the feature of the trade on the Toronto stock market in the first session of the new month, changing hands in heavy volume at advancing prices. Royalite led the advance with a gain of 3½ to 44¾. Industrials held to an upward trend on light trade and the mining shares were irregular with the golds slightly higher and the base metals down at the close.

Board Room Gossip

(By United Press)

The market had good reasons for making a determined recovery effort at the beginning of the week, based as it was on a fairly bright budget of specific items. Apart from the technical reasons, better prices were justified by a more conciliatory government. A renewed effort to speed up construction, the possibility of early tax relief for business and a brighter overseas situation. . . .

As indicated by Financial Service, however, profit-taking would be bound to direct the list in a sideways course on the first signs of strength, and providing nothing of a radically new nature is injected into the business and market situations, we are likely to see a continuance of this irregular up and down trend for some days. Caution is therefore dictated for traders while this condition prevails.

The adherency of the Canadian market to the general behaviour on Wall Street was well illustrated by the action of newsprint stocks. Judging by the comparative news to the effect that $30 newsprint would obtain for the whole year 1938, this group had every right to maintain its early gain. But as a result of a mid-season reaction at New York, our whole list followed suit. Few who believe that 1938 will be as lean as goods year for business as 1937, the newsprint presents look like a very good opportunity. The industry's position has scarcely if ever, been better, while current levels have discounted the blackest kind of development.

Whiskey

Production of whiskey dropped below consumption last month for the first time since repeal. . . . Total sales of all types of candy in October were lower than in September, but slightly ahead of a year ago, with sales amounting to $28,015,062, compared with $27,920,965 in October, 1936.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal Dec. 1—Fresh egg receipts had a further decline of one cent on local produce markets yesterday and business proceeded cautiously, while other produce showed little or no change. Receipts exclusive of local arrivals, totalled 459 cases of eggs, 504 boxes of butter and 43 boxes of cheese, none of which were marked for export.

On the Canadian Commodity Exchange the prices of Ontario grass regrading butter sold at 29 1-8c, the second at the Quebec basis. Quebec fresh 92 score closed at 29 3-4 to 30 cents.

Futures closed steady, unchanged, at 29 3-4 to 30 1-4c for December, 30 to 30 1-4c for January and 29 3-4 to 30 3-4c for February. Small lots to retailers were quoted by jobbers at 30 1-2 to 31 cents for grade A and 31 1-2c for specials.

On the egg market graded shipments were generally 1½c for A-grade, 3½c for A-extras, 5c for A-firsts, 8½c for selected chickens, 23c for ducks, 17c to 30c; geese 15-18c.

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES

Apparently digesting the meaning of the sending recently received at him by the Lord Chief Justice, Geoffrey Dennis, author of "Coronation Commentary" is shown leaving the law courts at London after hearing of libel action brought by the Duke of Windsor as the result of derogatory statements made in Dennis' book. The case ended when a settlement was announced—reports of which say a sum, said to be $50,000, to be given to charity and an apology tendered to the Duke.

LUDENDORFF ILL, GREAT WAR CHIEF

Man Who Advanced Paganism, Cared For by Catholic Sisters

Munich, Dec. 1 (AP)—General Erich Ludendorff, critically ill after an attack of influenza, with infection, today took a turn for the worse. He is cared for by Catholic Sisters.

Ludendorff, who has been the head spiritual adviser of the Nazi regime for four years ago, Their main trouble has come from the Government, rather than from such movements as that sponsored by Ludendorff. The General's paganism—condemned by Hitler—is probably not a grave menace, though it is an indication of the trend of extreme thought in Germany.

EGGS DECLINE

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 1—(CP)—After reaching a peak price of 45 cents a dozen, egg prices in Windsor are declining. Dealers say the drop is due to housewives being unwilling to pay the high prices and also that the Toronto Market is not bidding for eggs. Today's prices range from 36 to 40 cents.

ORDERED OUT AT GUN POINT

Toronto Taxi-Driver Not Asked to Hand Over Money

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—Lorne Martin, 32, Toronto taxi driver, was ordered from his car early today by a passenger who drove away in the machine. Martin said he was ordered from the car at gun-point. No attempt was made to rob the driver of money.

Police of municipalities surrounding Toronto were asked to look for the stolen car. It was feared the vehicle might be used in another crime. The driver described the gunman as being about 40 years old, of medium height, with hair.

Martin said his passenger told him to drive up a street and a little later ordered him to pull into the curb.

"I turned about and came face to face with a long black revolver," he said. "I was scared. It was the first time I ever had one of those things pushed against my face. I don't know how I had the nerve to get to a store and telephoned the police."

Poll Record Vote In Last Election

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—A record number, 1,171,116 Canadians, have went to the polls in the October general election, figures compiled by Queen's Park today showed. On the lists there were 2,226,026 names, the percentage of voting being 70.52.

The total vote in 1934 was 1,561,826 or 72.3 per cent of the 2,130,-430 names on the list. The increase in the number on the lists in 1937 was 97,610 and the increase in voters 9,231.

Both Liberals and Conservatives showed increases in the popular vote, but have left seats for little change. Labor and Independent Conservatives.

Popular votes, 90 constituencies, compare as follows:

Liberal	600,753	607,857
Conservative	533,285	555,881
C. C. F.	108,961	83,549
U. F. O.	6,741	7,299
All Others	21,901	17,103

Liberal vote in both cases included Labor-Progressive and Independent Liberals. Conservative vote includes Independent Conservatives.

In the Oct. 6 election the 84 sitting Liberals polled 607,857 votes, the two Liberal-Progressives 7,741, the United Farmer of Ontario 7,299 and the 22 Conservatives 212,858.

King as Landlord Receives Quit Rents As Duke of Cornwall

Launceston, Cornwall, Dec. 1 (AP) "The King in the role of a feudal landlord today received quit rents from tenants of the Duchy of Cornwall.

The ceremony, complete with mediaeval trappings, trumpet fanfares and cries of "oyez", was held within the crumbling walls of Launceston Castle which last saw the old rite in its reigning days near three centuries ago.

The King rode through the castle behind the red, black and gold standard of Launceston to hear the steward read a proclamation that do offer suit and service to his Majesty, Lord of the fee or honour of the castle of Launceston."

The King paid the fine to present his quit rent (symbol of a tenant's fealty to his King and of the King's recognition of the tenant's right to his property). The Mayor gave 100 shillings in a silver mug and a pound or pepper on a silver tray.

A woman tenant gave a riding cloak and a brace of greyhounds. The King patted the dogs accepted them and then gave them back.

Each tenant handed his rent to the King on bended knee.

Explosion Wrecks Cordite Building Of Powder Factory

Waltham Abbey, Essex, Dec. 1 (AP)—A violent explosion wrecked the Cordite building in the Royal Gunpowder Factory here today, jarring the entire district. No person was killed or injured. Twenty men in a nearby blending room escaped.

The blast originated in a Cordite store.

Fire broke out but was quickly controlled by the factory's fire brigade and the authorities said plant operations were able to proceed.

Cordite is an explosive used chiefly as a propellant for shells and is made of cellulose, nitrate and vaseline.

Says Average Radio Program Appeals To 12-Year Mentality

Chicago, Dec. 1—(AP)—Federal Communications Commissioner George Henry Payne said today radio "must be prevented from stopping the growth of the American mind."

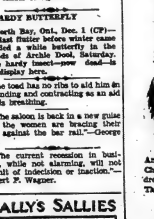
To accomplish this, Payne said in an address before the second biennial conference on educational broadcasting, the point of view and the ideals of broadcasters must be changed even "at the risk of a severe jolt to these gentlemen." He continued:

"Like the moving pictures, the average program of the broadcasters is addressed to an intelligence possessed by a child of 12. It is impertinent to talk of an average to the adult age."

POLICE PRESS SEARCH

Detroit, Dec. 1 (CP)—Police pressed a search today for Douglas Leonard, Windsor, Ont., radio station traffic manager, who disappeared from his office here yesterday. He is said to have left notes for his wife and parents and was later reported leaving a garage in an automobile. A friend, United Farmer of Ontario 7,299 and the 22 Conservatives 212,858.

A HARDY BUTTERFLY



North Bay, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP)—He last frailer before winter came hauled a white butterfly in the sands of Archie Pool, Saturday. The hardy insect—now dead—is an elegant hero.

The load has no ribs to aid him in expanding and contracting as an aid to his breathing.

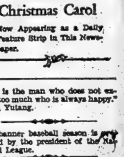
SALLY'S SALUTES



Almost everything is out of the red nowadays except the girls' figures.

"Sixpence sixis your marbles,..." goes a song supposed to be addressed to a little boy. But this is the grown up version of the affair. Miss Adele Royle ABOVE, is being tried by 39-year-old Viscount Knebworth, son of the Earl of Kingston, for the return of some toy trains, model soldiers, and toy guns with which he used to play "occasionally." Miss Royle says she sold the toys when she was destitute, but she was ordered to return them by the viscount their cash value.

WORLD FREEDOM AT STAKE—LLOYD GEORGE

Says World Appeasement Not Found by Surrender; 'Liberty is Our Business'

Enemies of International Liberty on March, He Says

GROWTH OF FASCISM

Warns That in a Great War Mediterranean Would be Closed

By GEORGE RAMSBOTTOM

London, Dec. 1 (CP) — David Lloyd George spoke his mind today in plain, blunt words. "Four huge mass—Africa, the British Empire, the Far East, and Europe—flashed him as he stood on the platform in Caxton Hall. Now and again, with a pointer as long as himself, he illustrated his theme.

But he was no politician turned schoolmaster. His survey of the international scene was such as no school ever saw. It was at once a bitter arraignment of the "feeble, flaccid" leadership of democracy and an appeal to it to grasp democratic countries of the world to stand up to protect freedom from the hand of the assassin."

He spoke of the onward march of resolute dictators, of democracies "quitters" blaming each other at every retreat. He told how the democracies under strong leadership stood the supreme test in 1914. Now for the democracies there was surrender after surrender. Autocracy had raised three fingers, Slavery, contempt, relentless, ruthless, unscrupulous, unbridled force. Democracy had fallen into limp, flaccid hands, which could not seize the sword for freedom.

Repression For Advocates

The issue now was not merely not the suppression of democracy in Spain. It had gone far beyond that. Liberty, democracy, and international rights throughout the world were at stake. There were enemies on the march, greeting in sinuate, and sinuacidly and reckless power. That was the outstanding fact. World appeasement would not be found along the path of surrender.

"Hitler ridden like Rotten Row for five years and 'save got no farther," the former Prime Minister said. "The result has been monumentous failure everywhere."

Mr. Lloyd George poured scorn on those who argued that suppression of liberty was no concern of Britain's so long as she was not attacked. With his pointer, he indicated great Britain on the map. "Bring the Mediterranean and down the Red Sea.

Mediterranean Route

In the Great War the Mediterranean was closed. British merchantships was kept open only with difficulty. Now if we were at war that route would be closed to British ships.

"And there are still those," Mr. Lloyd George scoffed, "who say it is no business of ours if war is in the air, rivers, lakes, atmosphere, and other crossed places, indicating how important it is to allow sunlight to enter our homes freely and even if the carpets do fade.

Several hard bumps are reported forming on the left arm of Dr. Malisa Thomas (LOOYD), Cuban first secretary of health, who was inoculated four times with filtrates of cancerous elements to become a human guinea pig for a cancer experiment. Dr. Drago, who last two members of his family because of the disease, retired from active practice several years ago to devote himself to cancer research. Though the small lump has been forming for a month, Dr. Drago says he cannot, as yet classify them as the beginnings of a cancerous growth.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—Pressure is high over the east portion of the continent, also in the lower Mackenzie valley, with low pressure covering Manitoba. A disturbance appears to be developing off the south Atlantic coast. Snowfurries have occurred in some districts, but the weather has been for the most part fair in all provinces. It has been rather cold in eastern districts and higher temperatures in Manitoba.

Lake Superior—Partly cloudy and somewhat milder today and Friday with scattered snowflurries; southerly to westerly winds, becoming fresh or strong tonight.

Western Provinces — Fair today, Friday, partly cloudy; a little cooler in northern districts with snowflurries.

Light and its effects! Light has many interesting and important effects. In addition to furnishing the means of vision, there are many less obvious effects. Its chemical action is best demonstrated in photography. It is important in the growth of all living things. Its electrical effects are indicated by the photo-electric cell; ultra-violet light aids in the production of electricity in spark gaps; and negatively charged bodies are exposed to light rapidly lose their charges. Light also kills bacteria. Sunlight is responsible for the destruction of great quantities of germs in rivers, lakes, atmosphere, and other exposed places, indicating how important it is to allow sunlight to enter our homes freely even if the carpets do fade.

Says Slot - Machine Control With Province or Dominion

Quashing of Kingston Bylaw Referred to by Chatham Mayor

CHATHAM FEES

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP) Chief Justice F. R. Latchford's decision in court of appeal which quashed a Kingston by-law governing the licensing and regulation of slot machines placed "like slot machine controversy where it belongs—with the provincial legislature or the federal government," in the opinion of Mayor W. D. Colby of Chatham.

"The members (city council) felt that if legislation be necessary for municipal councils to pass by-laws to regulate such machines, but that there should be some provincial or federal law making such machines illegal," he said.

Chatham has a regulation placing an annual license fee of $300 on the machines and prohibiting persons under 21 years of age playing them. Less than twelve machines are licensed here.

O.S.D. CLOSES FOR HOLIDAYS DEC. 22ND

Chiefs of the Ontario School for the Deaf will close for the Christmas holidays on Wednesday, December 22nd, four o'clock in the afternoon, on Tuesday, January 4th at eight-thirty o'clock in the morning. The pupils who intend going home will leave Belleville on Wednesday, December 22nd, or Thursday morning, December 23rd, according to announcement from the school. A teacher will go as far as Toronto with the children going west, who will also meet the children in the same city on their return, leaving Toronto at 1.45 p.m., on Monday, January 3rd, for Belleville. On all other trains the conductors will be in charge of the pupils. Christmas trees, presents and dinner will be served those remaining at the school during the holidays.

More automobile accidents happen in autumn than in any other season of the year.

FIRST SESSION OF LEGISLATURE TO END FRIDAY

Opposition Leader Macaulay Will Object to One Bill

NO FORMALITY

Three Bills Dealing With Succession Duties Act

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—Ontario's twentieth legislature, aiming to set a record for a brief session, was ready today to get down to debate on second reading of three governmental measures concerning the collection of succession duties.

With these bills expected to be cleared with the first session of the House and Friday night and the promise of keeping Wednesday observative House leader, of co-operation in the end, it was hoped the members may be able to return to their homes Friday to wait the regular sitting.

A night session is possible tonight if the House reaches complete stage on one or more of the three (Continued on Page Twelve)

British Flying Boats Start a Long Cruise

Plymouth, Devonshire, Dec. 2 (CP)—Five Royal Air Force flying boats took off today on the first leg of a 20,000-mile flight to Australia and back. They are to participate in the 150th anniversary celebrations of the birth of the New South Wales.

The first hop will be a 700-mile flight to Berre in southern France. After refueling they will proceed with stops at Alexandria, Karachi, Calcutta, Singapore and Port Darwin.

Wing Commander K. B. Lloyd was in charge when the flying boats left the Mount Batten base here.

Barrister Entitled To Legal Services

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—In a unanimous judgment today the Ontario Appeal Court ordered that the estate of Christian Kloepfer, Guelph manufacturing by W. J. Boland, Toronto barrister, $33,500 with interest for legal services in connection with administering the Kloepfer estate.

Mr. Justice Boland upheld a judgment by Chief Justice Hugh E. Rose which was appealed.

The Appeal Court found that Boland's efficient administration had been successful in all debts being paid and $175,000 distributed among beneficiaries.

FALLING LOG CAPTURES LEG

Employed at the lumber camp of Henry Marquardt, near Maynooth, this week, James Carswell of Maynooth suffered a compound fracture of one leg when a heavy log he had been trimming fell, knocking him down and rolling over him. He was taken to the office of Dr. T. H. Anderson, Bancroft where the injury was attended and later to his home.

Dunning Pleads for Faith In Democracy, Liberty

Confidence in Free Institutions is Essential, He Declares —Dictatorship Not Enduring But Has Power to Destroy Liberty

New York, Dec. 2 (CP) — Hon. Charles A. Dunning, Canadian Minister of Finance, asserted today confidence in free institutions and of ordered liberty was necessary to withstand the "nonsense" that democracy is less efficient than dictatorship.

"We have even on this continent," he told the Association of Life Insurance Presidents of America at its thirty-first annual convention here, "some who seek to convince us that democracy stands possibly to be as efficient as dictatorship, and that we must abandon our voice in government in order to avoid being overwhelmed in the near future by the massed efficiency of dictatorships.

Dictatory Doctrine

"It is not enough for us to say that this is nonsense; that nothing of this nature can happen here. The pages of history show clearly that while dictatorships have never been permanently constructive in human affairs, their capacity to destroy the liberties and institutions built up by others stands clearly revealed."

Vital to the welfare of the people, the Canadian Finance Minister said, was "confidence in our free institutions and in our conception of ordered liberty." Confidence could be fostered only by faith, faith was fostered by understanding.

Understand Basic Factors.

"Are we sure," he asked, "that as citizens of these free commonwealths (Canada and the United States) we really understand the basic factors underlying our institutions or ordered liberty which we take so much for granted in our daily life? To me there never was a time in history when our people required to think and talk more about it today and therefore of what we have than the present time."

At no time since the Great War had international confidences been at so low ebb, he said. In this case also, confidence rested upon faith and surely no one could say that nations today had that degree of faith in the intentions of each other which would warrant confidence in a future of permanent peace in the world.

International Understanding.

Understanding between nations was the key to attaining confidence in the ideal of permanent peace, Mr. Dunning said. "Here in North America "we can see to it that everything possible is done to develop understanding and good faith among the peoples of this continent."

Canada and the United States had been setting a fine example to the world. "We should not," he thought, "boast in this regard, however, because we have had many advantages in promoting understanding and good faith which are not present elsewhere."

WINDSOR JOBLESS NOT GIVEN WORK

Companies Find Men From South Not Suited For Camps

Timmins, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP)—Nine hungry jobless men from Windsor, Ont., were turned away at one camp night when they applied for work in the lumber camps through the employment bureau.

Michael Brownridge, gangling Essex County farm youth, said he had been given transportation by the Welfare Department of Windsor and expected to be taken on immediately in camps about here.

Superintendent Robert Murphy of the Employment Bureau told the nine pulp cruisers were unwilling to outfit and pay transportation for men who sought work. The Windsor men were highly unsuited and not a cent among them.

Despite the, employment branch here have stated pulp cutters are wanted in the Kapuskasing area, said Murphy. Nearest camps where men might be needed are 150 miles from Timmins.

Windsor to Pay Costs.

Mayor J. P. Bartleman arranged to have the men properly clothed and lodged overnight and Mayor Wigle of Windsor had advised him over the telephone the border city would pay the costs of the men's stay, said Mayor Bartleman.

Murphy said he could not understand why the men were sent here under the impression work was waiting. "I told them there would not any number of men who came here and applied individually," he continued.

"The lumber companies have hundreds of men in camps of them shipped up from the south are not generally of much use to them in the camps." Murphy said his personal experience bore out the companies' contention the relief groups were not satisfactory.

"Only one of the nine claimed to have any experience as a pulp cutter."

It is Quite Possible Says Magistrate Rudich

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—It is quite possible, Magistrate Mark Rudich said yesterday, that Peruvian Fred Schweyer "oth go to hell".

Dismissing a charge of disorderly conduct against Margaret Schweyer, 36, who made the retort disconcerting in exchange for a summons for unnecessarily tooting a automobile horn, the magistrate said:

"In the ordinary course of our life and entirely within the realm of our belief, it is quite possible that you can go to hell. Miss Greenberg's remark wasn't a command or a wish but a simon-pure statement of fact."

Advised by Rudich to "kiss and make up", accused and accuser smiled at each other.

TRUCK IS STRUCK BY YARD ENGINE

Gordon A. Moore, Napanee, Comes Out of Wreck Without Injury

Trenton, Dec. 2 (Special)—Death took a holiday last night when a C.N.R. yard engine, hitting nine box cars, crashed into a gasoline truck driven by Gordon A. Moore of Vines Corners, Napanee, on the level C.P.R. Marmora crossing on the Hinds road. Moore of the Hinds and Daunt Paper Company, was not injured. It was wrecked the vehicle, which was the property of George Dickson, 64 Dundas Street, Napanee. The driver of the truck extricated himself from the mass of entanglement 75 feet from the point of impact. The truck was completely wrecked. It was reported by police that the train was backing up in an easterly direction when the truck driven by Moore proceeding south, pulled across in front of it. Moore stated that he did not see the train. The truck was valued at approximately $3,000.

Bancroft Boy Dies After Coaster Hits a Stump

Bancroft, Dec. 2.—While playing with his coaster on Saturday, little 10-year-old Earl Morris of this village had the misfortune to collide with a stump and injuring his neck so severely that he died on Sunday. His playmate helped him to the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital, where it was found that he had punctured his jugular vein. Sunday morning his condition became more critical and before arrangements could be made to transfer him to another hospital he had succumbed to the injuries.

The funeral was held from his late home on Monday afternoon at two-thirty to St. Paul's United Church where service was conducted by Rev. W. J. Davis, interment took place in Lakeview cemetery.

NO WORK AT SUDBURY LOCAL YOUTHS REPORT

"Lots of snow in the Sudbury district, but no work of any sort," it was emphatically stated by two young men who have returned to the city over the week-end after an unsuccessful quest for work in the northland.

"Every place we called at, the mines, the offices, even the camps it was the same story. No work. Waiting lists. Lots of unemployed. Many of them strived us to go home before the unemployment situation up there got too serious," the boys reported.

CHINA MASSING HUGE AIR FLEET RUSSIAN - BUILT

To be Used Against Advancing Japanese Columns

POWERFUL MACHINES

Fears Expressed For Safety of Americans at Mokanshan

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Shanghai, Dec. 2 (AP)—China today was reported to be massing a fleet of 300 Russian-built warplanes for an attack on advancing Japanese.

Well-informed and responsible foreigners at Hankow, one of China's new seats of government 700 miles up the Yangtze River from Nanking, said at least twenty twin-engined bombers had been delivered.

The planes were being tuned up at airfields in the vicinity, observers reported, prior to flight said they were 800 horsepower craft with a 250 mile an hour speed.

The remainder of the planes were said to be pursuit ships, with a wide north and west of Hankow, or on their way from Russia.

Chiang Kai-Shek has said five of six heavy bombing planes unloaded at Hankow docks recently. Maj. Gen. H. H. Kung, Chinese Finance Minister, went on their way to Hong Kong on the British freighter Benmacdhui.

Name Removed.

(Kung's name, the newspaper said was removed and the shipment readdressed to a British concern at Among the passengers were said to have been purchased by China in the United States and brought here by the motorship Talyhn.)

(At Hong Kong, British Crown Colony on China's southern coast, the Japanese consul protested against what he termed the activities of anti-Japanese secret societies. He cited an attempt to bomb a Chinese store selling Japanese goods as evidence of the movement. The Hong Kong government was understood to have assured Japanese it would attempt to suppress any illegal activities.)

Meanwhile two Chinese airplanes raided Japanese positions at Shanhai in the first aerial attack in more than a month.

One bomb dropped near the former embassy of the Japanese flag.

VOICES SYMPATHY FOR YOUNGSTERS

King George Cheered to Echo by Children Standing in Rain

Taunton, Somersetshire, Dec. 2 (CP)—King George, on a two-day tour of the Duchy of Cornwall, arrived here today and promptly received a cheering welcome from crowds of youngsters who gathered in pouring rain to greet him.

After being greeted at the railway station by the Marquess of Bath, Lord Lieutenant of Somerset, His Majesty was cheered to the echo by children who had been waiting and onlookers gathered outside the building.

"What bad weather!" the King declared as he acknowledged the greetings. "I am sorry for the children waiting in the rain."

Princess Elizabeth was with a grandson of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, attending school at Taunton.

King George reviewed war veterans gathered here and then entered an automobile to wind up his tour of Devonshire Saturday en route to Devonshire and Cornwall.

ADVANCE POLL OPENS

The advance poll in the Belleville municipal elections opened today and continues Friday and Saturday at 204 Station Street from nine a.m. to 6 p.m.

2462 Grenades Seized With Much Apparatus Alleged for Cagoulards

Seizure So Far Totals Nearly 6,000 Grenades

WOODS NEAR PARIS

Owner of House is Said to Have Fled Abroad

Paris, Dec. 2 (CP-Havas)—Surete operators investigating the Cagoulard plot against the state today discovered a secret forest hand grenade "dump" and new supplies of hidden arms.

Police seized 2,462 hand grenades, raising the number of explosives of this type uncovered by the authorities thus far to nearly 6,000.

Forest Building Searched.

Searching a building located in the forest close to Echos Boulains, in the Seine-et-Marne department, near Paris, police found elaborate apparatus indicating it served as a hand grenade "plant" for the Cagoulards, ("Hooded Ones"). It contained machinery for grenades with explosive powder.

The owner of the house, a Mme. Lecuyer, assertedly fled abroad when police started their investigation of the secret society's alleged plot to overthrow the government by armed force and establish a dictatorship in preparation for restoration of the monarchy.

POLICE ATTEND MEETING TWO STORES ENTERED

Port Hope, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP)—A miniature crime wave hit Port Hope last night while the three-man police force attended a publicity-announced meeting, called by council to ascertain the delay in the police investigation of the death early last month of Walter French, found lying in a street.

The Maher Shoe Store was entered and $40 and a quantity of goods taken. Manager Roy Croft, who made the discovery, said the interior of the store looked "as though a cyclone had struck it". Radio in the store was pulled down and other damage done.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to batter down the rear door of the Outram Hardware Store.

A man threw a brick through a window in Roy Everett's automobile, parked at the rear of an hotel. The London resident, visiting here gave chase and caught the man by the foot as he clambered over a fence. The man escaped after a struggle.

That's one suggestion offered today by some of the crack players here for the annual National Capital bridge tournament.

It's simple—merely keep one corner pointed toward the north end.

RECOVERS MEMORY AFTER 30 MONTHS

Kansas City, Calif., Dec. 2—(AP)—James Saunders, 47, who said he lost 30 months of his memory and amnesia, looked for a job today to earn enough to go home to his wife in Cincinnati.

He regained his memory yesterday in jail—where he was taken Saturday when officers found him wandering.

In Cincinnati, Kathryn Saunders, a local waitress, corroborated Saunders' story that he had been missing more than two years. She said she hoped his world "come home some time."

ATTENTIVE NURSING HELPS TO SOOTH PATIENTS

New Orleans, La., Dec. 2 (AP)—Nurses were urged today to hold hands with their patients.

Dr. Ansel M. Cathe, of Tulane University medical school, in an address before delegates to the Southern Medical Association, advocated it, not as a boon to bedding romances, but as a help in soothing the nerves of patients in the operating table.

He said that "a gentle pat" on the cheek and "a light squeeze of the hand" by the nurse "is very helpful."

AN EXCITING WEEK-END

Detroit, Dec. 2 (CP)—Daniel Arsine, of Tecka is a fast worker. Mr. Arsine arrived in Detroit, and met a girl. He proposed to her on Saturday and was accepted. Yesterday he stole a suit of clothes, borrowed $5 from his mother and a marriage license. On Wednesday, after early conviction, he was fined $25. He also faces a special 30-day jail sentence.

A GRAND GIRL

Hollywood, Dec. 2 (AP)—Just call her Martha (One Punch) Raye.

Infatuated to put more punch into a blow, she stretched Bob Hope on the floor yesterday. Her accuse lon was a scene in her latest picture.

She pushed John Payne through a banister last week. Good clean fun, she says.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS

Kitchener, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP)—A scientific enterprenuer is Daniel Herve, 11, who has a chemical experimenter. For a nickel Herve fills balloons attached to fine toy baloon with hydrogen. His mother, Mrs. Herve, admits she is baffled but not excited by her son's genius. "I never can tell when he'll be sailing through the air," she says.

PICTON STORE BRANCH WINS $35.00. PRIZE

Finishing one point behind the Windsor branch, the Picton branch of the Dominion Stores Ltd. was awarded second prize or $85.00 in a contest conducted by the Head Office of the chain store among their Ontario branches. The Picton group was the only store in Eastern Ontario to win a prize in all other awards going to branches in the western part of the province. Prizes were awarded for the sale of Mr. Cormick produce over a period of one week.

THURSDAY MARKET

A lone vendor with the market at her mercy took matters in her own hands today and the price of eggs shot back to the level of two weeks ago; forty cents per dozen. The arrival of vendors later however brought the price back to the early week levels.

Only a few staple vegetables and winter apples were offered today. Very few shoppers however put in an appearance, the coolness of the morning apparently keeping housewives within the comfort of heated homes.

A few loads of stove and cordwood were offered by outside vendors, with no takers at an early hour this morning.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETS ON TUESDAY

Members of the 1937 Hastings County Council will swing into action on Tuesday of next week in the last session of the 1937 council.

With approximately ten elections in the offing in the various municipalities of the county there is a possibility that a number of new faces will be seen at the January session.

The Roads and Bridges Committee of the Council meet tomorrow at Shire Hall to go over the roads for current year will be passed and general business wound up.

ANOTHER SKUNK SEEN ON ROAD

Add signs of a mild winter: A skunk ambling leisurely along a road near Roblin's Mills, paying little or no attention to passing automobiles. Followed by a car belonging to R. OWL CAPTURED HERE A RARE SPECIMEN SAY ZOO OFFICIALS

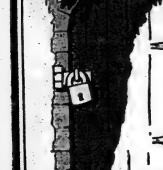
Described as the first arrival of the kind in the Toronto Riverdale Zoo, and declared a rare species of bird, the Arctic Owl, captured on the shores of Lake Simcoe, Ont., about one week ago, and examined by a number residents of the city at the St. Paul Street home of Harold Kellar, captor, is now safely ensconced in the new aviary of the zoo. Enroute to Sudbury, Mr. Kellar with Mr. Thompson, Mr. Kerr, visited the cage where the bird was kept.

"It is one of our most valuable and rare additions," the local youths were informed by attendants.

ICE PATCHES FORM ON HARBOR AND BAY



Aftermath of one of the coldest nights of the year, ice had formed on the quiet waters of the Bay of Quinte and harbor this morning, solid in calm water and floating in large patches on the stronger surface of the bay. Occasional fishermen still at work in the bay plowed channels through the firm surface which in the night's cold, harbor was measured at a thickness of about one-quarter inch. It was the first actual freeze-up of the season.

Banquet Concludes Cheese Exhibition and Convention

Prizes Awarded to Winning Cheesemakers and Instructor G. Sherriff

SPLENDID PROGRAM

Address by Dr. Walton on Eskimos And Their Habits Highly Enjoyed

Recorded as the most successful since the formation of the Association ten years ago in point of attendance, variety of entertainment and general success, the tenth annual all-dominion banquet of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association was held in Johnston's academy last evening. The banquet marked the close of the most successful convention ever held.

The evening, replete with a brilliant galaxy of speakers, including the Rev. Wm. Gladstone Walton, of Toronto, guest orator of the evening, officials high in the cheese industry of Canada and professional entertainers attracted its largest number of visitors from points throughout this and other Provinces.

As chairman of the evening, Judge Ewan McLean, Picton, performed his duties in a manner which ranked high with past chairmanships of the annual event. In his welcome to delegates of Ontario and Canada, and to the many visitors, Judge McLean, in his inimitable manner blended his remarks with a professionalism of the industry which at once attracted attention of Canada and overseas centres to Belleville, and to Canada's first complete cheese exhibition, and the wit and brilliance for which he is noted, as he turned the evening over to be enjoyed by all.

Trophies Awarded

One of the highlights of the evening was the presentation of the J. D. LeClair Challenge Trophy given by the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association for the highest scoring cheese on exhibition from Quebec Province, at Belleville, and the award presented by M. H. Hudon, Dairy Commissioner for the Province of Quebec, to Rene Leclaire, Notre Dame de Bois, Frontenac County, Quebec, for the highest scoring cheese. The presentation with a request for the well known song "Alouette," sung in unison by the attendants.

The second presentation of the evening was the Dominion Challenge Cup, for the highest scoring cheese on exhibition open to Central and Eastern Ontario cheesemakers, given to J. N. Truskove in a suitable address by W. A. Munnoch, M.P., of Almonte, in which the full appreciation of Mr. Thompson were extended upon the fine achievement.

J. M. Willickson, president of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association closed the evening and the honor of presenting the J. G. Sherriff Trophy, fitted by Geo. Sherriff, Bloomfield. Prince Edward County, to the Dairy Instructor in Central Ontario group, whose group won the highest prize money in the eight cheese classes grading.

Key of the City Presented

Extending the welcome of the city on behalf of Mayor Amott M.P.P., acting Mayor Alderman Halbold Armstrong cited the great importance of the cheese exhibition had given Belleville, and the interest which the visitors to the cheese exhibition represented. The key to the city was then presented by Alderman Armstrong to Dr. J. A. Ruddick. Past Dominion Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, and well beloved by the industry everywhere in Canada. Dr. Ruddick in accepting it presented his appreciation at the exhibition and at the banquet. The key was received by J. F. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, on behalf of Dr. Ruddick.

In his witty, interesting and informative address on experiences "Around the World Twenty" among the Eskimos, Rev. Wm. Gladstone Walton, dealt with the habits of the Eskimos at home. Many relations and revealing little known information into the character and habits of the dwellers of the barren lands in naming, "Nothing in the extreme, their gentle nature is such to attract and hold one who has studied their confidence and adopted their habits. "The unspoiled people," Walton characterized them.

Entertainment of a feature as varied as community singing led by him, was offered by Duncan Pritchard and concert party of Toronto ranging from old tyme songs, dancing, piano concerto and jazz and fancy dancing. The "Mohawk Quintet of Shannonville rendered their usual effective old-time airs of well known fame.

Mr.-Mrs. L. Dainard Salmon Point P. E. Married 61 Years

Serene in the peaceful calm of their Salmon Point home with the lake breeze they have known and loved since early childhood waiting a congratulatory message to them, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Dainard, highly esteemed residents of this lakeshore colony of Prince Edward County, today celebrate the sixty-first anniversary of their nuptials on Friday of last week. Mrs. Dainard is 78 years of age while Mr. Dainard has just passed his eighty-fourth birthday.

Married at the Methodist Church parsonage in Picton in 1876 by the Rev. John McVety, Mr. and Mrs. Dainard have resided almost all their days on the farm owned by Mr. Dainard's father before him. Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Dainard was Ella Gibson, daughter of John Gibson of that community.

Residing near the shores of Lake Ontario at one of its roughest parts, Mr. Dainard in his younger days became associated with the storms and sinking of ships that characterized this part of the county in the early days. Today, at his advanced age he still regales his listeners with many true dramatic accounts of the bravery of the men who went "down to the sea in ships". His memory is still clear and possesses many interesting anecdotes of the early life in his native county. He is active and in good health. Mrs. Dainard has not been in the best of health for the past few years but is able to move around with the aid of a crutch and cane.

The elderly couple have two daughters, Mrs. Howard Deneau of Bloomfield, B.C., and Mrs. Milford Dulmage of Salmon Point, and one son Adolphus at home. Many relatives and friends spent the day with them celebrating the anniversary.

Obituary

JOHN A. HUFFMAN

(Mountain View)

After an illness of three weeks' duration, John A. Huffman, aged 66 and well esteemed resident of Prince Edward County, passed away Wednesday night. December 1st, at the residence of his son, Mr. Ralph Huffman, Mountain View in that county.

The late John Huffman had reached an advanced age, he being in his 66th year. He was born near Bath, Ont., his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Huffman. He lived an active and useful life as a farmer and manufacturer, being the well-known cheese maker at the old Queen Cheese Factory in Northumberland County. After residing for many years in Northumberland County, Mr. Huffman he moved to Prince Edward County and had made his home in the Mountain View district for the past thirty years. In religion he was a member of the United Church.

Surviving him are two sons, Mr. George Huffman, Mountain View, and Mr. Spencer Huffman, Toronto; two granddaughters, Miss Margaret Huffman, Mountain View and Miss Gwendolyn Huffman, Toronto, and one grandson, Floyd Huffman, Mountain View. His wife died about four years ago.

The funeral will take place on Friday, December 3rd.

COURT QUASHES KINGSTON BY-LAW

Appeal Judge Says By-law Covered by Criminal Code

Municipal authorities throughout Ontario studied with interest today a judgment by Hon. F. R. Latchford, Chief Justice in appeal which quashes a Kingston by-law governing the licensing and regulation of slot machines.

The Chief Justice, handing down a decision at Osgoode Hall in Toronto yesterday, held the by-law was, in effect, an attempt to legislate on matters covered by the Criminal Code. Slot machines are "as definitely gambling devices as roulette wheels", he ruled.

The ruling was made when the court allowed an appeal of Vernon Morrison of Kingston against a judgment of Mr. Justice R. M. Cheverier upholding, in part, the Kingston by-law. Under the municipal enactment, each slot machine in Kingston is subject to a $500 license fee.

Many Ontario municipalities have similar by-laws in operation, but pending study of Chief Justice Latchford's ruling no civic authority would commit itself. Certain slot machines have been ruled upon as not gambling devices within the meaning of the Criminal Code.

Toll Brothers Give Travelogue

An audience which taxed the capacity of Tabernacle United Church heavily enjoyed the travelogue given last evening by the Toll Brothers who described their hitch-hiking tour around the world.

The speakers were introduced by the pastor, Rev. D. T. McClinchey, who welcomed the large gathering and expressed the appreciation of the Women's Association for the splendid response referring especially to the splendid work of Mrs. Sprackett in the sale of tickets.

Displaying beautiful slides, the lecture was educative and entertaining, the youthful travellers having returned with a wealth of interesting stories of their adventures and of the history of the places they visited.

Musical interludes added to the enjoyment of the audience. Mrs. M. F. Duff presided at the organ at the opening of the program and a piano duet by Mrs. Taylor Franklin and Miss Florence Davis was also greatly appreciated. The thanks of the gathering was conveyed to the assisting artists by Mr. McClintock.

Police Blotter

Disturbances at a local restaurant brought police to an upper Front (St. eating house early today following alterations in the restaurant kitchen. Upon the arrival of the police a woman, who is reported to be the wife of the chef, was apprehended and held in custody pending investigations looking into the trouble, which is believed to have originated in the home.

While patrolling his detail late last night, P. C. Thompson found the front door leading into the Royal Bank, Front St., ajar. The bank officials were immediately notified, while investigations revealed the door had been inadvertently left unlocked and no trouble resulted.

O.A.C. TO EXTEND RESEARCH OF NEW TYPES

Advertising of Cheese Aid Toward Progress Says Dairy Professor

elleville District Should be First to Institute Campaign

HELP FROM COUNCIL

Chairman of Dairy Council Pleased With Progress Made.

The Ontario Agricultural College, elph, will extend its research in- new types of Ontario cheese this ar, delegates to the convention of he Central Ontario Cheesemakers' ere informed yesterday by W. B. prowde, Professor of Dairying of nat institution, in an address.

The necessity for closer co-operation between the laboratory and field ork in the cheese industry was ointed out by Prof. Sprowde, and conderable progress in this direction s been made during the past year. particular study has been given to mportant and characteristic cheeses, nd also to "green cheese" of a new type, it was explained. Research on this work, however, will not be available as yet for scrutiny by the public.

The need for advertising of cheese as all toward further progress of he industry was cited by the speak-

"The cheese industry, particularly n the Belleville district, needs more nd greater and more extensive adertising."

Mr. Sprowde referred to the sugestion advanced by Mr. Barr in egard to milk grading. A full re- investigations conducted in ther had previously been pre- y him and much of it tech- was given his hearer. Cream ilk, it was stated, had been divorced and solely responsible for butter heese. It was further felt by the ibuter that such grading was not ny practical but essential to better ults.

"This was the report I made back 1930 as a representative of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph" he said.

Efforts were made at the College to grade two types of milk, cheese and not so clean, and cheese was manufactured from these two types. Practical tests showed that the high grade cheese correlated with the higher grade of milk. The process assured milk showed a greater bacteria content and a consequent difficulty of control was experienced.

"Cheesemakers, if they adopt the grading system, may expect a little more work on their part, but important advance of dairying in Canada would more than offset this by bowing greater profits."

New Generation Coming

One of the most important branches of the dairy industry was said to be held in the hands of the younger generation of the country. The school child should know the importance of the agricultural industry; we should have more stress laid upon the fact that milk must be maintained at a high quality and sanitary level. We must look, not only, but forward. Research, it was thought should be given to better information in the high and secondary schools, and to this end, I myself will undertake the preparation of suitable manuals," concluded Mr. Sprowde.

Grading of milk, better inspection of farms, the enforcement of cream grading regulations must inevitably lead to better and higher quality cheese, the audience was again reminded by Mr. Sprowde in his concluding remarks.

Cheese aPtrons' Greeting

Edward Fyeat, Stirling, representing the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association, brought the greetings of his group to the convention and offered congratulations to the Dairy Association upon the exhibition. One thing, he pointed out, necessary to ensure a constantly open market in the world, was a consistent supply of product of high quality. By co-operation in any effort of cheesemakers of the small and other associations was assured by Mr. Fyeat.

Allan C. Fraser, general manager of the National Dairy Council of Canada, closing speakers said:

"I wish to this convention the greetings of the National Dairy Council of Canada and an expression of appreciation to you for once more inviting me to the Convention and inviting me to your program.

"I rejoice with you in the advance which has been made—the recovery, may I say—in the cheese industry during the past two years and during the past year in particular. I trust that the forebearing times experienced previously will not recur in your lifetime or mine, if ever, and by the same token I trust that you will not experience a boom which will lead to excessive production with attendance marketing difficulties.

"My time is brief and in any event it is necessary for me to repeat or enlarge upon the remarks of others, better able to discuss with you in detail the problems of manufacture and marketing.

"What I would like to do is to leave an inspiring message with you. I may not be able to do this but I can tell you that you are a member of the great family of dairymen which represents the largest single element of agricultural production and that the larger I see connected with the National Dairy Council and the more I go up and down the country discussing the problems of the dairy industry, the more am I convinced that your Council is the "balance wheel" of the dairy industry as a whole. When I first came into my work in 1921 I found a situation which was somewhat perplexing to me. When cheese was mentioned in any meetings other than those of the cheese industry itself, it was seemed to be a feeling that the cheese industry was a step-brotherly child. In any event it was difficult to develop any co-operation or concerted effort and by the same token I found the cheese industry more or less withdrawn from the dairy industry as a whole.

"Today we have a somewhat different situation and I think it safe to say that from the Atlantic to the Pacific your position in the dairy industry is recognized and appreciated. I say this from my contacts as dairy convenience across Canada and from the more recent experience of the annual meeting of our own National Dairy Council, held in the Toronto on the 16th and 17th of November. It is, I think, a happy condition and if our Council has contributed anything to this feeling, we, too, are happy.

"Let me offer this further comment—that if you want to maintain continual friendly relationships and helpful relationships with a man, you must meet him that way you must make it easy for him to know you—you, too, must be friendly. When delegates meet as they do in our Council to deal with technical problems or as they did last week in Toronto deal with personal problems, it would be a splendid thing if members of the cheese industry could be present and take part in those discussions. I know it costs a little money, but inasfar as the National Dairy Council is concerned we can, I think, find a desire to have you there if you did not pay one cent toward the Council fees and I am absolutely certain that the Ontario Creamery Association would be glad to have you on the same basis. However, this is merely suggestive and you are to be so rude as to criticize my boots.

Export Markets Traded

"One more thing—you have heard and you will hear about export markets. Your Council stands in having splendid advocates in both the Federal and Provincial Governments doing everything, I think, humanly possible to market your product abroad and to market it well. For the fourth season now we have had Mr. Hudon going to with your graded market problem in that we run National Cheese Week. It is not a very ambitious undertaking but we think it has been effective. We cannot tell you how much we have increased the consumption of cheese. This season we estimated it at two million pounds. Based on information given to us by some of the larger distributors of milk whether we have increased it materially or not, we will know when we have the "after sale" effort brought closer to the attention of Canadian people in a way in which it has not been done before. In what we have done we have been splendidly aided by the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture and in particular by the staff of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch. I think it is worth while effort and that these results will be cumulative and permanent. We hope so, in any event. We can also say glad to add that in our efforts in 1937 we have had the active co-operation of the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association.

"I sincerely hope you are pleased with the general statement that if we can be any service to you in any way in which it has not been done that it is not necessary to pay us dues in order to get service. I expect this to you, but really I have not in mind at the moment any way in which I could serve you better than you are served by the very splendid advocate you have in Ottawa in the person of the Dominion Dairy Commissioner.

"Your convention this year, coupled with your exhibition of cheese, makes this one of the most delightful gatherings I have ever attended and I would like to compliment your officers who have brought this about and once more thank you most sincerely for your invitation to come here."

The chair concluded the addresses of the afternoon session.

QUEBEC PROBLEMS IN DAIRY BRANCH ARE DISCUSSED

M. H. Hudon, Dairy Commissioner of Quebec Heard

MORE PRODUCTION

Dairy Cow Production Needs to be Boosted Says Official

Addresses by high officials of the dairying industry in Provinces widely separated as the Province of Quebec and that of Alberta, were offered members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at the concluding session of the tenth annual convention held in this city during the past two days, and which ended yesterday by Mr. M. H. Hudon, Mr. J. A. Brownell, Dairy Commissioners of Quebec and Alberta respectively.

In his review of the conditions of the dairying industry in Quebec Province, Mr. Hudon, Chief of the Dairy Branch of the Quebec Department of Agriculture spoke of problems directly concerning those connected with the industry under discussion.

No special topic having been assigned to him, he said that the Chairman felt that I should ramble on anything that would not be too compromising.

Being of the younger generation, he felt cuts me off from the discussion, at least in a large part, of the old days of dairying and of the cheese-making art. But perhaps, being a bit old-fashioned for the past of dairying and of the cheddar cheesemaking profession in Ontario, I may possess that anything should be said for it. It will take care of itself. It needs no eulogy.

Pressing Problems

"I have therefore in mind the object of presenting to you what in the minds of Quebec dairy interests are the most pressing problems to be solved if we are to have a prosperous, progressive and sound industry.

"In this colnect, you will permit me to state that, speaking on the problems confronting the dairy industry, I am subject to a bias and of such importance that it will be impossible for me to hope to render it justice in the time allotted. It is not my desire that my remarks be considered as the trial of the old dairy industry but rather as representing that has been worth of being worthy of discussion.

The first of our problems facing the industry and requiring a solution concerns the production of the dairy cow. This is not a new subject since in Ontario as well as in Quebec it has been a subject dealt with at all dairy meetings for the past fifty years. It is needless for me to say that some improvement has been made toward its solution, but that it is definitely say the problem has been solved.

We all know that the production of the herds whose milk finds its way to the cities to be consumed in the fluid state has been considerably increased in the past two decades, but the subconscious farmer supplying the local creamery or cheese factory has not kept pace with the increased producer supplying the city markets.

Reasons at Home

Too often, milk producers will complain of the high cost of distributing milk products or the small margin or spread which certain services require, and attribute to them in large measure their lack of prosperity. Farmers may in a great number of cases obtain the same reason right at their own homes. The production of the individual cow is probably one of the most important factors which is delaying the consolidation of the dairy industry. In dustry of Canada. During the past twenty years, Stranahan, Director of the Province of Quebec undertook a study to obtain certain facts which would indicate production per cow. The average for the Province in 1926, for all cows in existence was the same year 197 pounds. The average butterfat production of their supplies from cows whose average butterfat production was 3% Pounds. Dual factories or combined factories, that is, plants equipped for the manufacture of both butter and cheese, were supplied by herds whose average butterfat production was 126 pounds. On the other hand, the city plants, fluid milk distributors) obtained their supplies from herds which had an average butterfat production of 200 pounds per cow.

We are not in a position to judge if these facts representing the Quebec industry would compare with those of Ontario, but it is my opinion that they cannot be very far apart.

Allow me now to cite you some figures on the average butterfat production per cow of certain counties of the province of Quebec:

	Figures Cited
Beauce	78.3
Dorchester	85.8
Huntingdon	100.8
St. Hyacinthe	140.1
Sherbrooke	172.3

These figures spell profit or loss to the milk producers of counties of low or of high butterfat production.

The cost of production, and it is certain measure the cost of distribution, can be reduced if the producers will apply themselves to do so, and if they follow a general improvement plan. Such a plan should embody amongst other features, the proper selection of cows, the economical organization of the herd so as to limit the purchases of feed to that which cannot be profitably grown on the farm, the rational feeding of milk cows, the health of dairy cattle and the sanitary lodging of dairy herds. There is still, unfortunately so, too many farmers keeping cows to fill the stalls instead of filling the pocketbook. Cow-testing work, fertilizing pastures, culling of herds, proper feeding according to production, are agents that will lead the farmers towards a profitable dairy industry.

Volume of Production

The second problem which also requires a pressing solution is intimately linked with the preceding one, while it may also be dissociated from it. It concerns the volume of production in dairy plants. This problem may not exist to the same extent in Ontario, but let me tell you it is a sore spot in our province. If the importance of an industry can be measured by the number of establishments which exist in the province of Quebec should be the bulwark of the dairy industry of Canada. Unfortunately, this is not so, the greater number creameries and cheese factories in Quebec are causing the industry considerable grief. There is not a shadow of doubt but that all these plants at one time played a very useful role, but today, their task is that of indirectly making the problem more acute. It was found that in 1935, the creameries received an average of 92,201 pounds of butterfat during an average of nine months of operation, or the equivalent of manufacturing approximately 192,000 pounds of cheese. The cheese factories on the other hand received an average of 51,406 pounds of butterfat during an average of six months of operation, or manufacturing approximately 120,000 pounds of cheese.

It is to be noted that one-third of Quebec creameries and cheese factories function during two months or more another third from six months to nine months, and the last third operate six months or less.

We have in the past advised the producers to encourage the manufacture of cheese and share the responsibility of retaining the Dairied Kingdom market so that the domestic market can be more easily controlled and at the same time preventing the price for markets of butter while Canadian cheddar cheese was enjoying in the U. K. a certain premium over its competitors.

Must Satisfy Producers

But in the face of such facts how can we persuade the producers to continue patronizing an outlet for their new product which apparently seems to contribute to a low pro-

W. H. MORTON, PUBLISHER

'BEAUTY' AND 'FUN' IN WAR

Twenty year old Vittorio Mussolini, veteran of the Ethiopian and Spanish wars and son of Benito Mussolini, has published a book, the expression of which should startle the world, especially that portion of mankind which prays for peace and harmony and desires that men and boys and women and children should live out their appointed natural years, instead of being war victims by death or mutilation or crippling.

Young Mussolini, too young to understand carnage as it really is, has written of the beauty of an explosion of a plane load of explosive dropped upon a detachment of Abyssinian cavalry, and in his book fro boys he speaks of "sport."

He has served in war but he does not know war. War is not all battle, it has economic angles, and a thousand other angles. It disturbs or rends peace, ruins private lives, even of those who survive. Man's idea of hell cannot paint in its true color actual warfare. One who wrote such lines as Vittorio has done could hardly have thought deeply on the sufferings of even Italian mothers in the victories over the dark race of Ethiopia. He has discovered sport and beauty in blasting a detachment of horsemen from the air.

There is only one spot that shines during war. It is man's and woman's heroism, doing the best they can against a manmade hell.

Vittorio's words may be explained on the ground of youth and inexperience. What else could explain these statements: "It was exceptionally good fun and they always went for us with guns too high up. They offered a perfect target."!

There is another explanation, his book may be used in the intensification of interest of Italian education on warlike training. If young Mussolini is to grow up into an even less tense era than that of the present Italian bambino who is going to school, what will be the result if the latter imbibe an even more intense sense of the beauty of warfare than Vittorio.

War has always cursed this planet as rats after rats emerged and some had strength enough to dispossess some other. In man's lack of enlightenment in those dim days of primitive existence war may have been excusable. But modern man lives under another day, another dispensation to which brotherhood has been preached but little followed for nineteen hundred years.

To give young Mussolini the benefit of extenuating circumstances, he has heard not the mutter of curses which follows war, he has not heard the heart thrash of horses' flanks gasping out their last breath. He can hardly have thought much about the anguish of Italian victims of that struggle. He has heard at most the bursts of bombs breaking in the air, he knows the spurt of speed of an air engine of death. His view does not recognize the chivalry of old-time Italians and others of Europe who fought under a gentler code.

The British standpoint was revealed by the Duke of Wellington whose heart was broken at the thought of a battlefield. He said there was only one thing more terrible than victory and that was defeat. He meant that war was a terrible condition and a terrible method of settling disputes at any time. He did not think of the beauty of casualties, lying in state and cold beauty of casualties, lying in state and cold on the field of death or in the painful beds of hospitals.

When the young aviator is older he will think other things, no doubt. He has struck out with the first thing that appealed to his boyish fancy when thrust into a world in turmoil. That is the tragedy. Indeed it is perhaps hardly to be wondered at that he should show this aspect of war as he has been dwelling in an atmosphere of preparation and war talk. Neither must it be forgotten that he fought in two theatres of war where the risks were not as great as in a general explosion of war. And the world has not invented a perfect match for the airplane. May he and other fliers never have to meet air armaments equal to if not greater than those which Italy used in Ethiopia. May Vittorio's be the last mistaken word ever uttered on such a theme as war's beauty and fun.

But yet what of the book's influence upon the growing generation of school-boys who read Vittorio's words?

Laws were made to restrain and publish the wicked; the wise and good do not need them as a guide, but only as a shield against rapine and oppression; they can live civilly and orderly, though there were no law in the world.—Feltham.

NEW TEACHER

I have come back to school again this Fall
To desks and blackboards, books and ringing bells,
Where muffled laughter echoes down the hall
And silence often points where mischief dwells.
Where anxious ones are crowding on the stair
The corridors repeat their joyous cries;
I tell myself I once was standing there:
Why should I fear to look into their eyes?
Their happy faces glow with expectation:
I have not seen such eager boys and girls.
Where are the smiles I had in "education"?
(Lamar is pulling Arabella's curls.)
What will I be to them as they return
To learn from one who even yet must learn?

YOUTH COMES FIRST, said the Dominion Minister of Labour, Norman Rogers, in addressing a meeting in Kingston at which was discussed the efforts of Dominion and Provincial governments to provide employment for the army of young men leaving school and facing the business world. "Nothing has a greater claim on us than the re-employment of young people, to give them new faith and courage and shattered hopes of youth." The Dominion Government's plan for helping youth was summarized by the Minister of Labour as follows:

1. Training projects of an occupational nature.

2. Learnership courses in industry.

3. Work projects to combine training with the conservation and development of natural resources.

4. Physical training program to maintain the health and morale of youth.

A great demand for skilled mechanics exists throughout the Dominion, according to Hon. Mr. Rogers, who also said there were 30,000 opportunities for youth in this country.

Three hundred youths are being trained in lumber camps under direction of the Ontario Department of Lands and Mines, while a number of others are receiving instruction in a Mining School at Haileybury.

It is planned to train youth in various industries, and boys are also being trained in farm work, while unemployed women are being trained in crafts such as caring for children, better cookery and general work of the home.

IN VIEW OF THE NUMBER OF HONORABLES IN THE NEW ONTARIO CABINET, orders have been issued to address them as just plain MISTER in calling the roll and such like, according to news from Queen's Park—to give them their full titles would take up to much time and might interfere with the golf game of some of the Honourables. No fuss, no frills, no monkey business, no highness, no lordship, and there you are. Seems like Premier Hepburn is bound to take away from the provincial parliament some of its most picturesque attraction. Up to date nothing is being done to improve the custom of continuous speechifying on subjects more or less important, generally less. Counties of Parliament have been dubbed "conventions factories" and one only has to sit in the visitor's gallery for a while to believe that the term is apt.

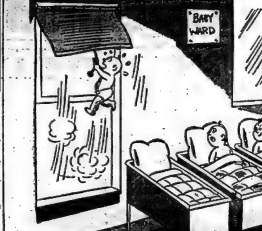
PARSON'S SIDELINE

The Northerner had come to London for his summer holiday, and a friend showed him over the sights of the great city.

One famous building after another was pointed out to him—Westminster Abbey, the tower, London Bridge—but he showed no interest at all.



At last his friend took him along to St. Paul's Cathedral, certain that at this fine building the Yorkshireman would show some excitement.

For a moment the Northerner stood gazing up at the porch. Then he sighed and turned to his side and said: "Th' parson chap 'ere keeps a champion lot o' pigeons."

To make an empire durable, the magistrates must obey the laws, and the people the magistrates.—Solon.

The Door of Dawn

Books of poetry enjoy a poor sale compared with other forms of literature but, through the ages, poetic thought are men of the nation, seeing what others do not see and straining for ideal in earnest-ing language, have exerted an influence out of all proportion to the actual sales or copyright works. A new book of poems from the pen of a local author, Wallace Havelock Robb of Abbey Dawn, has just come from the press. It will probably be read by a comparatively few people; but who is to estimate its influence?

Mr. Robb has assumed the task of interpreting Birdland to the Canadian people. It is a task in which he brings a keen knowledge of nature coupled with an unusual odor but vital literary ability. Beauty abounds everywhere if we have but the eyes to see and ears to hear. Unfortunately, few of us possess ears and eyes that can detect beauty in our surroundings, unless it is pahaidedwyfo pointed out to us by one of the gifted few. Mr. Robb sees and hears beauty in bird songs, in the flight of an eagle, in the spatter and flutter of a wren.

He is such a skilful propagandist for the birds and the other woodland creatures that his verse should rival his book without inwardly resolving to pay more attention to these things in future.

Two other features are mentioned in Mr. Robb's book in addition for the birds and for other subjects dient stones found at Abbey Dawn and believed by the author to be relics of a civilization previous to the American Indian, and the fact that "Olivia Nagano," which has been created at Abbey Dawn because the poet likes bells. He does not like these in prose and verse, opening up new vistas of thought.

The book, which is well printed and artistically prepared, contains a total of 70 poems in addition to some introductory and explanatory material. Mr. Robb describes the book as a device of the sounding muse. His verses are written for oral presentation rather than for silent reading, and the sound effects which he uses are often very unusual in imitation of the song of a bird or the sound of a bell.

"The Door of Dawn" is the fruit of years of observation and countless hours of writing. It has been a labor of love, prepared with the hope of sufficient monetary return to meet publishing costs. But doubtless Mr. Robb will feel well repaid if it has the effect of awakening even a few people to the beauty of Birdland.—Wallace Havelock Robb in "The Poets' Page."

Japan's Spartan Mothers

On August 26, the Navy Ministry announced the death of Sub-Lieutenant Tatsuo Yamanouchi, 27, who had been attached to the naval flying corps which conducted raids on China by air bombing.

Behind this brief and commonplace announcement there is a poignant human document, a letter addressed to the Navy Ministry by the mother of the youthful officer.

The letter reads:

"Sir: I have received from the headman of Ishida, Ita-gun, your communication respecting the death of Sub-Lieutenant Tatsuo Yamanouchi of the naval flying corps, in the record air raid.

"I am filled with gratitude that my boy was able to serve as a flying officer in the Imperial Navy and, through his death, to dedicate his life to the cause of his Fatherland.

"I humbly offer my thanks to the Navy for the care they have taken of my boy during his career. From childhood he had a pure heart and he loved justice, honesty and valour. His father trained him as an offspring of the land, dedicated to the cause of the Emperor. Every one of his words on our boy in this spirit.

"Moreover, he joined the colors to do his bit in the emergency period, he was already prepared to sacrifice himself for the cause. Let me, Sir, in lieu of my son Tatsuo, respectfully about three cheers for the Emperor, for the State and for the Imperial Navy. Had there been anyone to cheer for him when he died, he would no doubt have been heard shouting them.

(In the letter the mother enclosed a poem she composed in expression of her feelings. In effect, it says: "The aged mother does not shed tears for the bright bride moon; nor does she weep as she sees the blossoms fading from the cherry. She will lift her head and direct her gaze to the warplane flying high through the blue sky. Look! There goes Tatsuo, living and serving his country. For his death does not die. Tatsuo lives forever!"). Then she continues:

"I have lived to see, now, I shall watch over them and see that they grow up to serve the country with the same lofty spirit as their brother.

"I respectfully ask the authorities concerned to set their minds at rest on the character of such that even at the last moment he would not disgrace the honor of the Imperial Navy.

Still Gold in Yukon

Recent announcement that a South African mining company is launching a prospecting and development program in the Yukon is a reminder that, after fifty years of continuous production, the famous Klondike gold fields still have reserves of a magnitude that assures many more years of successful operation.

Although the Yukon has already given the world about $300,000,000 in placer gold, the total amount of workable gravels in the Klondike district are estimated, according to the Department of Mines and Resources, at nearly a hundred million dollars more. The large dredging operations are working over the old Klondike placers, but the low-grade ground which was neglected in the days of "'98." The old pan, rocker and sluicing methods of the Klondike days have been largely succeeded by huge dredges, most of which are operated by electricity developed from the potential water-power of the Yukon River. By the close of the season seven dredges in operation this year will have handled approximately 4,000,000 cubic yards of gravel.

While gold has made the Yukon famous, the mineral resources as lead, tungsten and Quebec are by no means limited to that metal. Silver, copper, lead, antimony, tin and tin have also been discovered in greater or lesser quantities, and also coal and many non-metallic substances. High-grade silver-lead ores were found in the Mayo district one years ago, but were not mined until 914. As a result of increased shipments of lead-silver concentrates and the higher price for the latter content of the ore, the total metals from the Yukon are expected to reach a value of almost five million dollars this year, a decided gain over a year ago.—Imperial Oil Review.

THE BARBER

When barber shops were barber shops—if you know what we mean by that—the barber was more than as every up-and-coming young reporter learned in his early newspaper days. Every barber was no exception to that rule, and "pickings" from the lips of many a barber while in a barber's chair. All of which leads to the representation of the following item concerning a barber at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, where the Canadian Press weeks hotel at Ottawa. It is from the pen of Norman Robertson, well known in the Times of Victoria, B. C., under the caption of "Glimpses."

The chief barber in the Chateau Laurier is Joseph Tousie, a French-Canadian, with auburn hair, a superbly waxed little moustache, a jolly face and a pleasant way with him. Tousie, they say, is the busiest barber in the city. Also he shaves prime ministers, opposition leaders and statesmen of all sorts, including, of course, your own and your own. I shall watch over them and see that they grow up to serve the country with the same lofty spirit as their brother.

"I respectfully ask the authorities concerned to set their minds at rest on the character of such that even at the last moment he would not disgrace the honor of the Imperial Navy.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 2nd, 1917.

Mr. Harry Ellis of the local Y.M.C.A. staff spent a few days recently with friends at Paris, Ont., and formed one.

Mrs. John Cook and daughter, Mrs. Thumpson, have returned to the city after visiting relatives at Chicago, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Gilbert and Miss McCauley of Detroit, Mich., are visiting at the home of Mrs. S. M. Gilbert.

Under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Agriculture an instruction car will be in the city on Dec. 5th and instructors will address farmers and others on matters relative to agriculture. Lectures will be given.

Christmas Tree entertainments will be taking place very soon.

30 YEARS AGO

Dec. 2nd, 1907.

Citizens will be pleased to learn that the rolling mills will not be closed down entirely as at first supposed. Mr. Wardrop, one of the officials, informs us that the horseshoe nail plant will start up in a few days.

Mr. Jno. Ballantyne of Guelph is visiting his brother-in-law in this city.

Mrs. R. M. Cameron returned to Toronto today after visiting friends here.

Mrs. Jas. Ewart of Ottawa, Chief Architect for the Dominion Government, made an inspection of the work done so far in the building of the armouries here. He was well pleased with the progress made.

The Misses Lucy and Kathleen Gillette of Little Falls, N.Y., are visiting their aunt, Mrs. H. Mc Mullen, Dundas St., West.

Dec. 2nd, 1897.

Navigation is closed on the Bay of Quinte. The Steamer Bilton made the last trip Descronto this morning, but after breaking up for three or four miles, turned back. The Varuna did not attempt to come down the bay.

It is of interest to our readers to know the dates of the closing of navigation for the past ten years. In 1886 ice formed on the bay on November 18th; in 1887 it as not until Dec. 16th that the bay was frozen over; in 1890 ice formed on Dec. 4; navigation closed in 1891 on Dec. 23rd; the same date as it closed ten years previous; in 1893 ice formed on Dec. 1st; in 1902 it was Nov. 29th when ice formed; on Dec. 1st, 1894, the bay was frozen over; in 1895 the harbor and bay closed on Dec. 3rd; 1896 navigation closed on Dec. 2nd. It will be seen from the foregoing that this is an average year as regards the closing of navigation.

Mr. H. S. Bell is spending a few days at Toronto.

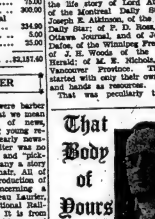
Dec. 2nd, 1887.



The banquet held by the members of St. Andrew's Society on the night of St. Andrews Day at the Henderson House was a most enjoyable affair. The President, Mr. D. M. Ross, occupied the chair, and on his right sat the Rev. M. W. Maclean, the Hon. Senator Macdonald, Mr. W. H. Hudson, M.P.P.; and on the left sat the Rev. Dr. Wardrop and Col. Strong. U.S. Consul here, who were the guests of the Society at the banquet. Songs were given by Mr. William Webster, Mr. S. H. Rankin, Mr. Robert Croft Hulme, Mr. James Edgar, Mr. James Ogden, Mr. Jas. Rundle, Mr. Jno. Mr. Bladd, Mr. Rutherford; Mr. Carmichael gave a recitation. A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. A. Wallers; speeches were given by Mr. Geo. Hunter, Mr. M. Waters, Col. Strong, the Rev. M. W. Maclean, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Rankin, Mr. Thos. Ritchie, Mr. Wm. Geneson, Mr. Jno. Mr. Ardagh Smith, Mayor W. H. Biggar, Ald. Petrie, Mr. J. H. MacNaughton, Mr. Wm. Mr. Henderson and Mr. W. Fenton.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell

I know, or have known, a great many men who rose from the foot of the ladder to the top, but Mackenzie Bowell began as a printer's devil in the office of the Belleville Intelligencer and came to be its owner and Prime Minister of Canada. And in connection with the life story of Lord Atholstan, the late owner of the Montreal Star, Joseph K. Atkinson, of the Toronto Daily Star; of P. D. Ross of the Ottawa Journal, of John W. Dafoe, of the Winnipeg Free Press; of J. H. Ashworth of the Glasgow Herald; of M. E. Nichols, of the Vancouver Province. They all started with their own brains and hands as resources.

That was peculiarly true of William Southam, founder of the Southam chain of newspapers, and of printing plants. I knew him when, for every hour of work he put in he got an apron at the composition tables of the Free Press job room in Hamilton, Ontario. A great man and a true nobleman.

Three chums in Chatham, New Brunswick, all poor boys, became Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada; Hon. Lord Beaverbrook, Prime Minister of Great Britain, and Lord Beaverbrook, the great financier, of London, England. A telegraph messenger boy named William Maxwell Horne, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Lambert Payne in Ottawa Journal.

NATURE IS NOT ALLOWED TO KILL OFF THE UNFIT

Some years ago an elderly physician observing a group of men and boys taking exercise in a gymnasium, remarked to the diagnostician: "When I was young I got my exercise sawing and chopping wood." And that's what these men need—some good hard work.

The old doctor failed to remember that these men and boys had work to do. It was not of productive work and they were taking the gymnasium exercises because they had no productive work to do.

Man's whole body is covered with muscles. Exercise was made not only to move him from place to place but to enable him to fell trees, gullies, climb hills and do other necessary things in daily life. And he has none of these things to do in our present civilization. He merely uses or exercises these muscles by taking regular gymnasium work or other forms of exercise. To exercise not only strengthens his muscles but gives him a good appetite, a natural appetite for plain, nourishing foods, aids his digestion and prevents constipation. In addition to working his muscles, the exercise he gains gives him pleasure, happiness is added to the health gained.

The matter of the physique and health of the people is now giving concern to all nations, not with the idea of preparing for war, but that men and women will be able to carry on at their work for a longer period and not be a charge on the community in the case to come.

"In the past, nature secured a fit race by killing off the unfit, Poor children gradually undoing nature's efforts by our greater sense of humanity toward the weak. While this is a word that we weak. While this is no doubt the right policy, it increases the necessity to create fitness."

Naturally there is more diabetes and heart disease at present than there ever was before and more than there ever will be. Many of these victims would have lived on, if they had been enabled to live to middle life.

By regular exercise and eating the proper kinds of food, the body can be brought to its best physical condition and maintained there.

Even a daily walk, which can be taken by practically every well person, will go a long way in strengthening the entire body, particularly the heart and lungs.

QUEBEC PROBLEMS

duction of butterfat per cow, and of shortening the period during which butterfat can be transformed into a dairy product. There is no doubt, that something must be done to make it attractive for producers to supply cheese factories, to continue to improve their herds and increase generally their efficiency so that it will be interesting for them to retain the British market. On this point, we in the province of Quebec are endeavoring to consolidate the dairy establishments so as to assure a sufficient volume of production in the operation. Details for the department of agriculture financially sadata and Western Dairy consolidations.

The third problem requiring a solution is that which concerns the competition for the raw product: milk or cream. The advent of improved highways making all roads accessible to trucks, was not without bringing about certain participations. Just about ten years ago, the metropolis of Canada received about 60 per cent or 650 to 700,000 pounds of milk by railroad. Today, Montreal is absorbing approximately one-quarter of its milk supply by rail. The truck, in the cities as well as in the country, has considerably reduced the distance from the farmer to the dairy. Here in the province, the truck is a menace to the proper organization of the industry. I suppose the free-traders of Ontario are getting used to the sight of three or four trucks each evening milk or cream from a group of farmers in the same concession. There is no doubt in our minds but that trucking competition for the raw product has set aside the factor of "stability" which meant so much to the dairy industry of the past. In many of the districts of the province of Quebec, trucking is the boss of concession, so much so that the industry itself is recording alarming deficits. Many plants have been subsidized, embodying suppression, flatmaking, overhead, organization, etc. What has been said until writing, of this subject has made of cheese whether for better or worse. We paid a premium on the special milk of ten cents per 100 pounds and found that we could more than offset this by the grade of cheese we were able to make. After three years trial I am satisfied that the results have been beneficial one, and I will not say that at some future date legislation will not be enacted by the Province making this grading compulsory.

Our cheese business in the West is picking up a little and I will not be surprised if, when the boat runs as we will not need some cheesemakers there, and also a full time instructor."

Mr. Sweeney brought sincere greetings to the eastern makers and members from those of the west. He extended the invitation to visit Alberta and see conditions there at first hand.

Carmel

Carmel.—The Young People held their regular weekly meeting on Friday evening. In the absence of Mrs. V. Simmons, leader of the citizenship programme, Mrs. Ross McCabe took charge. Hymn 152 opened the meeting followed with prayer by Mr. E. Horton. Agricultural lesson was taken by Miss Mildred Jones, a very interesting topic on Inlesperance "In A Worldwide" was given by Mr. Nelson Homan after which Miss Leta Priddle favored the meeting with a reading. A hymn was sung and the Benediction closed the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brownson of Eldorado and Mr. Jordon Gosnell of New Brunswick were guests and visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Simmons.

Master Hoard and Ivo Horton returned to Colborne Monday evening after Hoard gave an address at a banquet held there in the Young People's Interest. Miss Ivo also contributed to the program.

Miss Jennet Brownson of Trenton visited friends here over the week-end.

Miss Catherine Lattone who has been visiting for several weeks with friends in Peterborough, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Russel Stapley of Belleville visited on Sunday last at Mr. Chas. Brintnall's on Thursday.

The Young People of the church took part in the service held in Mt. Pleasant Church on Sunday morning, Miss Hazel Horton being the guest speaker.

Mrs. Frank Hicks is somewhat better this week.

Many from here are attending night school in Belleville.

A Christmas tea was held in the Sunday School Monday for the purpose, of gathering Christmas presents to be sent out West.

Mrs. J. Florence Gullett has been very ill for the past few weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. A. Fleming, 91 Alexander Street.

Miss Bessie Handley and Mrs. T. Dolan were hostesses at the Friends Club at Mrs. Dolan's home, Queen Street, on Monday evening.

Mrs. Charles Ridley, 82 Catherine Street, who underwent an operation in Belleville Hospital on Wednesday is progressing favorably.

Following the Mansfield-Smith wedding on Tuesday evening, the reception was held at the bride's home, Dunbar Street, and not Dundas Street as previously given.

Prize-winners at the euchre party held in the Moose Auditorium last evening were: Ladies' first, Mrs. Boyle; second, Mrs. Osler; third, Mrs. Schaar; lone hands, Mrs. Osler; men's first, W. Hammett; second, W. Ferguson; third, Mr. Minch; lone hands, Mr. Hammett.

Mr. Jack Derbyshire, a member of the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for the past seven years, who has accepted a position with the Perrival Stores, was honored by his colleagues at the bank on Tuesday. On behalf of the staff, the manager, Mr. N. V. Tilley, presented Mr. Derbyshire with a handsome pen and pencil set and expressed the regret all felt at his departure and the good wishes of his associates for his future success.

Weddings

STAFFORD—BRADSHAW

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Meadow Cottage on Saturday evening when Tom Alexander George Stafford, son of Mr. Alexander George Stafford and Velma Pearl Bradshaw, daughter of James Harvey Bradshaw, of Whitby were united in Holy Matrimony by Rev. J. E. Coen, the witnesses being Gerald Harrow and Miss Harrow. After the ceremony the happy couple left on a motor trip East. They will reside at Whitby.

Beef Heart is Economical And High in Food Values

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Menu Miss

Stuffed Beef Heart
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Buttered Beets
Cabbage and Celery Salad
Lime Mallow

Beef heart is a thrifty choice of meats, says Miss Wilson, being economical, is high in food value, too. This recipe may be used for pork, lamb or veal hearts as well as beef.

Today's Recipe

STUFFED BEEF HEART—One beef heart, three slices bacon, one cup fine bread crumbs, one small onion, finely minced, salt and pepper, lard for browning. Wash heart and remove any hard parts. Dice bacon and fry until crisp. Add bread crumbs, onion and finely minced onion, salt and pepper, and moisten with a little hot water. Fill cavity with this stuffing and sew or skewer edges together. Brown in hot lard. Add one cup hot water, cover tightly, and cook slowly until done, about two hours. To serve, slice across the heart so that each person will have both heart and dressing. Thicken the liquid for gravy.

BLANC MANGE — One quart milk, six tablespoons cornstarch, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup sugar, three-fourths teaspoon flavoring. Dissolve cornstarch in little milk, stir sugar and salt into remainder of milk, heat to boiling point and pour in cornstarch mixture. Bring to boil again, and boil three minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, let stand a moment or two, then stir with vanilla or lemon, pour into a star aluminum mold which has been dipped in cold water. Serve plain with cream or with sliced fruit and whipped cream, or whipped cream with cherry garnish.

Yellow Instructions

Oil electrical household devices such as the washing machine, vacuum cleaner, and the floor polisher at least once a year. Be sure to follow the instructions which come with the equipment.

WE SUGGEST— FOR HIM

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

WHAT TO give the boy friend, is the well around question. "Aren't men hard to shop for?" always follows.

Here is the first aid to the discouraged shopper. It is a roll-up cigarette cabinet that any smoker would be proud to own.

Of metal-lacked tan, silken back, and low and behold, the upper compartment and the drawer conveniently filled with cigarettes are exposed to view—provided you put them there, of course.

The lighter at the bottom artistically, will serve pipes and cigars as well as cigarettes. This cabinet is fashioned of duroum, a through and through alloy in a rich yellow gold effect and black enamel.

If the boy friend smokes, there are gift cigarettes with filter tips. Cigarettes that are attractive. Cartons of this wonder are also for sale, order, and if — smokes a pipe you can give him a new one, as it is also available of every smoker to collect as many pipes as possible.

of Mrs. William Cheeks, Washington; Mrs. C. R. Smith, Glen Ridge; Mrs. W. M. Anderson, Toronto; and Mrs. J. A. Faulkner, Belleville, Ont., placed fifth with a final score of 31 1-2.

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

Judging by the solar-lunar conjunction, this should be a time for promotion, preferment, increase of salary or other kind of recognition from employers, superiors, executives and those in authority or power. It is a time for seeking the support and co-operation of such persons. Also beware of an unbridled, critical or malicious tongue. Also avoid gossip and scandal.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of splendid prospects for progress, success, increase of salary, preferment, honors and others substantial forms of appreciation from employers, superiors and those in authority. Seek these with assurance and courage.

A child born on this day may be capable, responsible and ambitious, attracting the attention of employers, executives and those in influential places who may be generously disposed and assist in its advancement. But it must be disciplined in the use of a critical tongue.

Man, Wife Go Away Together

By VIRGINIA LEE

POSSIBLY some of you saw an article in a recent national magazine written by a man who advocated that when you and Friend Wife are at odds, or when you feel inclined to desert your family and run away with another woman, the best thing you can do is to take the wife and another honeymoon.

The writer did just that, he says, and it worked like a charm. He and the Other Woman were ready to leave together but decided to wait awhile, and so he engaged passage for himself and wife on a boat going to Europe. On the trip they fell in love all over again, and when they returned they discovered the Other Woman still happily married to her own husband.

You may not be able to go to Europe with your mate, but you can at least take a walk in the woods or go on an auto trip to another city and get a change of scene, some new interests and a new viewpoint. This writer declares it was amazing how the little things over which they had been quarreling, small home irritations, etc., seemed to melt away and mean nothing, and how they loved their husband just by being away from it all—together.

I believe there is something to it. A woman who has been married for many years told me recently that she and her husband and her husband were on a cruise, she felt nearer to him than she had for a very long time. They were relaxed, interested in what they saw on the trip, and some of the old romance of their courtship seemed to return.

PAT: The trouble is, Pal dear, that you are in love with the boy and he isn't in love with you. He only likes you the same as does your girl friend and maybe one or two other girls.

No, I don't believe it would be wise to tell him that he must "choose between you." That would put matters on too serious a footing, and he would probably stop dating you altogether in favor of the one he don't worry over much if he would, but it gives him a good time when they are together.

D. R.: I think it would be a very good idea, to get in touch with this girl you cannot forget. Probably the separation for this length of time has made you both realize how much you mean to each other, and you will able to get along without quarreling.

Care of Hudson Seal

Hudson seal (dyed muskrat) will have the best wearing of fur coats. But this coat, unlike any other fur, requires care to give it the best of appearance and wear.

Do not throw your Hudson fur coat carelessly over the back of a chair when you remove it. Always hang it on a wide shoulder hanger and put in the clothes closet.

Protect it as much as possible from contact with fabric upholstery in the automobile.

The best care will not prevent your fur coat from eventually wearing on the edges of the coat and cuffs, but it will prevent an unreasonably quick deterioration in these vital parts.

WOMEN LIKE LONG SKIRT

Gowns for Gala Nights and Home Preferred in Floor Length

Black velvet and matelassine de mis evening gown with velvet floral appliques.

By LISSETTE

EVEN SINCE that atrocious fashion for knee-length skirts for formal wear ran out, women have revealed in long, trailing skirts for everything except sport dresses.

On our gala nights and in our leisure hours at home we enjoy these very feminine floor-length or trailing gowns that give us such a queenly feeling.

Graceful as a Viennese waltz is the lovely evening gown of black velvet and matelassine de mis, at the left of our illustration. Notice the velvet floral appliques that border the velvet front panel, and the full ruffles that edge the decolletage.

Dark red velvet makes the trailing hostess gown, right. The bodice is shirred all over, and so are the tops of the long, full sleeves. Notice the deep cuff and pointed yoke effect in the back of the skirt, and the short train. This is a lovely and becoming gown to wear in your own home when you are entertaining informally. And, by the way, it would make a most acceptable Christmas present from Prieno Hubby to the Little Woman Hunch takes notice!

Another Tucson Gown

Imagine a hostess gown in cerise, taffeta, with braid trimming pockets, cuffs and edges of the redingote front which gives one a glimpse of green satin. If you are too bashful to visit the lingerie section of your favorite shop, you men, why not get the store shopper, or a woman friend of your wife or girl friend to do your shopping for you? She would enjoy just going about and buying one of the gorgeous gowns for you to give when the Great Day comes.

Possibly you have noticed the following fashion points: That lingerie touches as accents on dresses are in again, according to mid-season collections.

Pleats and tucks are used in a big way in the new collections and sunburst pleats are important, especially for evening dresses.

Many dresses have pleats stitched to a low hipline, then shirred their freedom. There are many different versions of the pleated dress.

Prints are being used to trim solid color dresses, or in color of the print on dress or jacket. Or the print may be used in the form of cuffs, collar, etc. Used, it gives a freshness to the dress.

Little jackets are being sponsored by both for day and evening and they are in the same type of jacket.

Sheer party frocks are decidedly popular this season.

Follow-Up Schedule Is Needed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IT IS UNFORTUNATELY necessary in the conduct of human affairs at times to refer frankly to situations which, ordinarily are not discussed, but however objectionable these things may be to many people, progress can be made in some enterprises only by facing the facts, and certainly progress has been made in the conquest of tuberculosis by a courageous acknowledgment of the situation that exists, and especially it has been made by the co-operation of those who have discovered and who acknowledge that they have the disease.

The eradication of tuberculosis, as an object which is possibly going to be accomplished within the generation of young people now alive, will be accompanied by identifying every person who has the disease. It is the prime idea of experts that when one case of tuberculosis is discovered, the household in which it was discovered must be examined in order to see whether any other person there has the disease, because we know that at present the most prolific means of spread of tuberculosis is by contact from person to person.

Little Known Disease

Consider how little our grandfathers knew about the spread of this disease. In the eighteenth century, Portal, professor of medicine at the College of France, said: "In the Journal of Paris it was reported in the year 1780 that a young man 20 years old had contracted tuberculosis by using the belongings and especially a fur coat of his father who had died of tuberculosis. Would it not be more natural, instead of this, to think that the child had inherited the disease from which his father had died, a disease which, also carried off four of his uncles and that he had died of hereditary tuberculosis?

And, yet this observation, which forbishes as slight a point that tuberculosis is contagious, has benefited in favor of this opinion. One undoubtedly would cite many observations of this kind to their proper value if one would subject them to a thoughtful and impartial investigation." Thus wrote thoughtful and learned professor of medicine. Death spared him the fate of facing the discovery of Koch's works, which proved beyond the question of a doubt the contagiousness of tuberculosis.

Villeman was the man who proved in a military hospital in Paris that tuberculosis spread from one infected soldier to another. The tragedy of tuberculosis is that it is spread from those who are closest and dearest. Every worker in tuberculosis can cite the case of one lover infecting the other. There is perhaps no more common method of disseminating infection. Opie cites work on married tuberculosis carried out at the University of Pennsylvania, which showed that if one partner of a marriage has active tuberculosis, the other will show definite evidence of the disease in 50 per cent of the cases.

Christmas Shopping For Mother With Tot

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

"SHOPPING EARLY" means more to the mother of young children than to other mothers. With a baby in arms or a tot by your side, it is hard enough for you and him at best, and terrible in a crowd. I wish children under four or five could be left at home when we shop. Yet I do have a deep sympathy for the mother who must either take the little tyke along or stay home. By planning early, your husband should find time, little children, perhaps you could work out a program with a neighbor who would keep them. At another time you could keep hers. And from the burden to you and the young child going shopping, are the hazards to his health. If you pick up whooping cough, measles or a mere cold the consequences might be serious and see the anxious hours of toil you will have if he contracts such a disease. Besides, you might lose this precious little one.

The child from five to ten can get considerable fun and education from visiting the stores. Go with him early. If there might be instances when the busy mother properly could go with the school child on a school day, to avoid the crowd. And I hope the school would not expect this mother to lie by writing on the child's excuse, "Illness".

Not well as a rule, to buy any gifts with him along—though he would well make some gift purchases from his savings or allowance. But by observing his interests you can get some good tips for later purchases. However, you have the store. Point and action have undue appeal to him. Think over how he will use and enjoy the plaything, several weeks or months hence. And if wish clerks did not encourage children to handle toys in the store. You really want to handle anything in any store until it has been purchased. Otherwise is learning wrong attitudes and habits toward property.

Be Honest With Child

If there is a Santa Claus in the store and your child wants to know if he is the real Santa Claus, or how it is he can be in Santa Claus in several stores, answer him honestly. Tell him you are playing Santa Claus. No moral harm can come to the children because of the Santa Claus age comes when parents and teachers try to force Santa Claus upon children. Better to let it die a natural age when he has outgrown fairies.

Christmas Eve is very real to the little child who grows up with parents with imagination, and they afford him no end of pleasure. In case he asks you if Santa is a real person, tell him he is, for we just play he is." Then keep on playing so.

I shall be glad to send you a list of toy suggestions and a list of book titles for children.

Exercise Keeps the Arms Slender and Beautiful

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty" BACK IN colonial days women were slender. Black velvet hands about their wrists to call attention to their lovely arms. They also wore short, flattering puffed sleeves with frilly ruffles for the same purpose. "And you can take it from me, they were mighty particular in the way of their shapely arms.

Nowadays, however, women seem rather neglectful of their arms. They do not realize, apparently, that arms require attention just as well as hips, waists and legs, insofar as loveliness is concerned. And when they begin to acquire excess weight, it is usually on them find that this unwelcome adipose tissue stores itself on their upper arms.

The appearance of that sector is really highly important in these extricky sleeves and revealing evening gowns being what they are, and flabby, flesby upper arms are most unattractive appendages.

Arms should be firm, slender, well-formed—or else they should be kept out of sight. And what woman, I ask you, wants to force her arms to serve in this sentence in a pair of wrist-length gloves?

Flabby, fat upper arms generally indicate a lack of muscular tone, and exercise is what is needed to smooth away the adipose tissue and to substitute firmness for flabbiness. There are some excellent exercises designed for this purpose. The following are practically sure fire, if practiced religiously.

Stand erect, arms at the sides, legs together. Swing the arms up and down rapidly and forcefully in a forward movement, alternating right and left.

Stand erect, arms at sides. Keeping the elbows stiff, clasp the hands overhead. Then, with the elbows still held stiffly, swing the arms downward, and clasp the hands behind the back.

Stand erect, legs together, arms extended sideways. Bend the elbows and bring the arms up to the shoulders. Then stretch the arms straight overhead, and return them briskly to first position again.

Stand erect, legs together, arms extended sideways at shoulder level. Swing the arms across the body, right arm above, then back as far as they will freely go. Repeat this entire movement, swing-

Any Skin Flaws?

If your arms pass muster as far as shapeliness is concerned, inspect them for skin flaws. Arms must not only be shapely, firm and free from excess fat, but also smooth and clear-skinned, you know.

If the skin of your upper arms has become rough and gooseflesby, do not allow the condition to persist. Gooseflesh is a roughened skin condition due to an accumulation of the horny cells of the epidermis. When taking your nightly bath, scrub your arms with a bland fleecy, brush. This will remove any deadened bits of cuticle and will stimulate the circulation in the skin. After the bath, dry your arms and massage them thoroughly with a rich cream or pure olive oil. This will correct any gooseflesby condition and will keep the skin soft, smooth and velvety.

Powder Base

Anne: If your skin is dry, apply your make-up after you have cold-creamed your face. If your skin is oily, use a mild astringent before powdering. This forms an excellent powder base for an oily skin.

Mouth Wash

Kitty: An effective mouth wash can be made by dissolving one-fourth teaspoon borax, one-fourth teaspoon peroxide and one-fourth teaspoon salt in a glass of warm water.

Lotion

Anita: A good brand of rouge will not harm your skin if you prepare it properly for its reception, and cleanse your face well after its use. Use only a reliable product, however.

Henna

Sally: The pure Egyptian henna shrub is the leaves of the henna shrub, not harmful to the hair. The chemical henna, however, contains metallic salts and may prove harmful to its health.

Poems That Live

SERMON-RUS IN CHURCH

You promise heavens free from strife,
Pure truth, and perfect change of will;
But sweet, sweet is this human life,
So swell, I fain would breathe it still!
Your chilly stars I can forgo,
This warm kind world is all I know.

You say there is no substance here,
One weak reality above:
Back from that void I shrink in fear,
And child-like hide myself in love:
Show me what angels feel. Till then
I climb a mere weak man, to men.

You bid me lift my mean desires
From faltering lips and fitful veins
To such pure souls, ideal quires,
Unwearied voices, wordless strains:
My mind with fond welcome owns
One dear dead friend's remembered tones.

Forsooth the present we must give
To that which cannot pass away:
All beauteous things for which we live
By laws of time and space decay.
But O, the very reason why
I clasp them, is because they die.
—William (Johnson) Cory.

SHEWCHUCK AND HAMILL READY FOR MAJOR LOOP

Pair of Rookies Will Step up to Bruins After Training

SYRACUSE BEATEN

Cleveland And Springfield Drew With First Fight Thrown in

(By The Canadian Press)

Art Ross doesn't need them now, the way his Bruins are, but he probably has as choice a pair of rookies ready for pushing as any manager in the National Hockey League could want.

The boys in question are Reg Hamill and Sammy Shewchuck, who both played with Copper Cliff Redmen last year and formed a junior team swept through to the final for the Memorial Cup there to be ended by Kitchener-Waterloo.

They're both being developed this night with Providence Reds in the International League, with Hamill playing a back-up game on the forward line and Sammy watching them around on the defence. Shewchuck's the lad Ross called, in training camp, "the best looking defence prospect to come to Bruins since Eddie Shore."

Hamill did his bit last night as Reds swept to a 5-2 victory over Syracuse Stars, beaten only once previously in the league race since the night Cleveland Barons and Springfield Indians played a 1-1 overtime draw in the opener of the year. The night's play didn't change the standings in either of the League's two divisions.

Found Line Beats Rival

Most of the offensive work for Providence was done by the front-line combination of Bill Mosienko, centre and Mel Hill with Mosienko supplying an assist on single tallies by each of his linemates. The other Providence goal was scored by Johnny Crawford while Eddie Cowley scored the only Syracuse goal on the night.

A crowd of 6,000 saw a real old-fashioned free-for-all, every-man-out affair at Cleveland between Barons and Indians. Les Cunningham, Cleveland centre-man and Bert Mahaffey, Springfield defenceman, were the only penalties for one tangle while four other players participated in a last period melee.

Lorne Duguid, who has been up to the Maple Leaf camp off and down again a good many times, scored the first goal for Cleveland 32 seconds after the start of the game, while Indians tied it five minutes later on Tommy Plimsen's counter.

"Bummer" Stirling of Sarnia Voted Best Football Player By Coaches and Sports Writers

Three Imperial Players Make First Team in Poll

ARGOS PLACE TWO

Ottawa Led All Teams by Having 4 Chosen For First Team

By EDDIE DULEMAGE

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—The best football player in the east this season, as the word of coaches and sports writers participating in the annual post-box sweepstakes, is 30-year-old Hugh (Bummer) Stirling of Sarnia Imperials. The nod for the Bummer developed into a general row from all parts of the sector.

Head-man on the sixth annual Canadian Press all-opposition team, driving force of Sarnia's O.R.F.U. champions, Stirling won almost unanimous approval as being the best player in his position. Only one of a jury of 23 failed to give him a first-team ballot.

The all-easterner honor roll, listing first and second teams, was announced last night with three Sarnia players on the first lineup and all other places taken by "Big Four" men. On the second team were two Interprovincial Union players, four from the O.R.F.U. and three from the Intercollegiate.

Selectors were not asked to name a most valuable player but they gave Stirling the honor anyway, giving him more first-team votes than any other player. All the Bummer has to do is live up to it here Saturday in the eastern final against Toronto Argonauts.

Sarnia Placed Three.

Placed beside the Imperial triple-threat on the backfield were Cornell Beach of Sarnia, fleet Stan O'Neil of Ottawa Rough Riders and Johnny Ferraro of Montreal Indians. The three all are former U. S. college stars. Stirling played his rugby at St. Thomas, Ont.

The Sarnia-Argo game Saturday is held to be an even-money proposition but Toronto placed three men on the first all-eastern to two for the "Big Four" champions. The Sarnia representatives are Stirling, Beach and Mike Classen, 205-pound middle wing.

The Scullers landed veteran Jim Palmer at tackle for the third year and Wes Cutler at outside for the second time. On the second team are Archibald Agar, placed Ted Morris and Bob Isbister while Sarnia had quarterback Alex Hayes.

Ottawa led all teams with four players on the first team — Arnie Luppino, fullback quarter, Tiny Herman at inside, Dave Sprague at middle, and O'Neil. Montreal had two, Ryan at snap in addition to Ferraro and Hamilton Tigers found their great little tackling duo, Jimmy Simpson, on the first team.

GALENTO RATED AS THIRD BEST

N. J. Heavyweight Placed Next to Louis And Schmeling

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—Two-ton Tony Galento, all of a sudden raised by boxing experts to third most important heavyweight in the game today, is said to be setting 'em up for the crowd every evening at his cozy beer parlor in Orange, N.J.

Afternoon and ..importance have come with a rush lately to Tony, in his twenty-eighth year. A few weeks ago he nearly obliterated Leroy Haynes, the tough negro, in a Philadelphia ring. And then, one night, Nathan Mann, a middleweight heavyweight from New Mexico, knocked all the polish off Bob Pastor at Madison Square Garden.

That left . . . Tony. The moment Mann's glove was raised Tony was bouncing around the ring on his toes with the grace of a loaded freight car proclaiming: "I could lick bob' den bums any time."

Nobody argued with him. The gunmen held was that he could.

Later it was agreed that Galento, for all the fact he drinks more beer than his best conditioned rival spars two straight days of training as a hard grind, must now be ranked right next to champion Joe Louis and Max Schmeling.

The thing is that Tony, with something like 226 pounds stacked on his five-feet, eight-inches, is built like a mule. He's strictly a "tar-room" fighter, with no more pedigree than a mud-hen, but when he connects, especially with his left hook, they go down. He hasn't failed to connect lately.

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—It was a disappointed crowd up at Fordham when they heard that Vince Bowl decision, but one and all took it like real sports. . . . For some reason, Fordham fans thought they should have seen and heard Frankie Frisch, the old "Fordham Flash," when he heard the Rose Bowl News at Milwaukee. . . . They say Dr. Branch Rickey left the room muttering "My, my" which is as far as Dr. Rickey gets on any occasion. . . . BASKETBALL

The Falcons took possession of first place in the local Y.M.C.A. house basketball league by virtue of a 29 to 18 victory over the Eagles last evening. The Eagles staged a hectic last period rally to threaten, but the Falcon cool 'em baskets short of knotting the count. The score at the halftime mark was 15 to 8 in favour of the winners. Cole and Edwards were the chief cagers for the white jerseys, while Burley starred for the losers, scoring an even dozen points.

In a rather one-sided tussle the "Wise" Owls bounced the youthful Ramblers 43 to 19. The score at halftime was 20 to 8 at half time. Tom Haslip bagged nine baskets for the winners, while McBride was the chief marksman for the losers.

The third game of a triple-header saw the Hawks win over the "Moon Y" by the score of 32 to 20. Constant play on the part of the winners, with nearly all participating in the scoring, accounted for their large score. The losers scored five points in each half, however.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

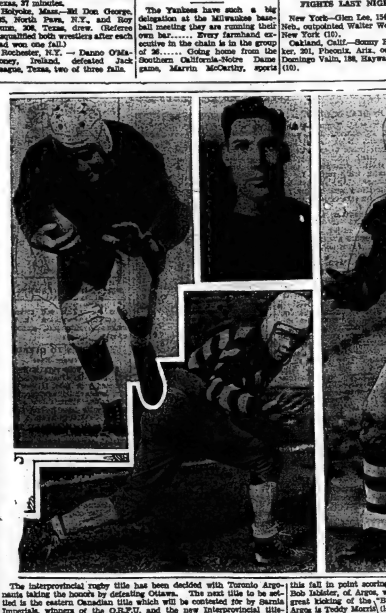
Ken J. Calling

Eddie Thomas' Redmen are improving each time out in the Kingston loop, that is judging from their showing in their first two games. On Friday night the Redmen clashed with the group-leading Kingston Garrison; who are of course tied with the Fyfes A wh for the No. 1 spot would knot the Van Horne Memorial standing but a puny bottle of fish. Manager Thomas has two of the most consistent forwards in this part of the province in Bill and Clair Jackson. These boys have improved 100 per cent. in past two years and teamed with "Frisk" Wilson can really click. So on, as was seen for the first forty minutes last Monday night. One of the paramount reasons for the Jackson Kids' success with their ability to remain on the ice. They take the jabs and jibes from their opponents without retaliation. The key marked degree and are seldom seen in the penalty box.

Charlie Hiscock guiding mastermind of sports activities around Queen's University is most unhappy, especially after the recent O.H.A. gruesings were released. Yesterday Charlie called over "Sandy" Barrows, local O.H.A. executive members and shouted into his high brow relative to Queen's team being classified as a senior "B" squad. Why not start entering our good senior Intercollegiate club in the O.H.A. and we wanted an intermediate or "A" rating," clamoured Charlie over the phone. "Listen Charlie, but you should have specified your desires on your entry form," replied Mr. Barrows. "We'll withdraw from the O.H.A." threatened Mr. Hicks, as he hung up on Personally we feel Queen's is perfectly capable of a senior senior "B" squad and will give both the C.C.A.F. Varsity and Peterboro more arguments on the ice than they anticipate. Jimmy Walsh, who is again coaching Queen's hockey, personally is confident of having a real surplus of good pucksters this year, and that comes from the feed box.

If the O.H.A. sub-committee abide by their own regulations there is no question as to the qualifications of any Napanee hockey players in the future. They should play in Belleville. The O.H.A. rules distinctly say a junior player may with his nearest O.H.A. town, to be determined by the shortest travelled road. Yesterday Sinnett and Hastings County road foreman, informed us that the old Dyer road from Marysville to Napanee,will be maintained open and kept clear winter by the Highway Department and likewise that all traffic directed into a provincial highway. Today it is a recognized and very much travelled road and makes Napanee over two miles closer to Belleville than to Kingston. This should be welcome news (?) to Wally Hart, Art Hale fans who like to see Manager Thomas was instructed to provide the above information to the sub-committee before Saturday in order to protect his case in the matter, however.

It is practically impossible to please all; for instance Manager Thomas feels his fencers should have been grouped with Napanee, Trenton and Picton with the Belleville entry given a bye, and the other three a "C" classification, however, "it is living in valley from Peterboro to Cobourg and Port Hope, as why not include the Peterboro and Havelock juniors in the Lake Shore group and save mileage for all?" protested Mr. Thomas yesterday, but apparently there will be no dreadful changes in any of the groupings after this date, however. This is all Belleville should care about well—a good senior "B" group, a splendid four teamed intermediate "A" loop and a fairly good junior set-up, which should be the nucleus of the local amateur pastime plenty of their pet winter diversion.



There hasn't been any too much talk about basketball in and around the town's cage circles locally, although Fred Hicken, over at the "Y" is keenly interested in the project. Still Brockville Kingston, a local convener and will undoubtedly include Belleville in the old Eastern Ontario set-up. The local hoopsters might far better apply for affiliation in the Lake Shore or Central Ontario loop, along with Peterboro and others. In the meantime Coach Jack Dickens is trying to whip together a girls' team. The O.S.A. group for this section will convene Friday at Cobourg when the local contingent will seek further information on the matter.

Portadown again won the Irish football league and cup contests defeating Celtic 2-0. The results of other replays in the first round Irish cup games yesterday resulted Linfield, Newtownabbey 3; Ards-ton-Stanley 1; Dartford, Bournemouth 8; Gainsborough 2. Port Vale 1; Bradford City 0. Walker Celtic 3; Halifax Town 0. York City 1 and Leeds City 2. Rochdale 5, That Bradford City-Walker Celtic game was one of the largest cup tie scores of recent years, fourteen goals being scored in all.

The ball brains a letter from Elmo F. "Bobby" Rosenfeld, president of the Ladies' Ontario Hockey Association, requesting a possible entry to that organization from Belleville and district. The annual meeting of the L.O.H.A. will be held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, commencing at 1.30 p.m. this Saturday. Persons interested in forming a ladies' hockey team in this district can either attend the meeting on Saturday or write Miss Rosenfeld in care of the Globe and Mail, Toronto. A few years ago Belleville boasted of a great ladies' hockey team, perhaps that interest could be revived by some interested group or commercial organization before the season closing. The meeting is Dec. 4th.

Do you remember when Tommy Paul, then Welsh light-heavyweight boxing champion, won a dull 10-round decision over Eddie Wenstob of Hamilton, Ont., at London two years ago tonight. There was nothing dull about "scrappy Tommy" when he stunned experts and fans this year when he staged 15 rounds with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

Acquired during Theodore Roosevelt's administration and used for musicales, the White House gold table, cut in a good condition, cost eighteen thousand dollars.

The interprovincial rugby title has been decided with Toronto Argonauts taking the honors by defeating Ottawa. The next title to be settled is the eastern Canadian title which will be contested for by Sarnia Imperials, winners of the O.R.F.U. and the new Interprovincial title holders. Sarnia are admittedly a great football machine and Argos must be equally as great, since it takes a good squad to defeat Ottawa Rough-riders when the chips are down. In big Ormond Beach (top LEFT), the Ottawa star, a great plunging and passing fullback, is being sized up, one he is hard to stop. In Hugh "Bummer" Stirling (top CENTRE), they also have another great player. He led all senior rugby players in Canada this fall in point scoring, and when the two teams meet for the title, Bob Isbister, of Argos, will have his work cut out trying to match the great kicking of the "Bummer". One of the several unsung heroes of Argos is Teddy Morris (lower LEFT), who occupies the flying wing position on the squad. Teddy can also do his share of plunging when he is called upon. Bill Stukins (RIGHT), younger brother of Annis Stukins, handles the club on the Argo forward line. He is a clever young quarterback, and generally pulls the right play at the right time. To relieve him, the Argos can put in his brother, Annis, who is also a capable man at this important position.

Pasteurized Process Cheese Advancing Says Singleton

PASTEURIZED OAL. ONE

Dairy And Cold Storage Commissioner Heard by Delegates

PAYS TRIBUTE

One of the most exhaustive reports presented to visitors and members of the Ontario Creamery yesterday of the tenth annual convention of the Central Dairymen's Cheesemakers' Association was given in an address covering every phase of the situation during the year by Mr. J. F. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Ottawa.

Paying tribute to the first Dominion cheese convention held in Belleville in the city yesterday, Mr. Singleton declared the show to be without doubt the finest that had ever been arranged. To the officers of the Central Association, who had arranged the exhibit he tendered his congratulations upon the success which attended it.

He turned at once to a complete review of the situation during the past year.

"While climatic conditions during the season now closing have been somewhat unfavorable so far as production figures are concerned, quality is concerned, prices received for cheese have been higher than a year ago and the make relatively high-as compared with the price of butter. The average price per pound received Montreal during the same months of 1936 was 21.63 cents per pound as compared with 23.74 cents per pound during the same months of the present year, an increase of 2.26 cents per pound, equivalent to 10.45 per cent. The increase in the price of butter during the same season was greater than in the case of cheese. Expressed in another way, during the months May to October inclusive of 1936, the value of 170 pounds of cheese was equivalent to the value of 100 pounds of butter, whereas during the same months of 1937 the value of 190 pounds of cheese was required to equalize the value of 100 pounds of butter. This is a basis of the relative value during these months of 1937, which is only a point or better equalizing its value 12 pounds of cheese, whereas the same relative value during 1936 was equivalent to 17 pounds of cheese. Cheese is also taking on relative importance in relation to butter, higher in price than butter and the relative higher price of cheese seems to be reflected in increased make of cheese both in this province and in Ontario and also by a decreased make of butter in 1937 when both in all Canada and in Ontario.

196 Million Pounds

The supply of cheese in the United Kingdom consists of cheese produced in the Dominions, though small quantities of cheese, mostly of specialties, are imported from different European countries. Before the war the volume of supply varied from year to year but during the years 1935 the total supply consisted of approximately 736 million pounds of home production and 196 million pounds of imported cheese.

The cheese production in the United Kingdom is manufactured in factories and in farm dairies. Those made in the factories being generally superior in quality than those made on the farms.

While many engaged in the cheese trade in the United Kingdom consider that the best English and Scotch farm cheddar cheese are superior to the best factored cheddar cheese, it is generally conceded that not only is the Canadian product of a higher quality than any other imported cheese, but also is the highest quality of any source, domestic or imported which is available in Britain. In this connection a letter from Mr. Jas. H. Henderson, Dairy Produce Grader (in charge) at the Toronto office of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, now in the United Kingdom, written under date of the 30th October, 1937 with reference to a cablegram he made on the manager of the cheese department of a distributing store organization which annually buys and matures approximately 25,000 tons of cheese, Mr. Henderson states "he (the manager) advises that his best trade existed from March to May 15th dars, and the next best cheese was good old Canadian. Mr. Henderson is thence to mature the cheese and age them suitable for his market, yet there were set aside imported into England could equal our Canadian cheese and he also highly commended the holdings of the Canadian cheese on the factory shelves just as long as possible before offering them for sale." Officers of another firm which Mr. Henderson visited about the 3rd November, advised him that the cheese imported into the United Kingdom will mature and hold its high quality longer like Canadian cheese. Mr. Henderson ended his letter with a sentence stating "remarks such as these make a call complete and I am getting similar remarks from most of the trade here."

Quality Improved

The quality of New Zealand cheese has been improved greatly during the past two or three years and it was somewhat surprising to learn that cheese from the Union of South Africa was considered by many to be of superior quality as compared with the New Zealand product. The Union of South Africa is not an important factor in the United Kingdom cheese supply at present is concerned. During the year the quantity of cheese actually supplied to the United Kingdom by South Africa was only 1,000 tons or less. Imports from that source is not sufficiently important to be listed separately and is shown under "re-exports from other countries." Australia is a very important source of supply, the quantity supplied to the United Kingdom during the year from that Dominion in 1936 having been only slightly more than 21 million pounds. Practically all cheese from Australia and New Zealand is made from pasteurized milk. It is believed by many in the trade in the United Kingdom that cheese made from pasteurized milk will not during subsequent storage develop undesirable cheddar cheese flavour, and further that cheese made from pasteurized milk are not able to carry longer than about three months from the date of manufacture. Also cheese made from pasteurized milk when cut and allowed to stand for a few hours develop a hard surface with a glazed appearance and are not attractive in sale. These hard surfaces must be cut off with resultant loss to the retailer. Manufacturers of cheese in the United Kingdom and the Union of South Africa are being urged to adopt pasteurization of milk for cheese making and it is considered liable that in the near future factory cheese from unpasteurized milk will be available only from Canada.

The relatively high quality of Canadian cheese combined with the fact that it is made from unpasteurized milk has given Canada an important advantage in two directions. Canadian cheese is for reasons already mentioned considered to be most suitable for maturing purposes and one factor which has enabled Canada to have bought for maturing purposes, 50,000 boxes of cheese during 1936 is believed to have been about 40 million pounds, of which a considerable greater part was made by very firms. The process cheese produced in the United Kingdom has a much more highly developed cheese flavour than has the process cheese produced in Canada and this higher flavour is secured by using a high percentage of matured cheese in the milk. Approximately 60 per cent of process cheese are, therefore, exports of large quantities of Canadian cheese. One manufacturer of process cheese, probably the largest with greatest output, stated that last year he bought 140,000 boxes of Canadian cheese, or about one-fifth of our total exports to the United Kingdom but this would amounted to 745,000 boxes. Our Mr. Henderson writing under date of the 4th November, 1937, reports that on a visit to this plant and stated that on the day of his visit there was in storage there more than 100,000 Canadian cheese. Another manufacturer of process cheese stated he bought about 75,000 boxes of Canadian cheese and another important manufacturer buys Canadian cheese to the extent of about 90 per cent of his requirements. It appears that at least one-third, probably well up to one-half of Canada's exports of cheese to the United Kingdom are used in the process cheese and to the chain store organization referred to above. These outlets are usually located at or in the vicinity of London and no doubt this is a partial explanation of why London last year took 58.5 per cent of our total cheese exports to the United Kingdom. While these outlets appear reasonably assured, there is a distinct advantage in such a high proportion of Canadian cheese being utilized for process cheese, as its identity is lost.

Down to 1934 the general trend of the marketing of supply from New Zealand was upward, and down to 1933 the trend of the volume of the supply from Canada had for several years been downward. Since the government took over the volume of supply from New Zealand has been downward while since 1935 the annual supply from Canada has been increasing. The Canadian supply situation has probably been the most important cause of the increase in the price during the Average London quotation for Canadian cheese for several years prior to and during 1936 and also of the decline in the premium in the average quotation for Canadian cheese since 1933.

It will be observed that while the premium for Canadian was greatest during 1935 at 1.94 cents per pound it declined to 1.53 cents per pound during 1936. For the first ten months of 1936 the premium was 1.39 cents per pound but during the last months of 1936 and 1937 the premium declined to 1.0 cents per pound while during the six summer months of 1937 (May to October) the premium dropped to 1.26 cents per pound as compared with a premium of 2.37 cents per pound during the same six months of 1935. There seems also to have been considerable concern during the past season among Canadian milk producers on account of prices of Canadian cheese in London as compared with prices of New Zealand cheese and it is evident that the quantity of Canadian cheese to be marketed through ordinary retail trade channels in the United Kingdom this year will be considerably more than double the quantity so marketed of two years ago.

Some firm observers in the United Kingdom are of the opinion that with increased consumer appreciations and buying power, the market cannot absorb a greater quantity of cheese than their 1936 volume of supply without causing a depression of the whole price structure.

The make of cheese in New Zealand is not expected to fluctuate greatly during the next few years. The make of cheese in the United Kingdom is decreasing and it is believed that with volume of imported cheese being maintained at about their present level, imports of Canadian cheese cannot increase by a quantity greater than about than the decrease in the make in the United Kingdom without depressing the whole price level—that is, provided consumer purchasing power remains at present levels.

The decrease in the cheese production in the United Kingdom during 1937 as compared with 1936 is estimated by the Min. Board of the United Kingdom, be approximately 34 million pounds which will not differ greatly from the increase in the Canadian make during 1937 plus the increase in Canadian exports from Canada to the United States during 1936 will exceed those of 1937.

In view of altered conditions in the trade in the United Kingdom, it is now more than ever before necessary for manufacturers and exporting of Canadian cheese to do everything possible to produce cheese of the highest quality and deliver the same to the United Kingdom in the best possible condition.

Importers and other dealers in Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom are unanimous in their complaints concerning Canadian cheese, either as to quality, condition, regrading, or otherwise. But individuals have complaints and one visited the United Kingdom notes from time to time conditions which might justify a basis for some complaints. While these are not general, it may be worth while to mention the more important ones.

Indistinct Markings

One was from time to time cheese boxes on which vat and date marks are not neatly applied. Graders should be instructed summer requested to be more particular in regard to proper marking of boxes.

Cheese Deserving of Grade

Only one person in the United Kingdom mentioned this, but the individual who did so seemed very concerned over the difficulty. It was suggested that Canada should discard the box now used and adopt the New Zealand type of crate. It was pointed out that the actions taken in Canada to retain the cheese in the factories for a longer period before shipping together with the maintenance of high temperatures in curing rooms during the fall months have been instrumental in preventing to a large extent difficulties concerning the development or soft ends of cheese.

The high a percentage of Canadian cheese arrives in broken boxes and while no dealer interviewed in the United Kingdom pay more for cheese in sound boxes as a basis for cheese of similar quality in boxes of which the ends or portions have been broken, some effort must be made to lessen the condition of Canadian cheese boxes on arrival in the United Kingdom. As in connection with the trade in butter it was suggested that to obviate breakage of boxes in the United Kingdom, such as New Zealand, Australian, South Africa, Irish Free State and Holland use crates. Canada is the only country using a box and for this reason it is a distinctive package, which unfortunately does not permit the box to be placed on the retail counter, thereby limiting its sales mark. For these reasons it certainly appears advisable to endeavour to have cheese for the retail trade used rather than to abandon it in favour of a crate. Further, cheese in crates cannot be as easily turned out for inspection and are more liable to damage than cheese remain such as rats and mice.

The Dominion Dairy Laboratory of the Dominion Department of Agriculture at Ottawa is undertaking a study of construction of cheese boxes with a view to securing improvements. The grading should be strengthened. When this study is completed it is expected that the regulations under authority of the Dairy Industry Act will be amended to provide for the new standard specifications for cheese boxes.

Price and Marketing

October and November

Many dealers in the United Kingdom claim that as a result of past unsatisfactorily experiences with Canadian October and November cheese, they have entirely discontinued buying cheese made after September. This, of course, explains the "thin" market, for cheese made during October and November and the lower prices usually realized for them. The unfavorable comment concerning these cheese is that they do not mature properly. By this is meant that they do not ripen, but break down, but rather they do not develop the characteristic flavour of cheese flavor.

However, the higher temperatures maintained in factories during the fall months of 1935 and 1936 and in warehouses at Montreal during the fall of 1936 have greatly improved the quality of these cheese and three dealers in the United Kingdom stated that cheese made in November 1936 were carried until July 1937 and developed characteristic cheddar cheese flavour.

Foreign Matter in Cheese

Complaints are received from time to time of foreign matter being found in Canadian cheese. This difficulty is not confined to the Canadian product but instances or foreign matter being found in our product are altogether too frequent. While some foreign matter found in cheese no doubt comes to the factory with the milk, it can only gain access to the cheese during the important processing of the milk. While at the World's Dairy Congress, held in Berlin August, last, it appeared to be a very efficient strainer was on exhibit and many of those who witnessed for the purpose of showing it to cheesemakers at different conventions but unfortunately it has not yet been received. Such undoubtedly the greater part of the foreign matter found in cheese gains access in the factory and the most common foreign matter seems to be bristles and straws from vat brushes and brooms. The manufacturers of process cheese use some very delicate automatic machines which are likely to be seriously damaged by foreign matter in the milk purchased for the purpose or showing it to cheesemakers at different conventions but unfortunately it has not yet been received. PURCHASE MILK ON GRADE BASIS DELEGATES TOLD

C. H. Barr, Director of Dairying Lays Schemes Before Convention

DEFECTS ANALYZED

Director Tells Makers How to Improve Make of Cheese

Possibility that cheesemakers of this Province may in future pay for all cheese milk on a grade basis, which would provide for three classes of it only in the factory, that of Special Grade, First Grade and off Grade, was advanced at the Wednesday morning session of the fourth annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, which concluded its meeting yesterday, by C. H. Barr, Director of Dairying for the Province of Ontario, who presented a rough draft of the plan to the Association.

Grade at Factories

Under the new scheme, which seeks for betterment of the industry all milk used in the manufacture of cheese would be graded at the cheese factories where it was to be manufactured, and the cheese maker, management for the milk would be based on the above outlined grades, standards and premiums for the different grades of milk would be observed.

The Special Grade which would include any lot of milk that was clean in flavour, free from antiseptic, and its acidity not exceeding one-hundredths of one per cent., 20 per cent. when delivered at the factory, and shall be delivered in bright, clean, sanitary cans with clean sweet covers.

First Grade Milk, which would in the main be any lot of milk which was in flavour, a slight sediment, and not exceeding twenty one one hundredths of one per cent., 22 per cent acidity, when delivered at the factory, and when delivered in cans showing some slight rust.

Off-Grade milk, which would include milk which is not clean in flavor, above salient acidity, and over twenty-two one hundredths of one per cent., 22 per cent acidity, and is delivered in leaky, rusty or unsanitary cans. Such milk would be rejected at the weighing station.

Basis of Paying

Mr. Barr explained the matter in which payment under this scheme would be made:

(a) A premium of one cent per pound butterfat shall be paid per the fat in special grade milk over fat in first grade milk.

Following is an example of paying the patrons on this basis for any payment period:

Fat in Special Grade Milk 1200 lbs. Fat in First Grade Milk 1200 lbs. Total fat 2400 lbs.

After deducting all charges for manufacturing Cheese No. 1, there is a sum of $480 due the patrons. To pay this amount to the patrons must proceed as follows:

Premium for fat in special grade milk, 2400 lbs. fat at 1 cent is $476 (amount due patrons for first grade fat). $476 divided by 2400 lbs. equals 20.75 cents (price for all first grade fat). 20.75 cents less 1 cent premium equals 20.75 cents (price for all special grade fat)

Proof of Accuracy:

1200 by 20.75c—$267.00 to pay for first grade fat. 1200 by 21.75c—$261.00 to pay for special grade fat. $480. total due for all fat.

To pay the individual patrons multiply the fat delivered by the price per pound fat to be paid in the grade their milk was placed in.

The whole idea was merely a scheme which he presented for the view of cheesemakers and members of the industry, Mr. Barr carefully explained.

"All I can do is try and make this picture for you," he declared.

Speaking with regard to the Ontario director declared himself ashamed at one of the cheese which had been shown by some makers that had been on the cheese markets. "In all my years of official experience I have never seen quality go down so much as it has lately.

"As director for twelve years, I ask you what has gone wrong . . . what is the slip?"

Defects Analyzed

Various defects in export cheese were analyzed by him in his close, personal talk—not to the makers, he explained—but to the makers.

"What did you not do?" he asked personally, "to get these defects."

The cheesemaker is the most important man in the industry today, yet he doesn't realize it."

"I'd like to just put a little dairy school now, but I'm not going to attempt it," Mr. Barr told them.

Cheese. "You know—every one of you, what 'sweet' cheese is. Why? Think about them and then avoid these defects next year," he said.

"Not cheese that will cause you to be responsible for a large percentage of complaints . . . not cheese in the milk, anyone can see and knows that when the milk is first inspected.

"Rancidity—how many men can tell the cheese will be rancid when the milk is being poured out?" asked Mr. Barr.

"Sometimes—not often," declared he makes.

"Not often," agreed Mr. Barr. "That is one of our biggest problems."

Rusty Cans Blamed

Rusty cans and pails were held responsible for most rancid cheese by the speaker. "Last year we never had as many cans repairs and soldered and new cans purchased, yet we still had the rancidity. What can we do? Its enough to knock the wind out of you. I'll be glad to have some one tell me what to tell the instructors about clearing up rancidity."

The present year was also stated by Mr. Barr to have produced more cheese with many "unnatural defects than off-flavour" product. "This is the poorest year for mechanical defects. What has gone wrong?" We can't blame the whole thing on the factories.

Some of the cheese made this year are so full of voids it resembles Swiss cheese, declared Mr. Barr, pointing to another defect.

"Thousands of dollars in the eastern district were lost a year ago through cheese with voids wrong between the cow and Montreal."

Blame Some Out-

"What have we been doing the last ten years to encourage better milk from the patrons?" continued Mr. Barr. "It was said Ontario cream couldn't be graded, but it has been done. "To improve quality of cheese are we going to have 40,000 cheese picked out at last year—what are we going to do?

"Are we forgot the question of grading milk in three separate vals; we'll have to knock the ends of the factories out to do that. What do you think of paying a special grade milk, grade all of it at the factory where it is to be made into cheese?"

Mr. Barr outlined the policy of a special grade, a first grade and a third grade milk, with a premium on the good milk. Milk could be delivered with acidity content of not less than .20 per cent., clean and in bright, clean cans with tight covers. The first grade milk would be that "clean in flavour not exceeding .22 per cent. acidity, and with over twenty-two hundredths of one per cent. acidity, and is delivered in rusty, leaky or unsanitary cans." Such milk should be graded, penalty should be rejected at the weighing stand.

Grading Milk

"As makers, you have to play the game with me," Mr. Barr declared.

Grading of milk, however, was not the only answer to the cheesemaker problems, continued Mr. Barr, the cheesemaker must look after the smaller details. "Sort ends," he declared, in cheese were one factor. some factories even this important matter of daily turning the cheese to avoid this being neglected, experience had shown him.

Conventions were all right it was claimed, but more important development and improvements were gained at meetings sitting on cheese boards, Harper Avery Simms stated Mr. Barr stressing the need for such small factory meetings.

The speaker returned to the question of grading milk. At a future meeting he declared, the same matter could be discussed. "Do you think that something can be done about it?"

Address from Mose

"Some may think this idea of mine for grading milk is a fool idea," continues, the dairy industry has got to have some ideas. It is time we made advances some," impressed Mr. Barr.

The matter of farm inspectors, advanced by a speaker at the opening session, was also touched on by the matter of money, the question of which was left with the farmer.

—the informations the inspector must give to keep, were given by Mr. Barr, Director of Dairying for the Province. "This information is of a given and one consideration. If any changes are made in the milk, we will tell you—you've got to give him a good reason for it."

Pat Is Taken

Following the conclusion of the address of Mr. Barr, Mr. Barr, a poll, expressing the opinions of cheesemakers on the matters which had suggested by Mr. Ernest Brennan.

"This is a fine idea Barr; if anyone has any option, or suggestion for goodness sake let's have it," asked Mr. Barr.

"Do you see any real obstacles in the way of this scheme to be tested early have to pass this; let it be tested out in the factories this winter," said Mr. Barr.

"The matter of acidity in various kinds of milk and which varying conditions of pasture were responsible for variations in acidity," Mr. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, was suggested.

An average ratio on acidity would have to be set up by the provincial dairy commissioner could use their own judgment, agreed Mr. Barr. "Probably .20 per cent. is about the limit; what we want to know—what the makers think."

"Maybe 21 per cent. would be too low, and .22 too high acidity to put some out of business."

Makers Must Grade Milk

"If we grade milk the cheesemaker will have to be able to do this."

Mr. Barr referred to the constant cleaning of buttermakers' cans, and the ease of grading a pound of butter, the cheesemen are handicapped in this respect. "Perhaps we could grade milk," it was suggested.

"Milk are per cent. added away from this convention that will help us," declared Mr. Barr, "and from summer" challenged Mr. Barr.

"Let's have a show board about how these perfect cheese here—the best ever made in Canada—were made," he said. "Let's have no analyzed report on these beautiful exhibits, but let's have a show board in the fall into practice next year."

Mind, I'm not criticising the convention, it's a splendid one, but what can I do a way to tell the cheesemaker next spring?

"Cheese conventions here don't cause a ripple in the dairy industry; what its wants is just good cheese. The reputation we've got was obtained by conventions unless we can send out a 100 point cheese," concluded Mr. Barr.

YEAR DIFFICULT FOR THE MAKERS STATES T. J. HICKS

Many Long Periods of Hot Weather Cause of Grade Drop

DEFECTS OUTLINED

Large Proportion Coarse And Dry in Texture

First Grade cheese produced in the Province during the past year received slightly lower gradings than during the same period in 1936, but the year was a difficult one for cheesemakers of the country, members and visitors to the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' annual convention which closed in Belleville yesterday were told by Mr. Thos. J. Hicks, Senior Dairy Produce Grader in the Dominion Department, in an illuminating address presented.

"We have just concluded a manufacturing year which has proved a very difficult one for the cheese makers of this country. A year with many long periods of hot weather resulting in manufacturing conditions which tested the ability and skill of our makers. In spite of this high average ability, unfavorable weather conditions took their toll which is reflected in the production of a lower percentage of first grade cheese," he told his large audience.

"Taking the present year up to October 30th we find that the percentage of first grade cheese for the Dominion is 1.34 points lower than for the same period in 1936, and below any year since 1926. The grading of creamery butter is practically the same as they were last year so that we must look elsewhere for the cause of this decrease in top quality cheese. The quality of a finished product seldom surpasses the quality of the raw material from which it is made. This is a fact which all cheesemakers must continually bear in mind if the present reputation of Canadian Cheddar cheese is to be maintained.

"Our grading figures prove that a fairly large number of cheesemakers are to make a large percentage of good cheese, even under the most unfavorable weather conditions. This points definitely to their ability in grading the milk properly and in applying all rules that will not make first grade cheese, and also to the exercise of expert care and expert methods in manufacturing.

"The main defects found in cheese offered for grading during the hot summer period of the past season were—slight gas, ragged texture, a general tendency towards openness, while in many properties were coarse and dry in texture, and a run of the cheese that they will never mature into smooth textured cheese. Cheese of this type has also has such a wonderful reputation on the markets of the world.

"Again I am familiar with the grading standards and know that these defects are responsible for a loss in total points, and if the defects are more pronounced the total points are correspondingly lost until the real blade cheese are placed in the grade. It is during this time the graders that large quantities of cheese fall short of a quality because of carelessness on the part of the makers. A little more care and interest in the finer points will not only help to improve the quality of the cheese, but will help to make it may cause. I am pleased to say, however, that these defects are not so prominent this year as they were a few years ago.

"I have already mentioned that the most common defect in workmanship found in cheese this summer, and especially during the early years, was openness and coarse, dry, slightly mealy texture. Needless for me to say that openness and coarse, dry, slightly mealy texture are very difficult to grade as most undesirable. Cheese in the shipment as the texture of cheese that are slightly coarse, dry, slightly mealy when the cheese are under 10 days old, and it was necessary to do so defer the grading on some lots to be in the future would improve as the cheese matured.

Not Enough Attention

"Ever since cheese grading was instituted officers of our Department have drawn the trade's attention to the greater neatness in the finish and branding of the cheese and boxes, and while there has been some improvement still finished cheese, and boxes that is usually unsightly detracts from the whole appearance of the shipment very materially, if still believe that a great many makers do not pay enough attention to their work from the time the curds are salted until the cheese are ready for shipping.

"Carelessness in marking the registered number, vat numbers, date of manufacture and weights on boxes is a common practice with some makers and we were compelled to over the grade on several lots of cheese during the past season on account of irregular or illegible branding.

"Another common mistake made by makers is reversing the figures representing the date of manufacture that is no way the figure indicating the months of the year is over or before the figures representing the day of the month. In every case these dates had to be corrected before the cheese could be graded.

The circular mailed to every cheese factory before this registration came into effect stated clearly how the date should be placed on both cheese and boxes and also the location of a box numbered by branded. If this circular has been mislaid you should write the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner Department of Agriculture, Confederation Building, Ottawa, and ask for a copy of same the number of which is 115. This circular should be placed on the wall of the room where the cheese are boxed so that it can be referred to when there is any doubt as to how the boxes should be marked.

Monthly Premiums

Referring to objectionable flavours, slightly tainted milk would seem by far the most prominent especially during the month of May and the first part of June when the grade was lowered on hundreds of cheese on account of this defect, however, the number of rancid cheese greatly decreased as the season advanced. The proportion of other objectionable flavours such as acid, cheesy, flat, etc., were the same as last year.

The grading figures I am going to give you today cover the period from November 26th, 1936 to October 30th, 1937. The following cheese grading figures for the same period one year ago.

An official statement of cheese graded at the Belleville and other centres of Ontario is given after Mr. Hicks.

Fall Cheese

I wish to congratulate the makers of Fall cheese upon the high quality of their fall cheese. A great percentage of that finished and boxed almost as much maturely as the summer cheese, due to the fact, I believe, that many makers have paid more attention to the temperature of their curing room this year than any previous year since records were kept. The result is that the coarse, loose, flat, and never matures properly and which are so objectionable to the grading inspectors, is gradually disappearing. The other objectionable types of fall cheese are also prominent a few years ago and which are not desirable, such as those with a weak, pasty texture cheese that sometimes is of fairly good body when green and curdy, but mature too fast and, on account of the excessive moisture, develop a bad flavour.

This is still a common defect in the flooths of October and November which, I believe was responsible for many of the poor grades of cheese this fall. than any other single defect. I think that they will pay for a maker to know that his curds are green cheese are weak in body under the conditions. A weak curd room is about the same as in ovening a weak dough in a hot oven and room temperature around 60 degrees.

The firms who handle fall cheese are again co-operating with our Department and I think they will improve the texture of our late cheese. I find that the type found in the cheese are stored to a temperature of from 50 to 60 degrees. Remember, temperature is important in each of these rooms and it is recommended that a temperature that is maintained in most of these rooms, as shown by these instruments.

We all agree that the first two weeks is the most critical time for green cheese, and specially the late fall make, therefore, if the makers will do their part by keeping their curing room at the proper temperature, and not crowd the cheese on the shelves so that the rind will not properly cure, I feel that, in fact, I am reasonably sure that the reputation of our fall cheese will continue in improve, he stated in conclusion.

Resolutions Passed at Convention

The appointment of a qualified bacteriologist for the Province, who could work with cheesemakers and factories in their efforts to better the industry; the request that the serving of cheese be allowed in the Province of Ontario; that Ontario in an attempt to increase the consumption of cheese and the request that the Ontario Hotel Keepers' Association be asked to serve cheese in the further consumption of cheese in the Province by making it a "side order" as it is at present will be brought to the Ontario Dairy Cheesemakers' Association through official resolutions passed at the concluding session of the fourth annual convention in this city yesterday.

The resolutions presented by the Resolutions Committee of the Association received unanimous endorsement of the members present at the final session.

The following were passed:

Belleville, Dec. 1, 1937.

The Honorable the Minister of Agriculture,

Ottawa, Ontario.

Resolved that this Convention desires to express its appreciation and commendation of the work carried out by the Division of Dairy Research of Dr. E. O. Hood and further wishes to urge upon the Dominion Department of Agriculture the desirability of extending the scope and facilities of the Division, so that many technical problems confronting the cheese industry may be dealt with both fundamentally and on a practical basis.

Ask to Serve Cheese

To:

The Honorable the Prime Minister of Ontario,

The Honorable the Provincial Minister of Agriculture,

The Chairman of the Liquor Control Board.

Parliament Bldgs., Toronto, Ontario.

Honorable Sirs:

We, the members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association in annual convention here assembled hereby go on record to the effect that we consider that it would be a most opportune time to allow the serving of cheese in the Beverage Rooms of the Province for the following reasons:

That such a step would tend to bring our product more than ever before to the consuming public, increase its popularity as a food and greatly increase the consumption, a state of things which if achieved should bring about highly beneficial results.

We do not consider if this request were granted that there would be any appreciable encroachment on the business at present enjoyed by hotels and restaurants of our Province.

We, therefore, Honorable Sirs, would most respectfully request that the necessary steps be taken to order that cheese may be served in Beverage Rooms if possible, by the beginning of 1938.

Want Bacteriologist

To:

The Honorable the Minister of Agriculture,

Province of Ommona,

Ottawa, Ontario,

Sir:

The Honorable the Minister of Agriculture,

Parliament Buildings,

Toronto ,Ontario.

Honorable Sirs:

We, the members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association in Annual Convention here assembled earnestly desire to bring the following most important facts to your notice:

Whereas the percentage of "Undergrade" cheese during 1937 has increased to an alarming extent over that of previous years.

And whereas a very large percentage of this cheese is classed as "Second" and "Third Grade" are so graded because of flavor defects, such as: Rancid, Slightly Rancid, Fruity, and "Off", flavours.

And whereas it is extremely difficult and often impossible for the Cheese Makers even with the assistance of their local Instructors to discover and determine the actual origin, source and cause of these undesirable flavours.

And whereas this large percentage of "Undergrade" cheese not only constitute a standing menace to the reputation of our product, but also also responsible for serious financial losses to our cheese factory Patrons and to ourselves.

And whereas we consider the present the most opportune time for determined and concerted effort on the part of everyone directly concerned in the Cheese Industry to definitely ascertain the causes of these objectionable flavours in order that they may be eliminated as much as possible.

Be it resolved, therefore, that we respectfully suggest and request that the full time services of a fully qualified bacteriologist with a good working knowledge of cheese making be placed at the disposal of the cheese making industry of Canada, and that the Dairy Staff be relieved of the making of tests and investigation in connection with the bacteriological defects in our cheese.

Help to Raise Price

To:

The officers and Members of the Ontario Hotel Keepers' Association

Dear Sirs,—

We, the members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association here assembled realising as we do that the consumption of cheese in the Province at large and being desirous of increasing the consumption of our product and if possible raise a food, do most earnestly call upon the Members of your Association to place Canadian Cheese as a regular item on all your menus throughout the Province instead of being merely "side orders" as at present.

The taking of this step would tend to increase the price paid to our cheese factory Patrons for their product and thus make for an increase prosperity throughout the Province in which, of course, your Members are interested.

We, therefore, trust the subject matter of this resolution will meet and receive your most favorable consideration.

Tender Thanks

To the Official and Unofficial Speakers:

Gentlemen:

We, the members of the above Association, beg to tender to you a our sincere and hearty thanks for your presence at this our Tenth Annual Convention; for the very helpful and interesting addresses you have delivered before us, and also for the valuable and interesting information and advice contained therein.

Your presence here has demonstrated that you add the Department, Institutions and Organizations, which you represent are in accord and sympathy with the aims and objectives of our Association as well as having the best interests of the Cheese Making Industry at heart.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw.—Mrs. Bart Stiles visited friends in Norwood over the week-end.

Mr. Bruce Parker of Peterboro is spending a carload of dirty coal during at the depot this week.

The Advent Sunday service at St. Mark's Church on Sunday evening last was well attended despite the inclement weather. Canon Swayne preached a stirring sermon, pleasing both young and old, with his subject "Manners and the Little things." The beautiful bronze chrysanthemums on the altar were a memorial to Minnie Stocker who died four years ago, from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morley Stocker.

The social evening and euchre held by St. Mark's Men's Club on Friday evening was a decided success, twelve tables being played and a number of visitors from Marmora being present. The regular meeting of the Springfield Women's Institute was held on Wednesday afternoon last at the home of Mrs. John S. McKeown with a large attendance, also visitors from Wellman's Corners and Sylvestons.

The meeting was opened in the usual manner by Mrs. Geo. A. Bailey, president, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. W. J. Barlow. The roll call, "Home can law is woman right in home" was responded to by several members.

An appeal from the Hospital for Crippled Children, Toronto, was read by the secretary and $10.00 was voted in this cause.

It was decided to again pack a number of Christmas Boxes.

The secretary was authorized to apply for the Government grant again this year. It was also decided to have the exchange of Christmas gifts at the December meeting.

A family in dire need was reported by one of the members and after some discussion it was planned for some of the ladies to help them in any way possible.

The meeting was then handed over to the programme committee in the absence of Mrs. Geo. Thompson, convener, when Mrs. Bailey took charge.

"Current Events" was ably given by Mrs. Mel. Fitzgerald and the motto, "He who would enjoy power must pay the price" was given by Mrs. J. F. Wright. A very fine paper on [illegible] by Mrs. A. P. Williams on "Music" and Community Singing" also said 90 percent of every nation want peace." Mr. C. R. Chesterfield, Bartlett, gave a splendid address on "Law Enforcing," and a solo was rendered by Mrs. Walter Heath, delegate to the Belleville Convention, gave a full and interesting report of the convention. The visitors present were called on for a few remarks and all replied briefly.

Mrs. Lasar Brown put on a contest after which the meeting was closed. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess and a social half hour was spent.

THE TEST

By M. IRVING KING
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

The Hon. Reccoe Fielding had money; had been abroad; had been in congress; was respected by the community; and had a fine daughter. A well-conducted and dutiful orphaned nephew lived with him and acted as his secretary and general factotum. A charming young lady, daughter of a former friend, and Reccoe's ward, was also an inmate of his home and was devoted to her guardian. His life glided along smoothly and pleasantly and yet he was not entirely happy. Every mental has a pest of one sort or another and the Hon. Reccoe was no exception. The obstreperous part of Fielding's pest was the fact which had to do with his marriage. Married as a "love match," it had turned out most unhappily; and though the woman in the case had been dead, cold and corpse-for after all it had been only an incident in the busy life of Reccoe Fielding—had given a certain twist to his mind which caused him to doubt the existence of such a thing as pure and disinterested love—to mind the poets and the romance writers to the contrary notwithstanding.

James Bigger and Florence Radcliff, his nephew and his ward, were, however, absolutely sure that the poets and the romance writers were correct. So, after watching the matter over in his manner economy with young people in a similar situations, James went to his uncle and told him he and Florence were in love with each other and, therefore and consequently, wanted to be married.

"Nonsense!" cried the pessimistic uncle, "it's prodigality, not love, that is the matter with you two. I suppose that, sooner or later, you are bound to get married. Not to marry like a reasonable being. Pick out a girl with a good old family position, and ambition, and worldly knowledge enough to assist you in making a career for yourself."

The old man then delivered a sermon to Florence upon the folly of the absurdity of marrying for love and intimated that she could do James an irreparable injury by marrying him. This last argument so impressed Florence that when James proposed that they go off and get married at once the Hon. Reccoe notwithstanding, she tearfully but firmly negatived the proposition. Fielding waited, for the two young people closely for awhile and then began to have misgivings. "I wonder," he thought, "if there is the possibility of such a thing as a successful love match, after all."

Two months later the Hon. Reccoe Fielding died. After the funeral the "family lawyer" asked James and Florence to call at his office. There he showed them a will of the deceased in which he divided the large fortune evenly between his nephew and his ward upon the condition that they sign a written agreement not to marry each other. If they refused to sign such an agreement, or having signed it violated it, then the fortune would go to a research society and James and Florence were left penniless.

"Let the society have the money and be hanged," said James. "For my part I absolutely refuse to sign any such agreement. You say the same don't you, Florence?"

"No-o-o," faltered Florence tearfully. "I'll si-g-n.

"Then I should ruin your prospects in life if I married you—and I see now that I would. I'll save you the risk for that."

"What!" cried James, "are you going to let the prejudices of a dead man who happened to have a been unfortunate in his being able to discriminate between spurious love and the real stand in the way between us? Or is it, perhaps your dream of the money you would get?"

The taunt brought Florence to her feet with flashing eyes. "James Bigger," she cried, "you know very well it isn't the money."

"Of course it isn't, girl," laughed James. "Ruin my career if you married me, indeed! You'd only ruin my life if you don't. We both refuse the conditions of the will, Mr. Come-to-Jesus." She started to follow her lover; but the lawyer called them back.

"My instructions from my late client were explicit," he said, "that you agreed to the conditions of this will I should burn this envelope unopened. If you refused I was to open it." He took from a large envelope a will signed two days after the one he had read in which Fielding had bequeathed his fortune to his nephew and his ward unconditionally.

"Poor, dear Mr. Fielding," said Florence, "he sought to test the reality of our love by mere money! It will stand harder tests than that —won't it, James?"

"You bet," said James. And through life it did—and stood them successfully.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLS

"High, Wide and Handsome"

The long-braided "High, Wide and Handsome," proclaimed to the world with stirring adjectives of praise ever since it made its grand premiere on New Year's eve, came last night to the Belle theatre, where Paramount's gorgeous and vivid story rang up their own triumphal knell to heavy commendation of the audience that have gone before. There is no exaggeration in counting this picture one of the most fascinating melodramas that has been brought to the screen in many years.

From the opening scene, when Irene Dunne's glorious voice rings out with that gay title song which everyone is humming nowadays, this great action musical literally has its audience by the ears, and long will their zazz ring with the songs which were contributed by those masters of melody, Oscar Hammerstein II and Jerome Kern. What this inspired team did for other musical successes of recent years they have done thrice over for "High, Wide and Handsome." And Miss Dunne enters into the spirit, singing such songs as "Can't Forget You," "Allegheny Al" and "The Folks Who Live on the Hill" with appealing grace.

Opposing Miss Dunne, that new oncoming star with the low seductive voice, does her bit in the way she sings "The Things I Want."

The Rilling Airs of the Hammerstein-Kern creation keep pace with the highly dramatic theme of the story.

Reuben Mamoulian, who won the New York Critics' Circle Award for the best direction of 1932, will probably win new laurels for his work on this stirring saga. He utilizes his rare talent for synchronizing tuneful melody with dramatic narrative by making the infectious tuneful songs carry along the story with remarkable sequences of brief acting, both as the fearless man of action and the romantic lover.

The picture gives you one of the most vigorous climaxes ever to be witnessed in screen drama, when elephants, clowns and acrobats of an entire carnival stage a free-for-all with the ruffians who are sent by the carnival to stop Bowl from completing his job.

In the brilliant supporting cast are Akim Tamiroff who makes a sinister impression as a stubborn gambler, Raymond Walburn as a lighthouse role as the garrulous medicine show doctor and Elizabeth Patterson who does a delightful characterization of Scott's grandmother. Ben Blue and Virginia Brasley give excellent comedy touches. Richard Bickford makes an impression as a ruffian and Irving Pichel and Louise Lilliendahl add to their list of well played "rube" roles.

The March of Time

A special added attraction on the same program is THE MARCH OF TIME, offering 20 minutes of absorbing drama from the cavalcade of our stirring modern times. Among its highlights is war in China, what the dedicated war in China is all about! March of Time tells the complete story from the ancient beginning to the tragic present, besides other interesting British events.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.15 and 9.10. The feature attraction begins at 2.50, 7.25 and 9.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Cloistered"

After two thousand years of deeply veiled mystery, Hollywood Catholic Church has, at last, drawn back the curtains that so long held secret the life of nuns within a cloistered convent; and, as a result, Robert Alexander, a great screen artist, has produced in "Cloistered" one of the most curious, most beautiful, and most inspiring motion pictures in the annals of the cinema.

"Cloistered" is not a motion picture for Catholics, although, of course, every Catholic will see it. It is, rather, a picture for every woman, and child, who has ever wondered about the work of the Sisters, or who has ever speculated upon their lives within a cloistered convent. It is a revealing picture, for it omits nothing, colors nothing, hides nothing. It is an authentic and complete record of every detail of the devotions, the work, and the recreation within the Cloistered Convent of the Good Shepherd, one of the largest of all the Catholic orders.

The photography is of rare beauty, a beauty that reflects with rare eloquence the very spirit of the Sisters for whom it was filmed. So are the players in this stirring drama. Reverend Father Matthew Kelly explains the significance of the many curious rituals in fine poetic prose.

"Cloistered" is now showing at the Capitol theatre until Friday night.

Love in a Bungalow

Romance blooms in Hollywood in the dooryard and laughter floats out the windows of the house managed manage in "Love in a Bungalow" now at the Capitol theatre as an added attraction to the main programme, featuring Nan Grey and Kent Taylor in the roles of modern sweethearts.

Randolph Scott portrays a girl who is helpless in a business in which he has been designed to help sell other homes. She cares for the home with natural feminine delight. The inevitable happens in this film when she wants to possess the place for herself. It's fighting time.

Then a young gallant enters her life. Romance springs up between them and the fight is on. Their romance is woven around the love spats between them, and the unusual method that the pair use to raise funds for purchasing the house.

Delightful glimpses of the production is the seven room bungalow created by John Harkrider. It is complete in every detail.

Each room was planned to be thoroughly liable, attractive to the eye and practical in use.

Last complete show starts at 2.40, with "Cloistered" shown at 4.00, 7.15 and 9.55. In addition to this grand double hit show the latest News Events compiled from all the world and a pictorial educational featurette "Going Places."

Prisoners Exchanged By Russia, Germany

Moscow, Dec. 2 (AP)—Forty-four German prisoners were reported by diplomatic sources today to have been exchanged within the U.S.S.R. for an equal number of Russians held in Spain.

The exchange involved crews of the Komsomol, sunk by Spanish insurgents, and the Smidovich, seized by Spanish rebels. The 44 Germans and approximately 500 others still under arrest were among hundreds of alleged spies in the drive against foreigners, on spy and wrecking charges.

Diplomatic sources said that because 500 Germans still are under arrest, the German Embassy was not satisfied by the single exchange.

The first oil well in the United States opened on August 22, 1859 at Titusville, Pa., and it produced 400 gallons a day.

Lovely Irene Dunne co-starred with Randolph Scott in the musical romance "High, Wide and Handsome," now on the Belle screen.

ship Idzumo, near the Japanese Consulate, but did no damage.

Japanese Claim Victory

Japanese said that in an air battle near or over Hangchow Japanese planes shot down thirteen of China's new Soviet-built airplanes.

On the Yangtze Delta battleground Japanese fought their way toward Soochow where groups of foreigners were believed to be in danger.

Heavy Japanese bombers showered projectiles ahead of infantry units driving toward Nanking and Muhu. Yangtze River port 60 miles southwest of the almost-deserted Chinese capital. Another Japanese column was aimed at Hangchow, Chekiang Province seaport to the south.

The United States consulate and mission authorities expressed fears for the safety of thirteen Americans, mostly women and children, reconced at Mokanshan or nearby, Mokanshan is near the Chekiang-Anhwei Provincial border, in an isolated region in the heart of the Chinese battleground.

Chinese press reports from the war zone were that Chinese forces had launched a counter-attack south of Shanghai. The reports said Chinese had captured Kwangteh in Anhwei Province and still held Kisanyin forth, the key of Yangtze River defences north of Shanghai.

FIRST SESSION

measures brought in yesterday. Premier Hepburn said there would be no night session Friday as Mr. Macaulay is holding a reception for the Governor-General.

Debate is promised on one bill by Mr. Macaulay, who said on that the two bills had passed co-operation to the Premier. The one objected to by the Conservatives would extend immunity from judicial process to officials appointed to carry out duties arising from Acts of the Legislature.

Can Appeal Decision.

Another bill would transfer commissioners appointed under the Succession Duty Act from officers whose judgments have the power of law into fact-finders. Appeal could be taken to the courts from their decision.

A recent injunction halted investigation of an Ottawa estate until trial of an action attacking the validity of the Succession Duty Act clause giving commissioner-investigators the power to give judgments having the effect of a court order.

The third bill, all having been introduced yesterday by Attorney-General Gordon Conant, provides that the legislation now before the House shall have the force of law when assented to notwithstanding its non-inclusion in the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1937, now nearing completion.

The House opened without formality. Hon. Albert Matthews, recently named Lieutenant-Governor, in formal day attire, read the speech from the throne. Hon. Norman Ripel was re-elected speaker.

How to Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is usually the effect of a sore condition, the third bill, all having been introduced yesterday by Attorney-General Gordon Conant, provides that the legislation now before the House shall have the force of law when assented to notwithstanding its non-inclusion in the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1937, now nearing completion.

The House opened without formality. Hon. Albert Matthews, recently named Lieutenant-Governor, in formal day attire, read the speech from the throne. Hon. Norman Ripel was re-elected speaker.

India plans a campaign to increase industrial production.

During the daily recreation period, the army tries to the hangrage of laughter, reflecting the severity of their long hours of silence. A scene from "Cloistered" now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

David shrugged. "We don't know. She left a note for Chet saying she had been waiting to get out on her own and she thought the time was about ripe. Didn't say where she was going or what she expected to do or when she would be back." He said then, "She's spunky, San. Wish I had the guts to pull out and get a job."

Ronny was lost in thought for a time, but at last, as David's words penetrated to his consciousness, he said:

"It takes more guts to stick to school, pal." And then, with barely a pause: "You don't suppose she and Stephen Eddy are off on a quiet honeymoon?"

David scoffed. "You wouldn't think so, if you could see Stephen pacing the floor and asking with every other breath, 'But why did she do it?' Where could she be? Didn't she even hint what she planned to do?" You never heard so many questions."

Ronny didn't talk much after that and when David spoke to him, he nodded or shook his head, absently, as if he were only vaguely conscious of what had been said. And once, peering over the rim of his cup, David saw a half grin come on Ronny's lips and almost instantly go away again.

They were leaving the hotel dining room when Ronny asked:

"Do you fit to hold any kind of job? I mean, did she have any practical training?"

David found the question amusing. "She could play a tune on a portable typewriter with two fingers," he said. "Typed all her own letters, too. Oh, I'll tell the world she's had practical training in the select circle of the Charles Brooks; a particular plain vulgar, Ronny."

At the next corner they halted and David held out his hand.

"Will you be on hand tomorrow morning? It was an urgent request, not a question.

"If they don't shove me out in the province. I will," Ronny said. "But whether I'm there or not, you're taking it without a grunt."

David grinned. "Sure I am. But I'd just like for you to be there to see that I do. You've been pretty swell to me, Ronny. If you ever get in a jam, you know whom to call on."

"That's right—and I won't lose any time calling." And then as David's left hand came apart: "Don't worry about Sandra. She'll get her full share of thinking accorded a couple of wrecks and hot-foot it back for the home fire. It's my guess that with a million other girls who know their jobs and are working hours, she'll starve if they didn't."

David's eyes followed Ronny until he was lost in the crowd, then swung around and suddenly widened.

"San.....!"

"David—I've been trailing you and Ronny since you turned out of the hotel!" Sandra panted, pulled his head down and kissed him. "How did they take it, David—Chet and Stephen?"

"About as you'd expect," David told her, with a shrug. opinion seems to be that you'll come to in a few days and hustle home. Are you on your way, darling, San?"

"In exactly thirty minutes." Sandra smiled, then suddenly turned to a man who is known as the most ruthless newspaper editor in the whole city or New York. I've tried all the respectable sheets and they're turned me down so I'm going in for scandal. Going well enough, too. Got a hearty stockholder, as it happens, so there's more than a chance that I'll click."

David wondered how any editor could be "not so bad." As she looked pretty keen to him in her dark green frock with its military jacket and cape and the dinky little green hat. And there was a twinkle in her eye, besides, that made him suddenly envious.

"Where are you staying, San?"

She said she had spent the first two days at a hotel.... "Then I ran up to Greenwich and Emily Stewart and I talked all night and the next day she came back to town with me and introduced me to a girl who manages her advertising photographs and has a slick little two-room apartment. I've been there since and she wants me to go on staying there. Perhaps I will, if I get a job. Don't you like her, David? You'd like her. She's small, built like Venus de Milo and thoroughly disillusioned about everything. Her name's Fannie and—"

"Personally," said David, "I don't care for the name. But then I don't have to, do I?" He took something from his pocket. "Could I make a little contribution to the cause of personal liberty? I can spare just about fifteen bucks at the moment."

"I'll send you an SOS if I need it," Sandra said, grinning... Abruptly the grin faded. "I don't know how this is going to work out, David, but—it isn't a lark. I had to do it to save my self-respect.... What did Ronny say? Did you tell him?"

"I've said—that you'd be back in the nursery in a few days. Stephen's the one I'm sorry for, Bonnee. He's practically frothing at the mouth. Why don't you give him a call?"

She shook her head, firmly. "If he wants to wait he can; if he doesn't—I don't mean to sound hard, but I simply had to do this and I know no one will ever understand why." And then as if to change the subject: "Are you still one of her mind all along: "I must run, David—see you in court." She kissed him and ran.

INSTALMENT 6

The Flash rolled far less upon hearing the name thrust upon the shrill scream of forced headlines and the morbid character of its sensational picture. Just one of the tabloid was enjoying an enormous circulation and a steadily increasing advertising revenue and, for both, the board of directors had more than thanked their lucky stars that they had stumbled upon a man like Matt Slattery.

Matt's title was managing editor, but, because the latter title were worn by others, he was actually city editor and circulation director as well. Those who knew both Matt and the Flash said they were made for and the same, that one was as hard and ruthless as the other. Matt loved nothing in this world so much as newspaper, in his own sheet and owing to two exceptionally long years, he disliked and distrusted all women.

Tweed

Seldom has this community witnessed such a demonstration of friendliness as was shown on Monday evening, when more than a hundred persons from Tweed and Lodgerocon gathered at the old W. J. Graham home to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reynolds and family to the community.

For the past twenty-five years Mr. Reynolds was resident in the Canadian West at Bracken, Sask., where he owned a farm of 320 acres. Crop failure have followed one another during the last nine years with discouraging regularity enough to dishearten even the most courageous and hardy pioneer. With little prospect of future success Mr. Reynolds and his family, acting on a suggestion of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McNichol, turned their faces eastward to seek a home in more favourable surroundings and Lodgerocon district was their choice.

Mrs. Reynolds and five children arrived in Tweed some days ago, Mr. Reynolds arrived on Friday with a carload of settler's effects, with the help of some of the neighbouring farmers and the Gordon Steel Works truck, everything was soon taken out to the new home.

Rev. R. H. Nicholson, pastor of the United Church to which the Reynolds family belong, members of the Women's Association, members of the Church and of Lodgeroom community planned to gather at the home on Monday evening to welcome them and in some measure help them to forget the trials and privations which they had endured during the decade, shortly before eight o'clock they began to gather and no one came empty handed. Soon the spacious rooms of the fine old farm house were well filled.

The evening was most pleasantly spent in games directed by Rev. Nicholson, interspersed with community singing led by Mr. R. H. Connor.

After a few words of welcome Rev. Nicholson called on Mr. Sam McCrea a neighboring farmer of the district to read an address of welcome on behalf of the Lodgeroom people. Mr. McCrea recalled the time when he first came into the community as a stranger and the kind welcome he had received. "There may be as good neighborhoods elsewhere" said he, "but there are certainly none better." Regretting that misfortune had driven the newcomers from their Western home, Mr. McCrea stated that it was really a fortunate circumstance as it brought them to this district.

Mr. W. E. Tunnacon expressed his pleasure at being able to join with the neighbors and others in welcoming Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds and family to the district and wished for them the greatest happiness and prosperity that a bountiful province could bestow.

"There are many organizations of different kinds, said Mr. Tunnacon, men's clubs, women's clubs, societies and lodges all doing good work and radiating a friendly spirit. The community is the greatest and best of all organizations, and whoever invented the word community and the community spirit deserves the thanks of all men. It takes in every man, woman and child. The health, happiness and prosperity of each member of the community affects everyone.

"This house in which we are gathered, is one of the oldest in the township. It was built nearly one hundred years ago and stands today as a monument of the skill and foresight of its founders and builder. Just sixteen years previously the first two white settlers or Hungerford settled in this township. They were pioneers who carrying their home out of the wilderness, help to foster this community spirit.

"During the last 37 years, since the turn of the twentieth century we have seen the advent of the radio the aeroplane, and the motor car. Are we any happier today in this day of speed than we were in the days of the horse and buggy? Young men then, with their hitching and fancy lap-rugs went to the church to find the young women who later became their wives. At that time no one cared how showy the horse went.

"To," interjected Sim McCrea "and the horse would go with the reins looped around the whip."

The church was then the centre of the community spirit. It is not so today. What will happen in the years to come? This community spirit we should foster and we did it by heartily welcoming Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds and family.

Mr. W. H. Sayers, Reeve of Tweed, said it was a great pleasure to welcome people to the community and hoped that they would not feel as strangers in a strange land. They will make a success of their new venture as they came with determination as the pioneers who built the old farm houses and cleared the land.

Mr. Reynolds was deeply touched by all that had been said and done. "It is far beyond anything I have ever experienced before. I can't say how much I appreciate it as it is something quite new to me and I thank you from the bottom of my heart."

The ladies of the community provided refreshments and the evening dispersed following a short prayer by Rev. Nicholson.

DEBATING CLUB IDEAL HOSTS TO OFFICE SEEKERS

Mayoral, Aldermanic And School Trustee Candidates Heard

CLUBROOMS PACKED

Eddie George Presides as Chairman at Get-together

Mayoral, aldermanic and school trustee heavy and light artillery laid down light barrages last night with the verbal guns of the candidates firing the opening salvos on the 1938 municipal front when they swung into action as guests of the twenty-sixth annual "bun-feed" of the popular Wharf Street Debating Club.

The session was far from being one of the fiery cavalry that characterized the municipal election forum meetings of years ago. In fact the meeting resembled more the annual get-together of a family club with the boys basking in an atmosphere of jovial camaraderie, rather than a forerunner of what promises to be one of the most closely contested civic elections in years.

The club rooms were crowded an early hour with potential aldermen, mayors and school trustees, looking the picture of optimism, scattered at intervals throughout the crowd. Blue smoke curled upward from innumerable cigars, cigarettes and pipes long before Chairman Ed George rained the cavels and temporarily silenced a singing contention who judgement was the life of the party and restored order sufficiently to call Mr. Jamieson Hone, mayoral candidate, the first speaker of the evening, to the floor. Previous to this honour, ex-Mayor George Tice officially welcomed the visiting candidates to the club in a brief address.

Humorous Spice Added.

Highlighting the evening's entertainment and one that added a zip and zest to the party was the presence of a local citizen who added humorous spice to the program that at times had the audience in an uproar.

Droll witticisms and interruptions with a vocabulary that would put Dan Webster to shame, coupled with musical sound effects and paraphrases from the greek poets that peculiarly fitted the situation, created a comedy that at times forced the most serious-minded elector to relax in broad smiles, came from the witty tongue of the local comedian.

However, candidates in the various fields of municipal work hewed strictly to their platform lines; did not indulge in personalities and while some more than others elaborated on the different planks of their respective platforms, the main body confined their remarks to their qualifications and appeals for the support of the electorate of Foster Ward and the city.

The feeling of good-fellowship was general. Even the speakers not directly associated with the forthcoming elections, Messrs. Morley Buff, and George A. Reid, Parks Commissioners in their brief addresses in which they only touched on the work of their department; Mr. W. C. Mikel, George Putman and Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C., caught the infectious spirit of the occasion and confined the most part of their short address with touches of humor. Alderman Clarence Clegg however, gave the meeting a full report on the activities of the Public Works Department.

The possibility and impossibility of introducing ways and means to reduce taxation in the city perhaps was the keynote of the majority of the addresses of the various candidates. Certain civic improvements also found their way in some of the planks but on the whole the candidates spoke in a general vein of the way in which they could and would serve the interests of the electorate if successful in the forthcoming election.

Mayor Attending Legislature.

During the evening telegrams of a humorous nature purporting to be sent from famous Hollywood movie stars to members of the Debating Club were read by Chairman George. Mayor R. D. Arnott called suddenly to Toronto to attend the sittings of the Legislative Assembly sent his regrets at being unable to be present. Raymond Carr also sent his regrets but appealed for support in a letter sent to the chairman.

A temporary serious note was struck when a member of the audience challenged Alderman Leslie Lewis regarding his stand on the importation of industries and the Industrial Commissioner. Mr. Lewis publicly questioned Alderman Andrew Kennedy on this point. The irrepressible comedian again entered into the verbal combat, interspersing Alderman Kennedy's corroboration of Mr. Lewis' statements with pantomimic funny interruptions and the situation was smoothed over.

Those addressing the meeting were:

Mayoralty candidates—Alderman Harold Armstrong, Alderman Wm. Harvey, and Mr. Jamieson Hone.

Aldermanic candidates—Aldermen E. Baldree, Clifford Saragar, Burton Jennings, Andrew Kennedy, Laurie Lewis, Glen E. Thompson, Messrs. MacLean Haig, J. Edson Logan, Robert H. Martin, Sidney Howell, Benjamin Safe, Isaac Stephenson, Harry Rollins, Leonard Foward and Dr. John Marshall.

Four candidates did not put in an appearance.

Candidates for the positions of School Trustees who spoke were the chairman of the Board, H. J. Allin; H. R. Pellerly, George H. Griffin, William J. Harrison, Dr. Kinnear, Reg. Moncrieff, Arthur Wesley and Ray Enfelt. Seven other candidates were not present.

The meeting closed with members and guests of the club being served with the regular "bun-feed" menu.

Candidates for the various municipal seats will be the guests of the Belleville Yacht Club at their club rooms tonight where questions of the day will be discussed.

Plans are being made for boring a tunnel, about a half a mile long and over 100 feet wide, under the Kiel Canal for the new Reich motor road from Hamburg to Flensburg on the Danish-German border.

AMBROSE SMALL STILL MISSING

18th Anniversary of His Disappearance Occurs Today

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—This is Ambrose Small Day in Toronto.

There will be no ceremonial on the city hall steps.

A few old-time policemen still on the job in quieter divisions may be reminded of it and scratch their heads uneasily.

About the only definite observance is in one or two newspaper offices, where police reporters will look through dusty, faintly yellowed files and then do a story about this being the eighteenth anniversary of the disappearance of Ambrose Small, and no word has been heard from him yet.

Ambrose Small, you may remember, was the little, brown-haired owner of a chain of theatres. He sold them on Dec. 2, 1919, deposited the $1,000,000 initial payment in the bank, and that same evening took off—or was taken off—for other parts.

TORONTO - 240 JARVIS STREET

A divorce, planned with all the finesse for which they are famous as bridge players, has been arranged by Ely Culbertson and his wife, Josephine, both of whom are shown ABOVE. Though their matrimonial venture together will be severed, their bridge playing partnership will continue as before, they said. Mrs. Culbertson, now en route to Reno to secure the divorce has been assigned half of her husband's property and income which will assure her of an income of $100,000. Reason for the "break up", according to the couple, centres about Culbertson's temperamental moods which made living together impossible.

The thirtieth anniversary of his accession to the Swedish throne will be celebrated on December 8 by King Gustaf V, (ABOVE), who ascended the throne in 1907 upon the death of his father, King Oscar II. Born on June 16, 1858, Gustaf is one of the oldest living kings in Europe despite his 79 years is active in court circles as well as in sports.

Taking the first step in the formalities that will eventually make them man and wife are Virginia Bruce, blonde film star, and J. Walter Ruben, studio executive shown at the Los Angeles marriage license bureau where they filed notice of their intention to wed. Miss Bruce who was the wife of the late John Gilbert, and Ruben plan to be married in the bride-elect's Bel-Air home on December 18.

A large gold samovar, valued at $20,000 was overlooked by the thieves who robbed the gallery of Alexander Sheaffer (ABOVE) in the International building of New York's Radio City. The robbers managed to get away with antiques and works of art valued at $30,000. All were once the property of the last of the Romanovs.

Ontario's Lieutenant-Governorship was changing hands when the photographer snapped the photos shown (ABOVE). At the (LEFT) is Albert Matthews, new Lieutenant-Governor for Ontario, signing official papers after he had been sworn into the post to succeed Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce (RIGHT), who relinquished his position and went back to private life. The new Ontario vicegeral head of a Toronto investment company, will not use Chorley Park, official residence of the Lieutenant-Governor, for all furnishings are to be auctioned off and the home put up for sale. This is in accordance with Premier Hepburn's statement of several months ago, when he said the province of Ontario would not continue to pay upkeep of the residence following Dr. Bruce's term of office.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—Held down by moderate profit-taking in the mid-day operations today, prices on the Toronto Exchange displayed an improved tone in the final phase and the close was irregularly higher after showing a pre-noon loss of noon. Dome advanced to 49 for a point gain on good volume and in the base metals Nickel led the recovery to show a half-point gain to 42 at the close. Western oils had profit-taking to contend with and displayed nearly firm throughout the session.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—Mild support for steels and a handful of specialties helped stem a declining tide in today's stock market.

Although declines were about in line with yesterday's languid proceedings, early losses of as much as two or more points were reduced or cancelled near the final hour. Transfers were about 700,000 shares.

Grains rallied after a poor start and other commodities did better.

Still on the losing end were General Motors, Chrysler, Du Pont, Allied Chemical and General Electric.

Board Room Gossip

Market Unnerved

For the first time in several weeks, copper on the London market this week had its initial important recovery setback as a succession of new low prices all through the past month. The price has rallied 23 a ton so far this week. There has been American, British and foreign buying of copper sharps in the past week. Although there was a sharp decline in price of the metal, wiping out earlier advances this year, up to quite recently sales were small. Demand is presently increasing. Although the end of it is regarded as short covering, English interests say that the government and trade in Great Britain will have to consider considerable quantities of copper soon.

The two point decline to 30 of National Steel Car on Tuesday was undoubtedly precluded to some extent on the report that Canadian railways might postpone their projected programme of rolling stock buying. As pointed out previously, the company's revenues have been large since the close of the fiscal year on 30th, and apart from railway equipment, the management is reported as having promoted numerous other profit-making enterprises. Present rolling stock is bound to come out during the next few months and the stock is well regarded in some quarters at current levels.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal, Dec. 3—Stocks of dairy produce in store here are lighter than a year ago on all lines except fresh eggs, decreases being shown in butter, cheese and storage eggs. The totals, in lbs. for butter and cheese and boxes for eggs, with comparisons with a month ago and year ago, for the same number of firms reporting, were announced at the Board of Trade yesterday as follows.

	Dec. 1 1937	Nov. 1 1937	Dec. 1 1936

off with the loot.'"

"That's Not Hush Bargain"

"A great Old Country like ours with a fine and noble tradition cannot enter into bargain like that," he exclaimed as the audience cheered.

"I tell you quite plainly, that peace would be a thieves' bargain. You are never sure thieves will keep their bargain. When they have finished other things, can you guarantee what will happen to Egypt, Palestine and the Sudan? Can France be quite sure what will happen to North America."

The "cowardly" policy of the last few years, Lloyd George continued, was "simply sad and shameful, not only of democracy, but of Britain and the Empire."

"Snake" to League

He attacked the Chamberlain government for its "snake" to the League of Nations.

"The chances of a disarmament agreement have been thrown away" he said. "How after blow has been struck at Geneva. The League is now stricken with palsy, its right arm paralyzed, its right arm withered, its voice feebly indistinct. Impotency."

Mr. Lloyd George declared for a settlement with Germany, but insisted peace must be safeguarded on honorable terms. He predicted that if France were Spain would join the anti-Communist pact which now binds Italy, Germany and Japan. France is already in alliance with the other two dictators, he said.

"Must Be Just Peace"

"Germany and Italy are doing their best to give him victory," he went on. "We are doing our best to make it impossible for the others to fight for freedom in Spain. It must be a just peace," he pressed, "a peace of honor, a peace that will endure, a peace that will enable nations great and small to live their own lives and develop their prehension that some monster is their own duties without the menace upon them, trample their country down and tear it to pieces and devour it as Poland was devoured in the 18th century, as China is being devoured today."

"You cannot frighten a tiger from its prey," he warned, "by waving playthings in its face."

'YOUNGER BLOOD' HEADS BRITISH COMMAND

Dynamic Major-General Is Made Chief of Staff, Historic Precedent Set

Viscount "Tiger" Gort is Raised to Rank of General

COL. ADAM DEPUTY

Both Lord Gort And Col. Adam Know Air Problems

London, Dec. 3 (CP)—In a bold step aimed at revitalizing the high army command with younger blood, the War Office today announced sweeping changes, without regard to seniority.

Field Marshal Sir Cyril Deverell resigned as Chief of the Imperial Staff, and two other members of the Army Council resigned to make way for younger officers.

The young, bachelor civilian Minister of War, Leslie Hore-Belisha, appointed "Tiger" Gort — Major-General Viscount Gort, V.C. — dynamic, driving leader of the general staff as Chief of Staff and promoted him to General. The changes take effect Jan. 1.

Widest Precedent Made.

It was the first time in history an officer of Major-General's rank was promoted without an important office. To assist him the War Office appointed Colonel John Dill Deputy Director of the Imperial General Staff, a post which also was vacant for some time.

It is predicted that both Lord Gort and Col. Adam have had close acquaintance with air problems.

Lord Gort is the only British

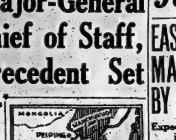
Butter and temperature! On May 8, 1911, Scott's thermometer read 77.0 degrees below zero at 8.15 p.m. It was the lowest temperature he experienced in his Antarctic expedition. Later he was then 900 miles from the South Pole. He said: "Butter, when stabbed by a knife, flew apart like very brittle toffee." He found that temperature and wind were the most important factors in weather motors there. The South Pole averages colder than the North Pole in almost all months while that for the South Pole for December and January (summer) is 30 degrees. He said that the severity of the Antarctic climate is shown by the low maximum temperatures reached rather than by the low minimum temperatures.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Pressure is high over Gulf of St. Lawrence and Atlantic States, also in the Mackenzie valley with relatively low pressure to the immediate west and northwest of the Great Lakes. A storm of increasing intensity covered off the middle Atlantic coast, is moving southeastward and precipitation have occurred in some parts of Northern Ontario and Quebec though in other districts of eastern Canada the weather has been fair. It is becoming colder in the Prairie Provinces with light snowfalls.



Lake Superior: Moderate winds; partly cloudy, Saturday, winds shifting to northwest and increasing; cloudy with light snow and colder towards night.

Manitoba — Northerly winds; cloudy and becoming colder tonight and Saturday with snow.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Northerly winds; cloudy today and Saturday with snow in many districts; becoming colder.

SERIOUS LOSSES AMONG CATTLE

Animals Near Queensboro Suffering From Cattle Flu

Queensboro, Dec. 3 (Special) — Several farmers in this vicinity have had serious losses among their cattle from what they term cattle flu, the cows dying in a short time after becoming ill. The trouble seems to be known about the disease except that it is very contagious and it is supposed to have been brought in by western cattle. Dr. Bowlby of Tweed has been attending the sick herds and vaccinating them which seems to be checking the disease some although the farmers have had severe losses and a number of cows are still sick.

Invisible Soldiers Newest Idea for War

London, Dec. 3 (CP) — Horace Goldin, magician of note, has confounded many an audience with his tricks, but the magic he has wafted in the past is not of child's play, he says compared with his latest disappearing.

Goldin claims to have perfected a new form of camouflage which renders a person invisible and has submitted his idea to the British War Office. He says the method is used effectively in shrouding the movements of troops in warfare.

The idea of the invisible camouflage, Goldin said, had come to him in a dream.

He explains there is a definite point to the size of the subject to be camouflaged, but declares twenty men could be made to cross "on man's land" into the enemy's ground lines quarters, capture the officers and never be seen.

Goldin declined to go into details about his discovery.

Philadelphia, Dec. 3 (AP)—Leopold Stokowski, single again after two ventures into marriage, waved his baton today towards an operatic Mickey Mouse.

The orchestra leader, divorced yesterday in Las Vegas, Nev., by his second wife, Evangeline, talked of his next big job.

"This picture," he said, "will be taken from 'The Sorcerer's Apprentice,' a wonderful poem written by Goethe. Dutkas wrote marvelous music for the poem."

ARRESTS IN GALILEE

Jerusalem, Dec. 3 (CP-Havas)—Numerous persons suspected of harboring terrorists were arrested in Galilee today as police and military squad, continued efforts to end terrorism in Palestine. One passenger was wounded when a Jewish bus was attacked on the Haif-Acre road.

EASY COLLECTION MADE POSSIBLE BY 3 MEASURES

Expect Prorogation of Legislation Some Time Today

CAN SUE IN COURTS

Judicial Immunity Applies Only to Proceedings Under Act

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Arrangements were complete today for prorogation of the 23rd session of Ontario's twentieth legislature after a session lasting one three days, during which the government is passing measures designed to make easier the collecting of overdue succession duties from large estates.

As the House adjourned yesterday afternoon, Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced Sir Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor, who as his first official function opened the legislature on Wednesday, would be on hand to prorogue it today. The House will last only 15 or 20 minutes, it is expected.

Conservatives Oppose.

Conservatives, after entering a measure to grant judicial immunity to the provincial treasurer, his representatives and appointees in carrying out provisions of the Succession Duty Act, had last unexpected support from Fraser Hunter, Toronto Liberal, who said he was glad to see the government giving civil servants powers the courts should have.

Attorney-General Arthur Conant made a radical change in the act to amend the Judicature Act on second reading he made the judicial immunity apply to proceedings under the Succession Duty Act. The original bill, introduced Wednesday, applied this immunity to ministers, their representatives and appointees exercising any duty or authority

TORONTO FOUR HAS HIGH COUNT

Mrs. J. A. Faulkner of Belleville, Member of Toronto Team

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Team of Sir Derrick Werbner of Deal, N.J.; E. M. Goddard of Asbury Park, N.J., and A. B. Goldsmith of Brooklyn, J. Naguky of Cleveland took the lead today in the finals of three sessions for the match-point team of four-championship in the National Bridge Tournament.

Their score was 23 boards out of 30 boards.

Half a board behind them for second place was the New York team of Mrs. Harold M. Stirling, William M. Lichtenstein, Maurice Seller and Fred D. Kaplan.

The second session was scheduled for this afternoon and the finals tonight.

Mrs. J. A. Faulkner, Belleville, Ont., is a member of the Toronto team. Ont.; Mrs. W. M. Anderson, Toronto and Mrs. Hal Fairbairn, Toronto, won 18½ boards to gain a high position.

Hydro Negotiations Discussed at Caucus

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Progress of negotiations for a new contract between the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission and the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company was expected to be discussed today at a liberal caucus called by Premier Hepburn.

Queen's Park gossip was that details of a new agreement, replacing the contract cancelled by the government in July, would likely be made public in a week or two.

Arthur Roebuck, former Attorney-General, was not invited to attend the caucus.

5 Provinces for Canada Is Proposed to Commission

Manitoba Gov't, Supports P roposal to Consolidate Three Prairie Provinces—Rep resentation Made to Unite Maritimes in One—Consolidatior of Services Favored by Premier Brack en

By CARL REINDEL

Winnipeg, Dec. 3 (CP)—Western Canada is not looking for any handout from the nation or the national underwriting of an uneconomic industry, though its finances are in precarious state, Premier John Bracken said today in a new phase of the Manitoba brief presented before the Rowell Commission.

"All Western Canada asks is equitable treatment and some measure of assurance for the stability of production through periods of depression, to the end that wealth of the nation as a whole, it may at least expect that a minimum standard of living and service shall be provided at all times, but particularly in those periods of distress," he said.

In a nation with such a varied economy as that of Canada, subject to violent fluctuations, national administration of social services was only fair way of distributing the burden and guaranteeing citizens in all parts of Canada a certain minimum standard of welfare, he contended. Mr. Bracken stressed the disabilities affecting the west.

Consolidation of the governments of the three Prairie Provinces into one administration has the full support of the Manitoba government, Premier Bracken told the Commission yesterday.

Such a proposal was made by the Manitoba government a few years ago, Premier Bracken said. If a similar proposal again is not accepted any more favorably than the last time is not much harm will be added.

There were "very great difficulties" in working such a scheme out in a practical way, but he favored a thorough examination of the possibilities, he said.

Five Provinces Suggested.

The matter was raised by Chairman W. W. Rowell. The commission has received numerous representations from individuals, Mr. Rowell said. Wednesday one was received criticizing nine provincial administrations for 11,000,000 persons as wasteful.

This representation suggested consolidation of administration services into five units, one for the Maritime provinces, one for Ontario, one for Quebec, one for the Prairies and one for British Columbia, and the Yukon.

The commission would be glad to receive submissions on the suggestion, he said. Mr. Bracken promised to deal with the matter.

'Trains of Trucks' on Highways Should Not Be Allowed—May

President of Movers Would Apply U.S. Commerce Regulations

REGULATION NEED

Toronto, Dec. 3 (AP)—Regulations of the United States Interstate Commerce Commission should be applied to the Ontario Motor Transport Industry, Fred May of Hamilton, president of the Canada Movers Association, said today before the Transport Commission.

Forecasts Sensations.

Mr. Justice H. B. Rowlter, the chairman, forecast that proceedings of the Commission would provide sensational revelations.

Cross-examined by Lewis Duncan, counsel for the Automobile Transport Association, Mr. May charged one transport company in Ontario had earned a direct $15 for a 1,000-mile trip from Hamilton to Drummondville, Que., and return.

May recommended that a board be given power to enforce a rate level.

Adoption of "terrific" fines to prevent "hi-jacking" and smuggling of furniture loads was urged by May. He said that if the board had adequate powers to punish offenders the movers could police each other by reporting to the board.

"Unfair to Railways," Says May.

"The present conditions in the industry is chaotic," he continued. "It is also unfair to the railways."

Carriers in the industry were quarrelling and showed no inclination to come together and fix schedule of rates, he said.

Mr. May said he did not believe there should be trains of trucks on the highways.

No Second Trailer.

"A truck and trailer, however, are not too long," he said. "What I believe is unfair is the attempt to cut down rates by adding another unit—that is another trailer. In such circumstances a truck or a truck and trailer combination is sufficient."

Mr. Duncan, counsel for Gray Coach Lines, entered the discussion on the value of vehicles on highways and said all buses were limited to width of 86 inches.

"Are large vans used as advertisements as well?" Joseph Singer, Commission counsel, asked Mr. May.

"The large vans have developed into a necessity but we take care they are good advertisers as well," witness said.

$25,000 TAKEN BY BANDITS

Lockport, Ill., Dec. 3 (AP)—Three gunmen raided the post office today, shot a clerk in the leg and fled with the company payroll reported on account to about $25,000. The trio escaped in a truck. Lockport is about 30 miles southwest of Chicago. The clerk wounded in fire from pistols was John West. Police Chief Fred Lindner was assaulted by the robbers.

Sid W. Jones, Saskatoon, was chosen vice-president of the International Association of Fairs and Expositions.

NET PROFIT OF LIQUOR BOARD IS $8,960,600.95

Total Sale is $54,015,199.31 And Near High of Year 1929

SOURCES OF INCOME

$1,034,443.21 Paid For Salaries For Maintenance of Board

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Ontario's third approached pre-depression dimensions last year, total outlay for liquor, beer and wine jumped $30,000,000 for the first time since booming 1929, Chairman G. R. Geddes of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario reported yesterday to the legislature.

Total sales made under the board's supervision amounted to $54,015,199.31 in the fiscal year ending last March 31. This compared with $49,-329,241.11 the previous year and with $55,380,569.81 in 1929. The 1929 figure was high for normal 11-year post-prohibition period.

Nearly Million Ahead.

Mr. Geddes reported net profits of $8,960,600.95 for the 1937 period, compared with $7,922,157.74 the previous year. The 1929 high was $9,661,448.-60. Leaving itself a balance of $956,156.79, the board turned over to the provincial treasurer $10,000,-000.

Liquor stores, beer warehouses and agencies sold 6,000,000 more cases than in the year ending March 31, 1936. Liquor store sales were up 11½ per cent to 4,400,000 cases, winery and beer warehouse sales advanced 7.5 per cent, to 581,191,24 and wineries' sales increased 19 per cent, to 81,980,657.05.

During the year Ontario and its citizens consumed 1,394,471 gallons of hard liquor—2,000,000 gallons

Pie Diet Thought Not Good for Conn. Football Players

Shelton, Conn., Dec. 3—(CP)—With the appointment of a Housewives' Committee to look into the menu situation at the Shelton High School cafeteria, a movement to curtail the use of pie in football diet gained momentum today.

In some quarters the over-emphasis on pie was held responsible for the dismal showing of the Shelton football team which failed to win a game or even cross an opponents' goal line this season.

But Mrs. Mary Wright, in charge of the cafeteria, protested shutting-passed up her sandwiches and asked only for pie and more pie. So she stopped making sandwiches and gave them what they asked for—pie and more pie.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

COWBOY KILLS RANCHER FOR MUTILATING A HORSE

Fierson, Ariz., Dec. 3 (AP)—Curly Flipp loves horses.

When somebody told him a rancher named Henry Tvemer had mutilated a horse, the 19-year-old cowboy vowed.

A few days later Tvemer was found shot dead. Jay Flieger, another rancher was arrested. County Attorney Virgil Chapman theorized the shooting was another chapter in the bloody "haunted house" feud.

Then Curly—his real name is Cecil—confessed. He had killed Tvemer in a quarrel over the horse, Flieger was released.

Yesterday Curly pleaded guilty to second degree murder and was sentenced to 20 to 30 years.

CONSTABLE NABS THIEF AFTER A FAST RUN

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—A fleeing alleged thief hardly had a chance in downtown Toronto yesterday. Constable Arthur Kay was in pursuit. Kay is a former Canadian cross-land champion and in 1933 won the United States Y.M.C.A. championship.

Kay caught the man after a short chase. But the fleeing thief slipped out of his hands and ran on his flight. Half-a-block further on Kay caught him again.

Later, James Graham, 27, was charged with theft.

RECEIVES LETTER OF THANKS FROM QUEEN ELIZABETH

Caledonia, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP)—Robert Cranahan of Caledonia has received a letter from Queen Elizabeth acknowledging an unusual gift sent her from here. Mr. Cranahan made the gift, a wooden paper knife, from oak timbers taken from the battleship Mohawk sunk at the mouth of the Grand River in the war of 1812.

TWO MISCHIEVOUS BOYS

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP)—While shooting at a train, two boys rolled up to an alarm box at a downtown corner. The four-year-old boys with showers of sparks were just clambering down from a pile of bricks when the firemen got on they could reach the box. The boys were held and hopes they were too young to prosecute.

BISHOP C. A. SEAGER COMMENDS BRIDGE

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP)—Bridge is good discipline according to Bishop C. A. Seager of Huron, in an address here His Lordship declared bridge was the worst player in the diocese, therefore that it is pretty hard to maintain a Christian spirit when I note my partner's expression of disgust at the exacting play in the cry of an opponent when I finesse."

INDIAN BURIAL SITE IS FOUND

Brampton, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP)—Discovery on an Esquesing farm of ship farm of what apparently is an Indian burial site was reported yesterday. Two copper pots, a quantity of wampum of the disc type and two complete Indian skeletons were found.

A member of the Indian Association of America made an examination of the spot today. The find, A. R. Kelly, curator of Indianology, said, may assume importance as an archaeological find. He said, "there is a probability that the pots are possibly 400 or 500 years old, may be found nearby."

WHITE, WHITE AND WHITE

Wilson, N.C., Dec. 3 (AP)—A truck owned by J. Oliver White and driven by Carmen White suffilded with a car owned by John White and driven by his son, Willie Carmen.

The accident occurred in front of the home of the White family. The officer who investigated was Robert A. White.

To make the record complete: The truck was painted white and it was loaded with milk.

In a blaze of white light that illuminated the countryside for miles around, a huge meteor fell to earth somewhere in Windsor district recently, according to numerous observers.

Germany's Ambassador, Dr. Trautmann Has Talk With Chiang-Kai-Shek

No Announcement Made of Purpose of Visit to Nanking

SHANGHAI SITUATION

Grave Concern Felt in London Over Developments

Nanking, Dec. 3 (AP)—Reports of German efforts to mediate in the Chinese-Japanese conflict were strengthened today when it was learned Dr. Oskar Trautmann, the German Ambassador, had paid a flying visit to Nanking during which it was understood he talked with Premier Chiang Kai-Shek.

Concern Over Shanghai.

London, Dec. 3 (CP)—Grave concern is felt in London over the menacing situation in Shanghai.

R. G. Howe, the British Charge d'Affaires in China, is on his way there from Hankow, but several days must elapse before he can arrive.

Japanese Withdraw.

Shanghai, Dec. 3 (CP-Havas)—Withdrawal of Japanese troops from the International Settlement's central district tonight ended fears, for the time being, that the Japanese army would use today's bombing of its headquarters to precede in the settlement.

Two Japanese soldiers were wounded when an unidentified man hurled a grenade at a marching column of 8,000 Japanese soldiers as it came abreast of the Sun Department Store on Nanking Road.

Killed by Settlement police on the spot, the bomb-thrower was identified as a Korean. A spokesman of the Japanese Embassy said he was Chinese.

Lawyer Gelses Flag.

A few minutes before the bombing a British lawyer named Maldwin was almost lynched by Japanese civilians when he seized a Japanese flag from one of them and broke the staff across his knee.

An angry crowd milled around him. He was rescued by police.

When the parade passed the great world amusement centre a Chinese hurled himself to death from the third storey. On the window sill before he leaped he shouted: "Long live China!"

Japanese held the victory parade despite protests of foreign officials and municipal authorities, who had feared an outbreak from the 3,000,-000 Chinese residents.

Dispute With U. S. Marines.

The withdrawal was preceded by a dispute between Japanese and U. S. Marine officials according to The Associated Press. The American protested Japanese troops had invaded the United States defence sector.

CITY CLOCK STOPS

There may have been an excuse for tardy appointments or absence to work this morning on the part of many of the city workers—and the excuse may have been the legitimate one of "the town clock stopped, and I left my—watch at home."

Something during the night or morning front or some other agency got into the venerable works of the municipal timepiece on the piece causing a complete stop and resulting in puzzled scanning of wrist and pocket watches on the part of pedestrians.

ENJOYED EXPERIENCE AT Y. T. P. CAMP

"It has been of great educational value to me," said I think, to the boys who went with me," Joseph Houck, 38 St. John Street, one of the youths who returned yesterday from the Kaladar district where they have been under intensive training in connection with the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training Program, told officials of the Employment Service yesterday.

"I can write an A+ with the best of them now," Hurst said. "I thoroughly enjoyed the whole week of my training period. We were well trained and received instruction that proved of great value to us. I feel personally that we can take our places with any of the north country men with a little more actual experience."

"It was a lot of fun, and I would not have missed it for anything," he said.

LAKE FISHERMEN GETTING GOOD HAULS

Taking advantage of one of the most "open" winters since 1932, fishermen of the Point Traverse colony are still giving their trade in the waters of Lake Ontario. Heavy lifts of whitefish are reported being brought in, with the comparatively mild weather greatly facilitating operations.

BELLEVILLE SCHOOLS CLOSE DEC. 23RD

Christmas vacation in Belleville Schools will begin December 23rd and continue until January 2nd, Board of Education officials announced today. With Christmas examinations conducting on Nov. 30th, the close of the various schools are centering their attention on the usual holiday concerts which take place generally the week preceding the "great day".

FIND OLD HORSE SHOE EMBEDDED IN TREE

Evidently hung in the crotch of what then was a small sapling, an ancient, hand-made horse shoe 39" in circumference at Mr. C. K. Hoag's, 94 North Front Street, after being removed from the interior of a large maple tree which was cut in front of his home yesterday. The shoe had been completely overgrown with the wood of the tree when it was estimated at well over fifty years. Having cut the tree into smaller length revealed the find when the blade encountered it.

DOUGLAS BANKIER HEARD ON RADIO

An interesting program on Station CFRC, Kingston, on Wednesday evening at 7.30, was an address on "Why We Democrats." Led by Mr. H. M. Small, M.A., the address was in the form of a discussion in which Mr. Douglas Bankier, of this city, took part. The program was heard by a number in Belleville.

CHICKEN PROCESSING PLANT ESTABLISHED AT WELLINGTON

Sparing offers from nearby towns to locate in their environs Fred R. Vandewater, member of the firm of A. Vandewater and Sons, poultry and meat canners of Wellington, last week announced the erection of a modern chicken cannery in the lakeside village.

The local factory which will be one hundred by fifty feet in dimension is the result of a study and hard work in this interesting field of canning endeavor. Equipped with modern machinery the new plant will can chicken in all its forms, soups, pastes and pulled chicken.

Operations are being rushed in the construction of the building which will give employment to a large number of local residents when in production.

Vandewater started on the proverbial "shoestring" a number of years ago selling the canned product processed in the kitchen of his farm home a few miles west of the village. Faith in the future of the industry plus hard work and study of the many phases connected with it, resulted in a slow but steady success which today is reaching its culmination in the erection of the new plant.

CANNERY PROSPECTS FOR 1938 APPEAR TO BE EXTRA GOOD

"Farmers of this district are showing a growing tendency to grow canning factory produce," Arthur Goodmurphy, field man of the Canadian Canners Ltd, for the district stated today.

Contracting for acreage for produce for next year, Mr. Goodmurphy said that farmers, appreciatively impressed by the fine crop and generally good prices of last year, needed little persuasion to grow crops for canning purposes again.

Acreage for peas has already been awarded, with the same amount given as that of a year ago. We are looking for another banner year in all phases of the industry, and wheels are already turning in anticipation of next year's crop," he said.

ARMY ASSISTS SASK. YOUTH

Adjutant Alderman Secures Clothes For Lad And Also Work

Coincidental with an act of charity received three years ago in the form of an army coat, Saskatchewan lad again was moved gratefully to the Salvation Army for favores received yesterday.

After being held in the County Jail for a few days on a charge of vagrancy, an 18-year-old lad who said his name was Fraley, was brought before Adjutant Alderman of the local Salvation Army in search of assistance.

"I'm hungry and I would like to get work. Any kind of work sir, I'm not care," pleaded the youth. Adjutant Alderman provided the lad with two meals and later procured him employment on a farm near Belleville.

When the lad was leaving to assume his duties, he turned to the army officer and said, "I'm wearing and weekly said:—"I appreciate all you have done for me, and if you think I can pay you, just let me an old overcoat." asked the lad. Always obliging, Adjutant Alderman complied about the premises and provided the needy overcoat.

Much to his surprise, the lad turned to him and replied, "Are you this Salvation Army?" Well, the Salvation Army in Saskatchewan gave it to me three years ago when I was really up against it then," the lad said.

Later, then he told me he was the eldest of a family of five and that his parents had a small farm of wheat in the past two years without the assistance of a crop, he merely left home in order to alleviate the cost of living. His family resides in the surrounding area," stated Adjutant Alderman.

Presence of Mind Saves Resident Of Wellington

Presence of mind maintained when feeling the preliminary numbness of coming on impending stroke, undoubtedly saved the life of Miss Cora Pettingill, valued employee of the Bell Telephone Co., Wellington, yesterday, when she managed to stagger from the room in search of aid, it resulted in a slow but steady success which today is reaching its culmination in the erection of the new plant.

Neighbors drawn by her cries rushed to her aid. Medical assistance was summoned and the stricken woman taken to the home of relatives.

A possible tragedy may have occurred had not Miss Pettingill, who lives alone in her home on Lake Shore Street not kept her presence of mind sufficiently to make her way outside to summon help, medical authorities stated last night. Had she remained inside the home her presence would not have been noticed until early this morning, when possible complications would have set in, doctors said.

ADVANCE POLL VOTING LIGHT

Whether a light or heavy vote will be recorded this year in the general municipal elections was yet to be determined, following first reports this morning from the city's advance poll at 304 Station St. shortly after the opening clerk, that voting was "distinctly light".

The poll which opened at nine o'clock for the convenience of travellers, railroaders whose schedules will make it impossible to be present on Monday, and others, will continue open during the hours of nine to six today and Saturday.

Though not an exact barometer of the vote that may be experienced, a general indication of what is to come is given by the turnout at the advance poll. In the words of one veteran civic minded resident, however, "the first drop gets no lot; it's generally the second one that counts."

Predictions upon the weight of the vote in and about the city hall were few and far between today. Noted also was the absence of municipal candidates, who, upon the eve of an election, are generally to be found with camp pitched daily in the hall, selling at best the favoring or unfavoring winds of public opinion.

It will not be until this evening when the various candidates take their stance upon the platform of the city hall auditorium, after the general election has filed in to the aisles of chairs that the first tasting of the weight of the vote, the acceptance of the various platforms or policies to be enunciated, the candidates themselves will be undertaken by those who follow the fortunes of the city in which they reside.

France is taking steps to safeguard its drinking water supplies, and the latest development is a reservoir at Nantes, pronounced the biggest in Europe.

Mr. E. V. Illsey Speaks on Canadian Banking Practice

At the regular meeting of The Belleville Lodge, No. 123, A. F. and A. M., last evening, a large number of members listened to an address on the subject of "Some Conceptions and Misconceptions of Canadian Banking Practice," by Mr. E. V. Illsey, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Mr. Illsey briefly outlined to his audience the growth of Canadian commercial banks and the vital restrictions placed upon their operations by the Bank Act. It was pointed out that the Act, being subject to revision every ten years by the Canadian Parliament, is readily adaptable to changed monetary experience proves this wise and necessary to meet changing conditions. The speaker went on to deal in unsparing terms with those demagogues who assail the banks as being monopolists of credit or who accuse them of class depredations and established to the satisfaction of those who heard him that the banks are the only institutions are not only unfounded but are thoroughly unjustified, and do not merit the serious consideration of any fair-minded citizen. Mr. Illsey then pointed out the contribution made by the banks in the development of the Dominion, municipal and financial enterprises, how indispensable their services are now the building up and maintenance of trade, both internal and foreign, and devoted many words to showing how through their trusteeship of the public's money the banks of Canada had so materially assisted in the development of Canada and created careful and orderly management of the great West.

The guest speaker was very happily introduced by Rt. Wor. Bro. R. J. Clarke and the thanks of the members were extended by Wor. Bro. Clinton McDonald.

Hear Address On West Indies Trip

The Bellsville branch of the Women Teachers' Federation of Ontario met for its very enjoyable evening on Wednesday in the banquet hall of the Y.M.C.A. Following a social hour, a short business meeting was held. Miss Edna Brown, president of the association, greeted the teachers, and Miss Pearl Campbell gave a brief address.

An interesting and instructive talk on the West Indies was given by Mrs. Mary McGregor, who is a member of the Ontario School for the Deaf, and series of pictured trips took the audience through the beautiful scenery of the White Mountains, coast of the West Indies, British Guiana, Bermuda, and back to Quebec. The hearty appreciation of all present was ably voiced by Miss Olive Dixon of Queen Mary School and Miss Grace Houston of Queen Alexandra School who tendered Mr. Gordon by the presentation of a gift. Miss Houston initiated the members of King George School for the success of the evening's programme.

DYNAMIC

General to hold a pilot's license while Sir Ronald has been actively engaged in air defence activities.

The changes were regarded as in line with Mr. Hore-Belisha's determination to reorganize drastically the army to bring that service up to fighting par with the British Navy and Royal Air Force, which it has been trailing.

Other Changes.

In the changes Major-General Clive Gerard Liddell is appointed Adjutant-General to succeed General Sir Harry H. D. Knox, and Engineer-Vice-Admiral Sir Harold A. Brown, Director-General of Ordnance, succeeding Lieut.-General Sir Hugh Elles.

Major-General Ireland his position as Director-General of Munitions Production, and Major-General Lieut.-General M. C. Taylor was appointed Deputy-Master-General of Ordnance.

Outstanding "fighting generals" such as Major-General Sir John Dill and General Sir John Dill will hold area commands, unfettered by duties at the War Office as members of the Army Council, in order to ensure against any delays in time of emergency.

Returns From Palestine.

General Wavell will return from Palestine, where he commands British troops, to take the post of Commander-in-Chief, Commanding-in-Chief, the southern command (Southern Britain). In April he succeeds General Sir J. Burnett-Stuart. Major-Gen. Bernard Montgomery-Massingberd will succeed General Wavell in Palestine and trans-Jordan. Sir John Dill is General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, the Aldershot Command.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, Major in France during the Great War, Member of Parliament since 1923 as Liberal-National, and until recently took over the War Office last May when Mr. Neville Chamberlain became Prime Minister Baldwin's Cabinet.

Hore-Belisha's Success.

His promotion from Minister of Transport was widely hailed as foreshadowing drastic changes in the army machine. He made his Ministry of Transport a success with transport problems.

Since taking office, he has drawn up plans to place the territorials on an even footing with the regular army; to make service in both more popular and thus speed up mobilization; to make the army more highly mechanized and ready for any emergency.

Liddell Hart, military correspondents of The Times declared in an interview that the army changes are "most sweeping" and "should bring considerable virility" and that they greatly reduced the average age of military members of the army council by five years.

Meteoric Rise of Lord Gort.

Lord Gort's promotion through army ranks has been meteoric. He entered the Great War as a Lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards and left in 1917. He was appointed Military Secretary to the Prime Minister last September with the local rank of Lieut.-General. He is 51 and won the Victoria Cross near Cambrai for setting a noted example of courage in carrying on his duties when severely wounded.

Army Council.

The Army Council, highest executive organ of the army, now consists of nine members:

War Secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha.

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, Under-Secretary for War.

General Viscount Gort, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

Major-General C. G. Liddell, Adjutant-General.

Lieut.-General Sir Reginald May, Quarter-Master-General.

Engineer Vice-Admiral Sir Harold Brown, Master-General of the Ordnance and Director-General of Munitions Production.

Sir Victor Warrender, Financial Secretary to the War Office.

Sir Robert Brown, Permanent Under-Secretary for War.

Gen. Sir Walter M. St. G. Kirke, Director-General of the Territorial Army.

Eruptions of incandescent sand like those at Katmai, Alaska, in 1912 have occurred many times in the geologic past.

WILSON H. LUSK

After an illness of two months' duration, Wilson Hannah Lusk passed away at the family residence, 44 Pinnacle Street, Belleville, on Thursday evening, Dec. 2nd.

The late Mr. Lusk was born in Tweed 74 years ago, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Lusk. He was a carpenter by trade and had passed the greater part of his life in this city and was well known locally by all who knew him. In religion he was a member of the Baptist Church.

Surviving him are his widow, five sons, Fred, Arnold and Ernest, all of Detroit; Alton at Picton and Lawrence at Barrie; three daughters, Mrs. Mabel Reid, Mrs. Mary Hall, home and Mrs. Cecar Spencer at Barrie; one sister, Mrs. Frank Hall, Toronto.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

WILLIAM GORDON (Tweed)

The death occurred at the Belleville General Hospital, late on Monday afternoon, Dec. 2nd., of William Gordon, who for a number of years prominent and highly regarded resident of the Tweed district. He had been a patient in the hospital since Oct. 20th. last, by many friends in Belleville and district.

The late Mr. Gordon had reached the advanced age of 84 years. He was born in Huntingdon Township, and spent the greater part of his life in Mrs. John Gordon, and all his life was passed in the district where he was born. He was a very successful farmer and dairyman. For the early part of the existence of the Victoria Cheese and Butter Company, and also for a number of years was President of the company. He was a man of fine character and occupied a high place in the esteem of many friends in the Tweed district and the surrounding country.

In religion he was a faithful member of the Methodist Church and for many years a Steward. While age and health permitted he took an active part in church work and was a strong supporter of the temperance cause. In politics he was a Liberal-Conservative. He was the last of his family.

Surviving him is one son, Mr. George Gordon of Hungerford Township.

THE REV. CHARLES T. LEWIS

Rev. Charles Thomas Lewis, formerly Rector of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Bond Street, died today at Belleville General Hospital as the result of a serious illness.

Born in 1864, he was educated at London, England, and Oxford Lincoln College, Oxford, was ordained at the early age of twenty-one, and in 1892 married Louise Caroline Parkinson, also of London, England, (who predeceased him four years ago) and immediately after he came to Canada where he took up his ministerial duties in the Algoma and Nipissing districts of Ontario, where he was instrumental in the building of three churches. Later he was in charge of the Parish of Calabogie and Burnstown, and from Calabogie in 1899 for the Quebec Diocese. He was in charge of the Parish of Melbourne, Quebec, for ten years. He then made Rector of the Parish of Bury, Quebec where he remained for twenty-five years, becoming a familiar figure throughout the Eastern Townships where he was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

In 1935 he reluctantly retired from active service owing to an illness from which he never quite recovered. He then came to reside to Belleville, Ontario, where he resided until now.

He is survived by two sons, Archie S. Lewis of Westmount, Quebec, Horace V. P. Lewis of Toronto, and one daughter, Mrs. S. Glynnelese of Montreal, Quebec.

The funeral will be held from St. Paul's Parish Church in Bury, Que. of which the deceased was so long a Rector, on Saturday December 4th. at 2 p.m.

The body of the late Mr. Lewis is resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, and will be forwarded this evening to Bury, Quebec.

MRS. THOMAS TRUMAN

After an illness of a year's duration, Mrs. Thomas Truman, passed away at the family residence, 110 Cabletire Street, Belleville, Thursday evening, Dec. 2nd.

The late Mrs. Truman was born 68 years ago at Old Hill, Staffordshire, England. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Bertha Wood, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wood. For many years she resided at Toronto and for the past six years she had made her home in this city, being well esteemed by all who knew her. In religion she was an Anglican and a member of Christ Church.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Thomas Truman; two daughters, Mrs. Muriel Truman, Belleville, and Mrs. J. M. Gallacher, Trenton; five sisters, Mrs. W. Truman, Toronto; Mrs. Nottingham, Mrs. Whitehouse, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Rogers, all of England; three brothers, Mr. G. A. Wood, Trenton; Mr. W. E. Wood, Toronto, and Mr. H. Wood of Cairo, Egypt.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper. (Toronto papers please copy).

Who Vote:—

For mayor and aldermen all persons on the revised voters' list are entitled to vote.

For Board of Education

Only those persons whose names are on the revised Voters list as being entitled to vote at Municipal Elections and who are not Separate School Supporters, are entitled to vote for members of the 1938 Board of Education, it is revealed in a communication from the City Solicitor to City Clerk J. Wilfred Holmes.

This will clear up any doubt on the part of electors as to their eligibility to vote for members of this body.

On Daylight Saving

On DayNght Saving bylaw, every person, who is on the voters' list, whether as owner or tenant, is entitled to vote once on Monday, December 6th.

Are Entitled To Vote

"If tenants sublet and keep their own table, and are entered upon the assessment list in the proper manner, they are entitled to vote at a municipal election," it was stated at the office of the city clerk this morning in response to numerous enquiries as to who shall vote.

O. S. D. Bazaar Well Patronized

Large numbers of guests were present yesterday afternoon at the Ontario School for the Deaf for the annual bazaar which is a very pleasant feature of activities at the school. The sale of work realized a fine sum of money which will be added to the poor fund, for charitable purposes at the school.

The affair was held in the Library and sitting room of the Main Building and visitors were directed there by means of smart signs painted by pupils of the art department while a realistic Snow Man indicated the entrance to the tea room.

Miss Grace Conover was convener of the bazaar, the committee including Mr. E. B. Lally and Miss K. Daly. A splendid display of work by the senior and intermediate sewing classes attracted the admiration of the visitors and the pretty wares found ready sale. In the sale of articles were smocks, peasant aprons, organdy dresser sets, embroidered handkerchief pillow cases, needlepoint purses, embroidered and hemstitched pillow cases, needlepoint purses, and dainty dolls' clothes, made by the seniors, under the direction of Miss Conover; and children's play suits, pajamas, knitted articles, shopping bags, aprons, hooked rug, candlewick bedspread, by the intermediate girls in charge of Miss M. Leacock. Students assisted in the sale of work many wearing the pretty aprons which were sold during the afternoon It was interesting to note that the attractive posters and the faces on the cardboard dress models were done by art students of Miss M. Case.

Eighty pounds of Christmas cake and five hundred cookies were made by two boys taking the bakery course. Tom Bloyer and William Kinkel. This part of the bazaar which was very popular with the patrons was in charge of Mr. K. B. Lally, with Miss Kathleen Prather also assisting.

The tea room was very invitingly arranged in the Yuletide atmosphere, Miss Lally was in charge of arrangements. The tea table was most effective with a centrepiece formed of a tiny Christmas tree lighted with miniature lights, and tall red tapers in silver holders. During the tea hours, Mrs. C. B. McGuire, Miss F. Fitzgerald, Miss O. Ford, Mrs. W. J. Morrison, Miss F. Bell and Miss M. Reid poured. Students in their smart blue and white school uniforms who acted as tea assistants were, Dorothy Skinner, Eva Richardson, Ella Pritchard, Kathleen Darling, Jean Mann, Ruby Cornell, Bertha Canning Hazel Blair, Wanda Wuerth, Myrtle Lipsett, Lillian Pralley, Velia Shapley, Lorna Boorman.

Marjorie Parker and Ruth McCormick acted as treasurer, while Jessie Auld and Anna Hodden were in charge of the candy sale. During the afternoon vocal solos by Miss K. Bawden and Miss A. Brown, accompanied by Mr. Alec Gordon, were greatly enjoyed by the guests.

Mr. W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the School, and members of the staff were present to welcome the visitors who spent a most delightful afternoon at the bazaar.

Help Collecting Taxes.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn said the legislation was intended to be of benefit in collecting taxes from closed estates, that is estates that have certificates that all due the treasury has been paid. In the past two years $38,000,000 had been collected from such estates there having been compliments of a search in returns to the treasury, he said.

Two-thirds of the $17,000,000 estimated succession duties in the current budget would come from estates that had been closed by succession administrations, said Mr. Hepburn.

The Act to amend the Succession Duty Act passed with little discussion. Chief Justice and the transform commissioners named to investigate estate pile drivers. Under present legislation their findings as to what is the proper value have the same effect as Supreme Court judgments.

Soldiers Attached.

The section of the Act giving effect to these judgments can be attached in an action arising from the investigation of an Ontario estate. Counsel for the estate obtained an injunction restraining the Commissioner from proceeding until the validity of the Act should be determined.

Under the Act as it is now amended by the legislature, the findings of a commissioner will not have the force of judgment. The government can, if it thinks fit, refuse to proceed to sue in the courts. This provision follows the Federal and provincial Income Tax Acts.

Value of beer sold in 1936, fourth year public sverage rooms have been in operation for sale of beer, was $19,821,185.10 as against the 1937 figure of $21,631,194.23. In the famous year of prosperity the bill ran to $30,225,223.56 for imported liquor. Last year it was $5,183,489.91.

Net Profit Near 9 Millions.

Actual net trading profit of the Control Board was $5,892,206.77, other revenues bringing the total to $6,960,600.96. Sources of the additional income included brewery and warehouse taxes, a malt tax, gallonage tax, sale of beer authorities, light beer licenses, fines and a native wine tax.

Detail of these revenues follow: Warehouse license fees, $158,000; brewery license fees, $106,825; malt tax, $1,549,216.40; gallonage tax, $356,272.04; authority-holders fees, $779,877.01; light beer licenses, $26,000; fines (net), $33,132.57; native wine tax, $82,080.17.

Administration expenses were $1,-722,750.22, including $1,034,442.21 for salaries to the 830 persons employed by the Board.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, 148 Front Street, Belleville.

PREPARING FOR CHRISTMAS

Christmas is drawing near and merchants have already begun to experience the flush of business. Not only are their shops filled with cheering and valuable gifts, but they have placed these in a setting which will show them to best advantage.

With the lighting of Front Street with Christmas decorations the merchants have taken a step which will help create the proper spirit for this season of the year.

While the weather remains somewhat unusual, the time is one suited for the selection of gifts as it is so convenient for shoppers to get about.

A trip through the stores is one of the events of the day. Beauty, utility, entertainment, solid worth, are emphasized in the choice of presents placed before the buyers by the merchants.

Times are better than they were a few winters ago and it is expected that holiday trade will be greatly improved. Merchants, encouraged by better times, have gone to greater expense and trouble to have everything the buyer can wish.

The coming weeks will be busy ones.

A word must be said for the early buyer. This person pays no more, has more time to make selections, and is able to secure more attention on the part of the salespeople, who are not so rushed in the first stages of the season.

OUTSTANDING SALVATIONIST

Major Mario Pesatori, divisional commander of the Salvation Army in Italy, was one of the outstanding Salvationists of the world. He has just died at Rome. He was a remarkable personality, possessing the imagination of his race, marked with native courage and a spirit of self-sacrifice.

From the article "The Nine-Medalled Corporal" of the War Cry data of this noted officer of the Army is taken. He suffered, according to his autobiographical notes, "from the dissensions between his father and mother, the former being tyrannical and the mother allowing the family to do much as they liked. This drove him to seek a change in the outside world and he became a scoffer at religion. He was converted in the hall at Milan, Italy. Still he was running counter to his father. In 1911 in the month of December he was enrolled as a soldier, and he was trained in the S. A. garrison at Berne, Switzerland.

In 1913 he was appointed as lieutenant to the corps at Florence, Italy. When Italy went into the war in 1915 he was put into military uniform, but asked to be appointed as a stretcher-bearer. In his biography he tells how on the night of departure, he went to the regimental commander and asked for his intervention. But he was refused and sent away. He retired for prayer. Then he found some hours later that an English woman had become interested in his case and the general of the Salvation Army had sent the colonel a few words just in time. He was transferred to the "Blood Corps," the military Red Cross, whose motto was a Waldensian one. He served two years in the Alps, thrice was carried away by avalanches, but escaped. Almost all the time he was in the firing line and was able to serve wounded and dying compatriots and enemies. He met Mussolini at one time. He was once wounded in the head and was then freed for all time from military obligation. During the last year of the war he was awarded nine medals for distinguished non-combatant services of healing and life-saving. He served in Brazil and for the past two years was divisional commander for Italy.

WISDOM AND KNOWLEDGE

Human wisdom has not kept pace with the progress of knowledge, claimed Rev. Dr. William Ward Ayer of Calvary Baptist Church, New York, who declared that "the moral brakes of the world are not strong enough for the mental horsepower of the day." He went on to say that mental power without wisdom is always a dangerous possession for the race. Knowledge may be obtained by study but wisdom by experience alone. It should not be hard to demonstrate in a war-made and nationalistically proud world that men are materialistically mighty but not morally and spiritually wise.

Dr. Ayer believes that "modern education propagates a science and a philosophy, which, if it does not deny the existence of God, at least completely ignores Him." He said it was strange that men should love the speculative and reject God's great certainty.

Almost all men are born with every passion to some extent. But there is hardly a man who has not a dominant passion to which the others are subordinate. Discover this governing passion in every individual and when you have found the master passion of a man, remember never to trust to him where that passion is concerned.—Chesterfield.

HIGHLAND

Above the city's roofs and spires a royal mountain rises;
Its ever-present beauty is a thing of joy
to me;
Full lingeringly I gaze on it, so well do I remember How Highland hills rise heather-clad above a stormy sea.

Lake-laden from its very source a mighty river passes
By fertile field and forest as it winds its seaward way.
And I remember always when I see its sunlit waters
How Highland streams are lost in mist when skies are leaden gray.

And when the city lights gleam out unnumbered in the gloaming
And the streets are actively alive with strange and hurried men,
I remember the leal hearts of home and I am filled with longing
To see a kindled lamp glow in a little Highland glen.

IN SOME PLACES THE ALDERMEN CHOOSE THE MAYOR! Believe it or not. In Edmonton recently the voters registered their disapproval of a change in the municipal election procedure of that city to permit the aldermen elected to choose the Mayor from their body. Guelph electors vote for aldermen and the aldermen name the Mayor. It is said this method finds favor in England, but thus far has made little impression in Canada.

GERMANY SEEMS DETERMINED TO GET BACK HER COLONIES lost in the Great War. However, it might be a good idea to ascertain if the aforesaid colonies care to return to German rule. Thus far German colonizing has not been an outstanding success and it might be possible that the colonies now under mandates to other nations, might object to being handed back to Germany. Montreal Star contributes interesting facts to colonies question as follows:

"In view of the recent discussion regarding Germany's demands for the return of her colonies lost during the War, it is of no little significance that quite recently Great Britain sent out to the East African colony of Kenya, which was of course British territory before the War, and which adjoins the territory of Tanganyika, formerly German East Africa, and now under British mandate, her Air Chief Marshal as Governor,—and along with him a contingent of bombers of the Royal Air Force, which has since been augmented by another contingent, stationed at Nairobi, the capital, which is not far from the Tanganyika border. ...."Moreover, the King's African Rifles, the native regiment now on duty in Kenya, have been charged with the closing and surveillance of all open gaps in the Ethiopian border on the north. The regiment has been enlarged by active recruiting, and gas drills at Nairobi and at Mombassa, Kenya's principal port, are being carried out regularly.

"Some eight thousand fugitives from Ethiopia have been concentrated on the highlands, where they are formed into large camps and where they are being drilled for military service. There are other tangible evidences reported from Kenya which, taken together, would seem to indicate with sufficient emphasis that Britain has not the slightest intention of being taken by surprise in this, one of her most cherished colonial possessions, and that she will not be found asleep should any untoward developments manifest themselves on the part of the German population of Tanganyika.

There has been a good deal of propaganda work done among the latter during the past few months particularly, and reports to the British Colonial Office have not failed to note that it has embraced the native population, concerning whose attitude some amazingly misrepresentative statements have been issued in certain sections of the German press. The campaign for the return of her colonies to Germany is missing few bets so far as Berlin is concerned. But some of it, at all events, is likely to delay rather than hasten any new accord."

The boys went off well together, Hickey having the pole, which Thomas gained however before the first turn was reached. Hickey trailed him closely for several half a mile, then Thomas, urged on by his friends, cut loose and set a whirlwind pace. His long strides carried him along at a remarkable rate and he began to pull away from Hickey. When about nine laps had been covered, Thomas was leading by about a third of a lap and was going like a scared jack rabbit. Then Hickey slowed up and apparently retired from the race. That Body of Yours

FOODS TO WHICH ONE IS SENSITIVE MAY RAISE THE BLOOD PRESSURE

It would seem that instead of "operation" being the favorite topic of conversation, discussing blood pressure—mostly high blood pressure—is now become more popular.

This is only natural when we remember that high blood pressure in the brain may cause a break in a little blood vessel and a stroke, and high blood pressure may cause dangerous kidney and heart conditions.

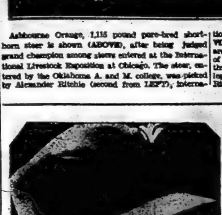
That blood pressure can be raised by emotional upsets, and eating and drinking too much, has been established, and that certain types of food raise the blood pressure in practically everybody is known. However that foods to which an individual is sensitive or allergic can raise his blood pressure and not that of another individual who is not sensitive to that particular food, has not heretofore been known. A history of fifteen such cases is recorded by Dr. O. Lision, Oak Grove, Mo., in the Missouri State Medical Association Journal.

Dr. Lision is convinced that certain foods eaten by individuals sensitive to these foods, will cause overstimulation of the nerves that tighten or close the small blood vessels thus raising the blood pressure as long as any of the food remains in the body system. And that many individuals have had high blood pressure for many years due simply to their sensitiveness to certain foods eaten regularly was proven by the fact that the blood pressure fell to normal within four days after these individuals stopped eating that particular food.

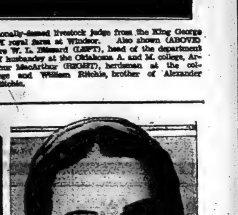
Even in cases where the blood vessels were actually hardened—elastic tissue of blood vessel being replaced by white fibrous tissue—the blood pressure returned after they had stopped eating these offending or allergic foods.

"One patient, sensitive to pork, cannot eat eggs fried in lard without a rise in blood pressure. Another patient, sensitive to wheat, has a craving for it, and longer and a rise of 60 points in blood pressure after eating any wheat."

In all cases Dr. Lision uses the "elimination" diet—leaving out of the diet each suspected food in turn until he finds the one offending, or the skin test—rubbing food into a scratch in the skin, or injecting it under the skin.



While fifteen cases is not many, nevertheless when we see the other symptoms of food allergy—swollen eyes, swollen tongue, intestinal upsets—the fact that it may raise the blood pressure may well be investigated by all physicians.



Sounding like a good idea, and I said, How about the one that always stands next to the bank playing a accordeon?

ST. THOMAS MEN'S CLUB GUESTS OF STIRLING GROUP

Rev. Mr. Beazer, Rosliu, Guest Speaker at Gathering

Members of St. John's Anglican Men's Association entertained the members of St. Thomas' Church Men's Club to a social Parish Hall on Wednesday night, December 1st. Rev. Beazer of the Parish was the guest speaker of the evening and an excellent address was delivered with a splendid dinner. The musical part of the program was also very much appreciated with members of both organizations contributing numbers.

The meeting was directed by Dr. E. A. Carleton, President of the visiting organization, and opened with invocation by Rev. A. S. McConnell. The guests received a hearty welcome from the local group in a brief and well phrased address by the chairman. During the business part of the meeting which followed the secretary's report presented by Mr. Wm. Dunn in a lengthy discussion took place dealing with preparation now under way for the Annual Shooter in March. Committees were appointed to complete arrangements. A musical number followed at this time by George Wallace and Mat Hedley, playing the harmonica and banjo which was loudly applauded.

Address by Rev. Beazer

In introducing Rev. Mr. Beazer as guest speaker of the evening Rev. A. S. McConnell gave a resume of his activities in the church work since entering the ministry he has worked in the lumber camps of the Canadian West and also in northern Ontario for the past seven years. The fruits of his labours as Rector of the St. Thomas Church have been keenly observed by his associates throughout the Diocese. Rev. Mr. Beazer chose as the topic for his discussion the theme of the Anglican Young People's Association "Work, Worship, Fellowship and Witnessing." He lauded the splendid work of the local group and also in the short time it has existed. He voiced satisfaction to equal that gained from work in Church circles.

"All members of the Church of England are afforded the opportunity of working for the Kingdom of Christianity" said the speaker. "We are honoured by the fact that we are such a church. There is dignity in the order of worship in the church that is impressive upon the minds of old and young alike. Other churches have similar forms but none of them are more than a reiteration of things that are found within our prayer book. The Church of England has grown rapidly in every phase of the work. It is possible that a wide spreading organization movement will arise in this Dominion in the years to come and we will do well to be prepared for the great church, and that church will be the Church of England. We are proud as we members of it are given the privilege of working for the Kingdom of God. The work is individual, in the routine of everyday life we must work to keep pace with all faculties, and Passion strive each day to come nearer to the ideals of Christ. In the material sense we all live in a great age. We must work for it. Biblical and Ancient History tell of thousands of labourers working for centuries and centuries in the erection of pyramid tombs of dead kings, but our work is to work for Eternity and for the Great King of all the universe, God."

The gratitude of the gathering for this very inspiring address was expressed in a vote of thanks extended to the speaker by Mr. W. Healy, Vice President.

Arthur Duncan led the group in hearty community singing with Prof. Wheatley of Belleville presiding at the piano and the remainder of the musical program consisted in a vocal solo by G. Wallace accompanied by Prof. Wheatley.

At this time the guests were conducted to the dining hall decorations where a splendid dinner was provided by the ladies auxiliary of the church. Messrs. T. W. Solmes, Waller, Wright, J. B. Belshaw, H. Cook. The manner in which the tables were arranged and the carefully organized service of same was the subject of many complimentary remarks among those present, and a vote of thanks was tendered the Committee for the fine efforts, by the president.

Re-assembling in the main hall again the guests were confronted with Rev. A. S. McConnell directing an "Intelligence Test" with a team being selected to represent each organization. The honours for the most correct answers was awarded to the Belleville team composed of Rev. Beazer, Lawrence Mason, Percy Morris and Patrick, the team representing the local Association consisted of A. R. Strickland, E. Dansard, and Arthur Duncan. At the conclusion of the interesting program, Rev. Beauchamp Paine, Rector of St. Thomas Church, Belleville, and Mr. Porritt, Secretary of St. Thomas' Church expressed the thanks of their organization for the very evening and the meeting closed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

CANADIAN MARCONI COMPANY
Toronto Montreal Halifax St. John's, Nfld.

MODEL 120 A.C. 16-tube performance
This generous all Marconi receiver is ready to tune in the latest broadcasts as soon as the current is turned on. Electrical tuning of the exclusive Marconi Exponential Baffle, a marvel of simplicity.
$324.00
Actually it is easier to tune short waves on the Marconi band spread dial than to tune your local station on standard broadcast. The reason is simple: on the new Marconi dial the standard broadcast band and each of the five short wave bands have separate scales as shown on diagram, upper left, each clearly marked and extremely easy to read. Old style receivers have only one scale for standard broadcast and only one scale for all five short wave bands, shown at lower left. The short wave scales are crowded together—very short space, making separation and tuning very difficult.

Reliable Brand Cosmetic Is Not Injurious to Skin

CORRECT REMOVAL IS ESSENTIAL

Eleanor Stone
Young French star has lovely skin.

By GLADYS GLAD

"American's Most Famous Beauty"

"MY SKIN has always been fairly clear and smooth, and I've never had much trouble with it. Lately, however, I've noticed that the skin on my cheeks is dotted with tiny red blemishes, and I was wondering whether they could have been caused by the brand of rouge that I am using. Do you think so?

"JANE."

If you are using a good brand of rouge, a product that is nationally recognized as a pure, reliable one, I do not believe that it would cause the skin condition you describe. You may, however, be using the rouge incorrectly, and thus causing this skin condition. The blemishes on your cheeks indicate that you have been grinding the rouge into your skin, and then failing to remove it properly.

A good brand of rouge will not harm your skin, providing that you prepare your skin properly for its reception, and cleanse your face thoroughly, at once after its use. Be sure that you close your pores effectively with a good astringent before you apply any of the rouge. And use a fine cleansing cream, and then soap and water to remove every bit of it from your skin afterwards.

"My crowning glory is my present problem. I recently had my hair permanently waved, but I do not like the way it sits, as it is very kinky. Is there anything that I can do to eliminate the kinkiness and make the waves softer?

"ADELAIDE."

There are several things that you can do to make your permanent wave less kinky. Daily vigorous brushing of your hair, in the first place, will make the hair more tractable. It will attribute the lustre natural oil evenly over each hair, and will help to soften the wave.

Then, hot oil shampoos and softening vinegar rinses will also help to make the waves flatter and less kinky. And finally, if, after each time, that you shampoo your hair, you set it in wide, loose waves, it will eventually lose its kinkiness, and become trained to retain a smooth, even wave.

"I have just started giving my hair the nightly vigorous brushings that you advocate, and can already see an improvement in its condition. Am I right after brushing my hair, my scalp feels a bit sore and irritated.

"I use a stiff wire brush, and was wondering whether this could be the cause of the soreness. If so, what sort of a brush should one use?

"BRUNETTE."

The brush you are using may well be the cause of the scalp soreness that you experience after each brushing. Extremely stiff wire brushes are, in my opinion, too harsh for use on the tender scalp. Brushes with bristy-tipped bristles are also inadvisable, as the sharp ends are likely to scratch the scalp. Properly made brushes have blunt ends on the bristles.

Of course, the bristles of your brush may be fairly stiff, for if they are too soft, your hair and scalp will not derive much benefit from the brushings. But they should not be stiff enough to irritate the scalp. The best brush is the one with bristles that are blunt-tipped, flexible, and long enough to penetrate to the scalp as the implement is used.

A CLEAR CASE OF HOLD-UP

By IRVING KING

McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

Anne Wakefield had so many admirers that she could pick and choose when it came to selecting a husband. Mr. and Mrs. Wakefield viewed the situation with pride, decided that they would do the picking and choosing themselves.

The parents finally settled on their daughter and chose Alexander Brandywood, wealthy, personable and perfectly presentable young man who, if he was rather weak in the upper story, was possessed of a father whose money was sufficient to balance any lack of brain in the son. If Anne married Alexander, they reasoned, her life would be henceforth free from care. Not a thing could they see against the wisdom of this choice—which had been arrived at after a thorough canvassing of the field of eligible dates—and when the parents announced it to Anne, together with therefore, they expected her to apthereafter, they expected her to appreciate and understand their work. But she didn't. Instead she exercised her rights and, after the proceedings of the parental conference, which was promptly and unanimously over-ridden and she was ordered to marry Alexander, Anne, the great individualist of Anna's position lay in the fact that she could not disagree with any of the statements her parents made with regard to the Brandywood fortune and character—and that she had no opposing candidate to present. She thought carefully over the list of admirers but could find no one she wanted to marry. Even the fingered longest ever Clinton Howard —but there were objections to him. He had no money and had once been a harum-scarum sort of fellow. He was now in good standing, now working hard to establish himself as a lawyer, and had the most charming manners imaginable. At least Anne thought Clinton called that very evening. He and Anne discussed several subjects, he always conceding and bringing her over to his view of the matter discussed. Now different from Alexander who always agreed with her! When he had gone Anne thought: "What a wonderful brain Clinton has, after all. And how really fascinating his opinions are. I wonder how one feels when they are in love?"

For the next few days all she could think of was Clinton. A few days after he call upon Anne he went to see Mr. Wakefield at his office in the city—and was there for about some law business for the firm of which Clinton had just become a junior were handling a very important lawsuit for the Wakefield, the loss of which would cause him much distress of mind and decrease of income.

"Howard," said Mr. Wakefield when they had discussed the law suit for some time, "you are the first lawyer who has seemed really to get a grip on this case and I have tried many lawyers in it. I must put the suit or I am ruined—and financially ruined—and I see clearly that you can win it for me."

"I can," replied Clinton, "and I believe I can win it for you without a can. Now to change the subject—I want to marry your daughter."

"What?" exclaimed Wakefield, "marry Anna?"

"Precisely," replied Clinton; "I love her and I believe she loves me well be the cause of the scalp soreness that you experience after each brushing. This Meat Loaf Recipe Subject to Variations

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Menu Hint

Meat Loaf Scalloped Potatoes
Carrots Beet and Cabbage Salad
Old English Date Pie Coffee

This meat loaf recipe is the basic one. It may be varied in a number of ways.

Today's Recipes

STANDARD MEAT LOAF.—One and one-half pounds ground beef, one-half pound ground pork, one small onion, grated; one cup fine dry bread or cracker crumbs, two tablespoons salt, one-fifth teaspoon pepper, two eggs, slightly beaten; one cup milk. Have beef from chuck or chuck and pork from the shoulder, ground together. Season with grated onion, salt and pepper. Add bread crumbs and salt well. Moisten with slightly beaten egg and milk. Pack into a greased loaf pan and bake at a moderate temperature (350 degrees F.) until done, about one and a half hours.

OLD ENGLISH DATE PIE.—Plain pastry, one-half package pastetourined dates, three-fourths cup sugar, one cup chopped walnuts, one-eighth teaspoon nutmeg, one-eighth teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon fine bread crumbs, two eggs, one cup sweet cream. Line a nine-inch pie plate with pastry which has been rolled to a thickness of one-eighth inch. Sprinkle with cinnamon and nutmeg. Cream the butter, add sugar, spices, salt and bread crumbs; then beat in sugar mixture gradually, then the milk. Pour into pastry lined pie plate. Sprinkle coconut over the surface.

To whip cream rapidly wrap the bar in a wet bowl sprinkled with ice water. Continue to use for short time before whipping. Also add a pinch of salt to the cream and whip.

Place in hot oven (450 degrees F.) for ten minutes; reduce temperature to very moderate heat (325 degrees F.) and continue to bake for 30 to 35 minutes or until the custard will not adhere to a silver knife inserted in the centre. This makes one pie.

FAUTS AND FANCIES

What Refrigerator Dishes

Jars and containers left in the refrigerator should be wiped off with a cloth, nearly every day—to prevent them from leaving dark rings on the shelves in the kitchen box.

The moisture which forms on the jars, the bowls and dishes, it increases during the summer months.

Tasty Cheese

Cream peppers, cut in halves, and simmered for ten minutes make tasty cases for creamed or scalloped chicken, fish, hard cooked eggs and cheese or scalloped fish. After the peppers have been filled, put them in the oven for five minutes or so to brown the tops.

Wakefield must win that case. And after all Clinton's prospects were excellent. So Mrs. Wakefield said to Anna the next day: "Clinton called and I have been considering. As you don't seem to like the husband we have chosen for you, choose one yourself.

Anna did so, choosing Clinton, who prognosed that very night. Mr. Wakefield won his suit—and Anna's son-in-law who is now a distinguished judge.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

"Silver Spurs"

Buck Jones' latest adventure film, "Silver Spurs," at the Capitol on Saturday only, matinee and evening, is photographically one of the finest pictures that has come to this city in many a moon.

A carefully conceived story, filled with action, mystery and romance, lifts this attraction out of the ordinary run of Western cinemas. Buck Jones is splendid in his role. His daring exploits excite the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

A band of outlaws and rustlers have everything their own way in the town of Loma and surrounding range country because the sheriff, secretly in partnership with the band, shuts his eyes to their depredations. Government agents are called to restore law and order. A murder, in which several people are innocently involved, is committed. The realism and suspense and mystery are so well sustained that few will be able to guess the outcome until the unusual climax reveals it.

Muriel Evans is delightful cast as leading woman and capable supporting players include Beth Marion and "Silver," Buck's famous horse.

Added Features

In addition to this thrilling Western drama, a complete program of short features is offered. An "Oswald" the rabbit cartoon "Music Hath Charms," a Pete Smith League, "Songs of the Danube," a musical comedy revue, "Speed and Justice", the latest "News Events" and Coronation Scenes complete the program.

AT THE BELLE

"Varsity Show"

"Varsity Show," a musical comedy along altogether new lines, and which has a many musical comedies have been kept. There is an air of brisk freshness and youth and gayety to it rarely found in movie-musicals.

Rosemary Lane, lovely to look at, is Dick Powell's romantic fenetine interest, while her sister Priscilla will make a big hit as a clever and adept dancers to be seen upon the screen as singing and dancing waiters of the school.

"Varsity Show" is a refreshing relief in its story from the well-worn "back-stage" routine that which many musical comedies have been kept. There is an air of brisk freshness and youth and gayety to it rarely found in movie-musicals.

Rosemary Lane, lovely to look at, is Dick Powell's romantic fenetine interest, while her sister Priscilla will make a big hit as a clever and adept dancers to be seen upon the screen as singing and dancing waiters of the school.

There are, of course plenty of dance numbers and chorus. The smashing finals of the show...directed and directed by Busby Berkeley, with no less than 300 girls and 300 boys in a picturesque and breath-taking routine, coming up and down a high and wide flight of silver type. Cute.

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, impersonating the college band that they made so famous in musical way, and there are half a dozen specialties by Fred Waring and Johnny Mercer.

Belle Nesbitt "World News Events, a comicolor cartoon and on Saturday matinee a chapter of the thrilling "Buck Tracy" serial will be presented.

Irene Dunne, Doparis

Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott will appear at the Belle tonight only in the glorious musical romantic-drama "High, Wide and Handsome." The March of Time offering 30 minutes of sheer drama, precedes the feature attraction.

Girls Ask Advice On Boys' Gift

By VIRGINIA LEE

Seems to be a little Christmas problem that may be embarrassing to more young folk than to the ones who wrote to me asking my advice:

"MISS LEE: Here are two more friends with a little puzzle. We each have a boy friend whom we have met lately. He's are wondering whether it is proper to give them Christmas presents. We were thinking a framed photograph might be nice, but would like your point of view. Tell us you kindly tell us what we should do? PUZZLED PAIR."

If the boys have said they would like your photographs, girls, I suppose it would be all right to give them. But don't you think framed photographs are rather formal gifts to boys with whom you have not been acquainted very long? I think so, and it seems to me a less personal gift would be better at this stage of the game. When a couple has been going together for some time and is planning to be married eventually, an exchange of photographs is correct.

But, according to your letter, you are not "going steady" or if you are, it is quite recent. Why not give them books, pens, pencils, bookends or something like that—not too expensive — for this Christmas? St. Valentine's day is coming, you know, and that is the time you will know the boys better and maybe they would like the pictures for their valentines. I feel such a gift should be reserved for the sure enough sweethearts.

LONELY: As you are only 15, I think you are very wise to obey your father and mother, and not do anything to hurt the dear people. Tell your mother, however, about the boy, and try to get him to come to your home and meet your people. They may not allow you to go out with him, but he could visit at your home occasionally if they like him. Maybe you could somehow have your father and mother ask him home. Don't tell your mother you like him so well.

I am very glad you don't stand on street corners, and talk to boys. Cheer up, dear. You are doing well to get into the habit of weeping and feeling sorry for yourself.

"DEAR MISS LEE: I hope you will grant this letter in answer to "Clooney." This girl hasn't any reason to believe she was tricked, simply because the boy will probably know that I have been unable to obtain a steady date.

"Why in the world did she decide—literally into walking when we chanced to meet on the street? Some must have known she broke my heart by so doing. How do you suppose I felt having this trouble heaped on what I already had? I don't want this girl to suffer because of a misunderstanding. Miss Lee, so I ask your advice.

"UNEMPLOYED."

Maybe the girl who signed her name "Clooney" can straighten this one out. If she stopped speaking to her boy friend and broke his heart, she should try to make amends. Maybe he was gloomy and she thought he no longer cared, and that is why she stopped speaking. Why don't you try to see her and straighten the whole thing out, Unemployed?

HELEN C.: While he likes to go with you there is hope that this boy may grow to like you better, so why not accept his companionship occasionally? Try not to fall too much in love with him, however, as you MAY be disappointed, you know. You have a good chance to win him, however, if you care to do that.

COLONIAL HOUSE POPULAR

Design 412-B, Courtesy National Plan Service, Inc., Chicago

Colonial type home containing seven rooms with dining set in kitchen; contains $5,400 cubic feet.

COLONIAL architecture is not spectacular, but it is extremely popular with discriminating people for its simplicity, dignity, and the fact that it allows an excellent amount of rooms.

This seven-room frame house has the usual central hall associated with this type of architecture, with benches on each side of the front stoop. It has a large living room, with hearth, on one side of the hall, dining room and kitchen with dining set on the other.

Upstairs are four bedrooms, each with its adjoining closet, and a bathroom. A large porch, which leads out of the living room, makes a deck on the second floor, which can easily be made into an upstairs outdoor sitting room or a sleeping porch.

The entire house contains 26,600 cubic feet. The size of the main building is 35 feet by 23 feet four inches; size over all 37 by 27 feet.

Steak platter with chromium server, glass insert centre for meat or fish.

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

WHEN IT comes to buying a gift for the girl who is to be married, the newly wedded bride, or mother, nothing would please any of them better than something for the home that is lovely in itself, and practical.

Such a gift is this steak platter, which is a boon to the hostess. It embodies the two qualities most desired for serving and entertaining. It is both decorative and useful.

The server itself is made of chromium, and it has a well center with a glass insert. The side compartments can be used for vegetables and cold salads, and the center for meat or fish. The crystal glass compartment is useful for other types of serving, also.

This server is especially useful for buffet serving, because its size and space permit cold cuts, canapes and other delicacies to be grouped on one tray.

Most propitious auguries for progress and prosperity mark this day, according to the lunar and mundane aspects. Business, finance and all pertaining to writing published and promotions should flourish, possible following some sudden news of importance. However, there will be stubborn obstacles frustrations and possible postponements to be handled tactfully. The social domestic and affectional lives also are under a sign of high adventure and pleasurable activity. Treasure a powerful friendship.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of splendid opportunity for promotion, enlarged finances and enhanced popularity and prestige. Both big business and all pertaining to writings and publishing should offer scope for high achievement despite certain frustrations, delays and set-backs. Hasty news may figure in events.

Muscular Chest Pain Discussed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

FOR THE PAST year or two there have been reported epidemics of the old disease sometimes called "intercostal neuralgia" or "acute muscular rheumatism of the chest wall". This condition has not appeared with any frequency for a number of years. I remember the epidemic about 30 years ago vividly, because I had it myself.

The principal symptom is a pain or extreme sensitivity around the chest wall. It may be on one side, or both. Sometimes it is under the breast bone, sometimes on the back and shoulders, and sometimes in the upper abdomen. The outstanding symptom is pain on breathing, especially on deep breathing. The patient usually lying or sitting very quietly in bed, the breathing is rapid and shallow, and the eyes suffuse with tears on account of the extreme pain. Even children find that crying will aggravate their discomfort and remain quiet. The feeling in the neighborhood will probably call it "The Devil's Grip", and this name shortly runs through the neighborhood; because of its appropriateness everybody uses it.

So far as treatment is concerned, opinions the best is what a doctor of my acquaintance said to a patient when she complained that she could not take a deep breath. "Its replied, "Take two short ones instead."

Patients Have Fever

All the patients have a little fever and a feeling of chilliness; sometimes a headache. The pain does not last long, from about one half hour to three or four hours, but attacks of pain are liable to come back as often as two or three times within 24 hours. Usually this is the rule and for from four days to a week, these attacks of pain will come on during the day and night hours, until gradually they wear themselves out.

The epidemic character of it is easily noted, and it is not infrequent to find several cases in one family. The real cause is unknown. There are those who think it is due to water or milk infection.

Mistakes in diagnosis are not very common, especially in the middle of an epidemic. Sometimes it will be mistaken for pleurisy or pneumonia. Such mistakes should not occur, because aside from the pain and the fever, with epidemic muscular rheumatism of the chest there are no signs, while pleurisy and pneumonia both have signs which any doctor can interpret.

Although frightening on account of the intensity of the pain, the outlook is good, and all cases that have been examined have recovered.

BLACK WITH COLOR POPULAR IN MODE

By Central Press

METAL — gold or silver — and other glittering trimming has been so much used this season that it is refreshing to turn to a dress that is designed with some other decorative medium.

The dramatic dinner ensemble pictured here and worn by the debutante is in black silk crepe with an 1860 silhouette. An unusual lace-framing collar of pink silk taffeta gives it a fresh new look.

With this dress is worn a Lilly Dache sequin cap with wide net brim and rhinestone streamers. Notice the bow at the top and under the chin.

Combinations of colors are very delightful in the new fashions shown recently in New York for spring and resort wear by the Fashion Group, a national group of women who are handed together to sponsor the very best in the fashion world.

Pink is combined with brown as well as black for daytime. In fact, black with color is decidedly important in the fashions society women are wearing. Evening colors are strong and clear, especially in prints. And many wide skirts are being shown for dancing.

Style Whimsies

Horizontal treatments are being used in Paris. A navy dress is banded in green and maize—an Alix model; Vionnet shows coats that are seamed in wide crosswise bands; draped coats have groups of tucks suggesting the crosswise lines. Jean Patou flounces the skirts of her evening dresses in horizontal rows, suggesting a wide ribbon treatment.

Gold powder is being dusted on the heads of smart women to make shining "topknots" for evening wear. Redheads, redheads and brunettes are all doing it.

Siebert Gets First of Season Goupille First in the N. H. L. As the Canadiens Beat Bruins

First Defeat Registered Against Boston This Season

WIDE OPEN GAME

Hawks Move Into Second Place in Section by Beating Rangers

By The Canadian Press

When the opposition is willing to try, Montreal Canadiens can be the flying Frenchmen of old—perhaps the National Hockey League's most dazzling team.

Canadiens' flock of flyweight forwards don't always revel in coordinated defensive play and heavy hitting, but Cecil Hart's clever cast is by no means at a team willing to wage a speed contest and the boys is bound to be spectacular.

Boston Bruins carried a record of eight games without a defeat into Montreal last night and elected to match skating prowess with the Canadiens. They became the losers last team to record a loss when the bustling Habitants shot them out 3-0 before a crowd of 7,000 that endorsed the wide open, penalty-less play.

Canadiens stepped into a second-place tie with New York Americans and Montreal Maroons, four points behind Toronto in the Canadian division. Tomorrow night Americans visit Maroons and Canadiens invade Toronto. The Leafs and Maroons have played two more games than their rivals.

With Paul Thompson and Johnny Gottselig marking the way, Chicago Black Hawks vaulted over the in-and-out New York Rangers into second place, five points behind Boston, by defeating Rangers 3-1 at Chicago. Thompson became the American division's scoring leader by adding number 18 to his total and aiding Gottselig in the winning effort.

Wage Great Duel

Wilf Cude and Tiny Thompson waged a goal-tending duel at Montreal as play ranged quickly from end to end, and one minute Cude emerged winner. As the two goals went by, Thompson slipped behind Earl Robertson of Americans in the netminders' race, the low total of 11 scores against Robertson giving him an advantage of one.

Defencemen Babe Siebert and Clint Goupille made their first goals of the season and the forwards' frenzied attack had to go unrewarded. Charlie Sands aged down on Cude three times, only to be outmanoeuvred at the goalmouth, Johnny Gagnon, Pit Lepine and Earl Lorrain led drive after drive on the able Thompson.

Siebert started the tide with a good guess as the first period died. Caught in a corner on a play created by young Polly Drummond, he aimed at Thompson's leg and the puck bounded into the net from a spot just two seconds before the chapter's close.

Hawks Come From Behind

Maintaining the pace through the second and third periods, the Hawks refused to yield a big opportunity by drawing a penalty and the visitors drew into the first of the N. H. L. schedule to pass without a sentence. Major minutes from the Chicago cop-pills, playing his first full season in the big league, broke a 1-1 deadlock for wards from a Bruin mass attack. Doc Blake was stopped by Chapper but Goupille slipped his goal shot kept going to 21% it by Thompson.

The Hawks had to come from behind to subdue Rangers 3-1, after Mickey Cochrane's men had established its first period on Alex Shibicky's pass. When Bryan Hextall drew a minor penalty for the period Thompson, a member of the first Ranger team and brother of the Boston goalie, began the defeat of his old mates.

Joe Lamb and Gottselig drew assists on the power play that ended in Thompson's counter. Then when Phil Watson of Rangers went off hale in the third Thompson and Goody had all the fun park for Gottselig's goal on another big drive.

The 7,600 who attended saw, in contrast to the Montreal game, a small parade of penalties. Lynn Patrick of Rangers and Roger Jenkins of the crew majors in the first for fighting.

MIKE COCHRANE DONE AS PLAYER

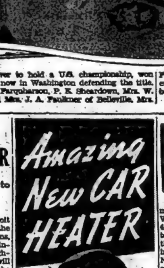
Will Devote His Time to First Base Coaching Job

Milwaukee, Dec. 3—(AP)—Detroit Tigers, second place finisher in the American League for two seasons, are sick of it all and are taking out insurance in the form of a high-powered scoring system that will put 10 full-time ivory hunters in the field.

Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Baseball Club since the death of Frank Navin, said in announcing the new set-up that the Tigers hoped to compete more successfully with the Bronx system of the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals in acquiring and converting promising youngsters.

Jo Perrita, coach since Mickey Cochrane became Detroit manager, becomes a scout under this arrangement and Cochrane will replace him as first base coach and call all the plays. Heretofore coach Del Baker, who will remain at the third base coaching box, called the signals.

This move was another indication that Cochrane is completely through as a catcher. For some time Cochrane has been manager, vice-president, Detroit office co-ordinator of scouting activities and, until his recent illness, a first class No. 1 catcher for the club. His health has made it necessary to lighten his load.



Jack Zeller will remain as chief scout.

Tiger-Sox Swap

The first big deal of the minor league meetings came off yesterday with Chicago White Sox trading Vern Kennedy, ace pitcher, Dixie Walker, outfielder and Tony Piet, an infielder, to Detroit Tigers for Marvin Owen, a third sacker, outfielder Gerald Walker and Mike Tresh, a young catcher.

The deal was a straight player trade, with no cash involved. Manager Neil Colville had put the visitors Mickey Cochrane of the Tigers jointly announced the transaction.

A trade between Detroit and the Sox had been "on the fire" for two days, with Dykes reported unwilling to part with Dixie Walker and Cochrane balking at giving up Owen.

Eighty thousand bales, or 40,000,000 pounds of American-grown cotton are consumed annually by one American tire company in the making of cord for use in the manufacture of tires and other products.

Until quite recently, there was a "no man's land" in Switzerland. A small triangular acreage was set aside more than 100 years ago as a refuge for wayfarers "without a country."

During the first eight months of the current year Canada produced 229,899,425 pounds of copper, an increase of 72.4 per cent. over the output in the corresponding period of 1936.

The Kingston City hockey team moved into the leadership of the Van Horne Memorial series with a 6 to 2 victory over the fast Perth team on Wednesday night and yet the Kingston interests are clamouring for additional man-power from Napanee. The Napanee City Recorder informs his readers that "Belleville is in the wrong" insofar as the Napanee issue is concerned according to the O.H.A. rulings. Just because Manager Jim Sutherland says Belleville is wrong, does not mean such is the case. The Kingston interests apparently have side-tracked the actual ruling that no player must play with his nearest O.H.A. town reached by "A SMART TRAVELED ROAD".

The Kingston writer says Kingston is nearer to Napanee than Belleville by the highway, but the rules governing the matter will be terms as a "short cut". Friend—It's no short cut, the road in question is the original Toronto-Montreal highway and is still known as the "Old Road" and is being maintained by the Department of Highways. Jim Sutherland, who has always been a friend in the midst of Belleville hockey interests, mentions the entire question in the following statement: "It is not a Belleville-Napanee-Kingston question, but a Napanee protest endorsed and some definite rule should be evolved to prevent Ontario-wide trouble as other sections would want the same privileges if a rule of this nature is established." As we see it, there is no changing of rules at all. The O.H.A. regulations say by "a well travelled road" and the York Road is as well a travelled road as any other road in the district. As a matter of fact this is the short cut the Kingston writer calls the Marysville-Napanee road, it is backed by the new highway now under construction east of here and is paved in part of Lennox County, kept open in the winter and a re-opened well travelled road. Let Mr. Sutherland get around that if he can.

The Belleville Reidmen can climb well into the running in the Van Horne Memorial series tonight by winning over the Kingston Garrison, the latter having a tie with Perth and a win over Kingston City. Incidentally we were sorry to learn of the serious illness of Jimmie Whyte, assistant sports editor of the St. Catharines Standard, who was recently removed to the Toronto General Hospital following a serious operation in his native city. It was through Jimmie Whyte that "Cy" Barrigar and "Speedy" St. Louis located in Thorold recently. Jimmy being the secretary of the Mountain-side Athletic Association and the Thorold game at Niagara Falls for its last spring in a most competent manner. It is sincerely hoped Jimmie will soon be completely well and again take up his duties efficiently to permit his return home.

The Central Hastings Rural Hockey League, that energetic body of go-getters to operate in the Stirling Arena, will hold its annual meeting in President Joe Wilson's Agricultural offices, Stirling, on Saturday night. The C.H.R.H.L. has been a flourishing organization for the past few seasons, but results has the West Hastings team, which was always a drawing card and the best this season. Our rural hockey correspondent, from Stirling, Art Duncan, informs us that Frankford will make representation for an affiliation this season, thereby maintaining a strong organization. The winning team of the old Trent Valley League once again, when Whitby and Oshawa villagers will be assured of plenty of good hockey during the coming season, with a brand new loop and the Trent Valley hockey being played in the splendid Stirling rink.

"Duke" Smith's Belleville Yacht Club hockey team was accepted into the Trent Valley League again this season, with a new entry from Trenton. As a matter of fact nine clubs attended with Trent Trail Valley League necessitating two groups. Trend, Madoc, Marmora, Norwood and Bancroft will form a northern division, while Campbellford, Stirling, Trenton and the Belleville Yacht Club will compose the southern section. Incidentally no O.H.A. players are to be permitted on either the Belleville or Trenton clubs, although no mention of such an agreements were made relative to the remaining seven clubs. The Trent Valley moguls struck upon a novel idea lately, league play-offs, however. The first second and third placed clubs in each respective group will play-off with a similar placed clubs in the opposite group, leaving a team to enter the final play-downs. A double schedule, interlocking, will be drafted. It is understood that the Belleville Yacht Club will play all of their home games in the rink of Trenton this side the bay.

It is understood, that the Peterborough hockey interests are far from pleased with their locale O.H.A. grouping of three teams Havelock, Belleville and Peterboro. The affiliated City aspects denied at least a few teased prepping. Eddie Shrumm's surprises at placing Peterboro and Havelock into the Lake Shore group and including Belleville in the Quinte group. Of course they might have been more acceptable for the latter, ladies and gents.

Do you remember when Twenty-two-year-old Johnny Cox, Univer-sity of Toronto football star, died in hospital from years ago here as result of a bandit's bullet. The young athlete grappled with a burglar in his home and was shot in the abdomen. City and province-wide searches revealed no trace of the killer.

Pursuant to a previous Para-graph in this week's sport column, we regret to have to report the following, received this today:—

Toronto, Dec. 3.—(CP)—James A. Whyte, 39, sports columnist of the Toronto Star and formerly of the Standard died in hospital here last night, following a brief illness. Mr. Whyte joined the staff of the Standard as sports editor and was well representative and sports columnist. He conducted "Sports Parade." Much of his time was devoted to further the cause of sport.

Rayon mixed with wool to produce a cheaper fabric is harder to detect than presence of cotton in a woollen material.

The average passenger automobile uses over 600 gallons of gasoline in a year.

Sandra was a little nervous, but sitting there looking at Matt Stanley, she decided he was as bad off as he wanted to appear and that if he had wouldn't sooner or later he should be almost good-looking. Matt was no dark. He was not tall, but sturdily built. His hair and eyes were black and his wide mouth, closed, was a hard straight line. He'd now had a hard straight line broke and the thin lips parted—and Matt said, gruffly, "Wilson phoned you were coming in, but he didn't tell me your name."

They had talked that over, Sandra and Emily Stewart and Bryant Wilson, and they had thought it best that Sandra not use her own last name. So she ran nervily from that and she told him, "Sandra Marshall."

"Any newspaper experience?"

"No," Sandra said, "but—"

"I'm a typewriter."

"After a fashion. Two fingers," finishing—watching Matt's scowl deepen.

"A reporter doesn't need more than two fingers," Matt said, and hitched forward. "Wilson's president of the board and he wanted me to give you a try-out. All right, you'll get a try-out, but don't get the idea Wilson pulled any wires. You're working for me here and you deliver the goods or you're on your way. Is that clear?"

Sandra smiled again. "Quite, Mr. Stanley. Do I go to work at once?"

Matt looked at her, steadily, but he didn't scowl. He looked like he'd spunk and this girl had it. She didn't scare. But she was too darn good-looking to be any good as a reporter—and there was Wilson. He knew Wilson's angle, and there was something about this girl that didn't fit the picture. Well—herd see.

"Report around the place this afternoon and find out what's what. You can take the last desk back there in the corner. Be on at eight sharp tomorrow morning."

She said, "Thank you, Mr. Stanley," got up and looked "around" the big city room. The room was crowded with desks and the floor was littered with copy paper. A bald, middle-aged man who said his name was Woodward took her in hand and introduced her to the copy-readers and the several men reporters who were busy at their desks. There were two girls on the staff, he said, but they were out on assignments.

"It's a tough racket," Woodward told her, "but it's better than starving. The Flash sells to many people and poor people like to read about rich people in trouble. That's our line, digging up dirt about them that has, for the amusement of those that haven't, but don't dig-up the things out—just think about that old gag check and slash away ... If I can give you a hint, I don't know."

Sandra thanked him, went back to the desk she was to use and tried out the typewriter a bit. Five o'clock everybody went home and she looked at her desk and went out and took Harvey, Dalgleish, Stephen Hall and Chet and David, about Stephen and Nonny MacKinnon and this thing she had done. And suddenly remembered David's trial tomorrow morning—realized for the first time she wouldn't be there.

Fannie Roberts had entered the apartment just ahead of her and Sandra, found her in the bedroom getting out of her things, with a feverish impatience that indicated a hasty date. Fannie, always a fussy-ruffles, ruffles, ruffles, and there was a red tint in it.

"Like your eye," Fannie said through the transparent silk of her slip. "I've been standing in the bath an electric stove for two hours and they had the blame thing going. Don't ask me why. It was an hour's job to depict the incomparable ease of surprising, and had to do it all over again. How'd you make out with your precious job?"

"It's giving me a try-out tomorrow," Sandra told her.

"Who's he?" Fannie wanted to know.

Matt Stanley," Sandra replied, sinking to the foot of the bed. "Managing editor of The Flash. He's hard as nails, Fannie."

"The harder they are, the easier they are to handle, baby. Give him as good as he sends and if he forgets you're a lady—!"

Sandra smiled. "I'm not afraid of him. But I am afraid of the job. It frightens me, Fannie."

"Of course it's brutal," Fannie declared. "But life's brutal, too. You can't think about it, Sandra. Grab it and live it a try-out. I had it that way until my father jumped in front of a subway train. That was five years ago. I was in my early quite frivolous avenue, but we had plenty and the prospect of more. Then the crash came and we woke up one morning without a red cent. Father couldn't take, but I figured I was entitled to a living and I meant to have it. I've had it. I've had it the last few last five years, but I'm on my way up. I'm on the right track now and I've made the right kind of friends. When this posing racket is through I'm going to open a shop of my own. Brutal? Say, listen—I'm as brutal as I have to be and I'm proud of myself that way. If you're going places, Sandra, you've got to shut your eyes to everything but your own personal advancement."

Sandra said, "But I don't want to be brutal. I want to live simply and decently and quietly."

"So she wasn't qualified to hold the average run of jobs and there weren't many openings in the city for real newspapers; it was either take anything she could get or go back home. Well, she'd give this job on The Flash all she had. Perhaps she could harden herself to it.

Fannie went to the bathroom and presently shut off the shower to call out, "Let's go out and get a snack and talk about this job, Sandra. I need diversion and the boy friend's out of town."

X X X

It was five minutes to eight, but Matt Stanley was already stalking about the city room, snapping orders, when Sandra arrived. He called to her.

"Good morning, Mr. Stanley."

Matt was no longer looking at her. "Got anything this girl can do, maybe."

"No, I want to see if she can write. Get a couple of rewrites at the desk schedule, put a finger down—Thompson, isn't that?"

"Thompson," the city editor said, "and a photographer."

"Right. Get a hunt; put Thompson on something else." He turned to Sandra. "There's a murder and this young fool from Park avenue got himself plastered and ran down a couple of kids. Brother is the father's a prominent lawyer and they're all in a dither, Thompson trying to keep this young snoot out of jail. Never mind what he does to the story. Get this young Brooks the works and—" Matt Stanley was suddenly silent, then spoke, looking curiously on Sandra's bloodless face. "Are you sick or something?"

Sandra shook her head and managed a smile. "No, Mr. Stanley, I'm all right." Thinking, "This isn't happening. This can't really have happened."

Matt said, "All right, beat to it!" He walked off with the corners of his mouth pulled down. There was no time for thinking about Sandra. Everybody was running. Thompson, the city editor, the photographer, Sandra. She had to get this young fool from Park avenue

Late Shopping is UNFAIR to SANTA CLAUS

AND it's unfair to you and the stores and the postman; the overworked miss behind the counter, the folks who sell gifts, the folks who buy 'em and the ones that get 'em!

Listen! Why PUNISH yourself this year? Why fight your way through a mob ten-deep? Why take a chance on finding the very things you want to buy gone — SOLD OUT! Why deliberately turn what can be a leisurely, pleasure-ly shopping jaunt into a SCRAMBLE? Have a heart, lady . . .

don't—don't do it again this year!

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 2 (AP) — Stock market leaders bounded up one to four points in today's erratic session. A few hardy issues showed much higher.

The list hesitated at the opening, but selling was light and a buying rush got under way in the second hour. During the first half hour the ticker tape was behind. Volume then dwindled and gains sometimes were reduced. There was another quiet hour and a subsequent falling off in accumulation and prices. Trade also gained, though, were still in evidence near the finish. Transfers were about 1,700,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—The market hit the upward trade today on the Toronto Exchange and practically all groups trailed along with the golds and the western oils in the lead. From a slow start the base metal section came on at a better pace in the afternoon but they ended up in the last proceedings under profit-taking. Volume crowded the million share mark, the heaviest in more than a month.

Board Room Gossip

Market Comment

The securities exchanges took but little notice of the calendar, December starting off on much the same unexciting note as the closing period. Movements during the preceding period. Movements locally remain largely unchanged while in New York showed an easing tendency accompanied by rather light dealings. Still lacking on Wall Street is the much-hoped-for confidence in the ability of the steel and motor issues to show the way to firmer prices.

Some encouragement is presently forthcoming from the considered opinion of steel interests that their industry has reached its low point of activity in the United States and with a little flattening out from this point on, signs would begin to emerge of a betterment in demand and output. The main factor prevented by this argument is that stocks which were built up earlier in the year are now being rapidly depleted and the need for re-purchasing is steadily being manifested in many districts, notably Youngstown, there has already been a pick-up in activity.

MAKING HISTORY

International Nickey of Canada Limited made history this year. This company is disbursing $34,747,500 to its stockholders. It may come as a revelation to many to know that this rate of profit from this mining company exceeds that of any other concern in Canada's history. The record actually exceeds that set by the great Canadian Pacific Railway at the peak of its prosperity in the year 1929. International Limited is the only corporation now whose disbursements to shareholders come near the figure established by nickel.

FRANKFORD MAN PLEADS GUILTY

Ross Chard to Receive Sentence in One Month

Ross Chard, 28 of Frankford, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving negligent operation of a motor car, causing grievous bodily harm to Mrs. Mary Mercer, when he appeared for trial before Magistrate K. J. Bailey, K.C., in Marysburg Local police court. His Worship postponed sentence for one month at the suggestion of R. C. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney.

The charge against Chard arose from a motor accident that happened on the night of Frankford, when an automobile driven by the accused struck Mrs. McPherson, knocking her down and resulting in a fractured leg.

The injured lady is in the hospital and will be confined there for about a month, so that the postponed sentence for that period?" His Worship asked following which he advised the accused man to procure the services of a lawyer. Chard's driver's license was indefinitely suspended by the court.

Gerald Lawrence, Frankford, admitted he had failed to notify the Department of Highways of the sale of a motor car, contrary to the H.T.A. "Such sale must be filed with the department, ten dollars and costs," remanded his Worship.

No evidence was submitted by the Provincial Police against Hector Weavrt, Peterborough Township farmer who was arrested on a charge of driving a motor truck on summer cottages in the neighbourhood of Roseneath, which charge His Worship to dismiss the charges. "It wasn't me. It was my partner who broke into those cottages," Weavrt is reported by police authorities to have told them, and charges were included the day's proceedings.

Miss Minnie Allen, 20 year old, wife of James Dawson of Desoronto was committed for trial at the next Supreme Court of Session for the County of Hastings by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., after hearing two charged of attempting to obtain, by false declaration, a sum of money by making a false statement for compensation in respect of loss as the result of a fire, in today's local police court. Charles A. Payne K.C., acted for the defence.

BAY FROZEN OVER FOR FIRST TIME

The bay was completely frozen over from the mouth of the Moira river at a point just north of the canal bridge to the north shore of Prince Edward county on Saturday following a continuance of the freezing weather which first formed actual ice in the harbor yesterday morning. Floes of gulls which had gathered their living from the water during the open months have now taken up their annual patrol of the city dump, while the last of the boat owners were breaking the ice in the harbor in an effort to berth their boats on land for the winter. That three boats remained ice-locked and are now being removed, the work boat, P. E. Wright and two smaller fishing craft all locally owned.

DISCUSS ISSUES OF CIVIC NATURE AT YACHT CLUB

Splendid Musical Program Supplied by Collegiate Band

MANY PRESENT

Lighting of Victoria Park Promised by Many Candidates

Discussions of the issues of the day by new aldermanic candidates and the accounting of their stewardship by councillors, mayoralty candidates and citizens seeking election to school board featured the annual get together held at the Belleville Yacht Club rooms last evening, where a large delegation of Foster Ward electors listened with interest to the various discourses advanced by the candidates.

Generally speaking, the meeting was marked with calmness and serenity, the tranquility of the meeting only being interrupted by one citizen, whose verbal ad added spice and wit to the proceedings, however, Citing poetry and song at random, the one time citizen repeatedly brought rounds of laughter to the audience and the odd smile of understanding from the respective speakers, as the wit and humor injected was of the cleanest type and nonetheless effective for whatsoever.

Civic Issues Discussed

Considerable time was made by some of the speakers, particularly those aspiring in the mayoralty and aldermanic fields, to the questions of new industry for Belleville in the future, the matter of daylight saving and the potentialities of the Belleville Beaches project, which latter was the only mention made by Alderman Lewis regarding the inequality of business assessment in Belleville, were the prime factors of the candidates' discussions aside from new-arrivals.

During the evening a splendid musical programme was provided by the members of the Collegiate Vocational School band under the baton of Bandmaster Hoard, while representatives of organization the members of the Yacht Club Association pointed with pride and honor.

Speaking for a delegation of the Rural Ratepayers Association, Mr. E. V. Illsey, manager of the Bank of Commerce in Belleville, urged the electors of Foster Ward and Belleville to consider the working man, "Give daylight saving a fair say," Mr. Illsey paled glowing tribute to the value of organized recreation and sports in Belleville and the Yacht Club and asked them to consider the pleasure and headaches of others by supporting daylight saving.

Maurice Callaghan, president of the Belleville Yacht Club, welcomed the candidates and citizens following which he outlined the activities of the club and the accomplishments during the past year, particularly the beautification of the Belleville waterfront. "There is only one thing this club desires," he said, "and that is a lighted Victoria Park in 1938. There has been much discussion on this point for the past and I believe this can be alleviated by Hydro Power," stated Frederick Callaghan. In reply, Commissioner Eddie Shapiro, of the Parks Board assured the gathering that the lights would be erected next season. "The lights will be the gift of the last summer and adopted by our Board," assured Mr. Shapiro.

Mayor Replies

In the absence of Mr. Bone, Alderman Lewis, mayoralty candidate is seeking election as mayor next Monday, was the first speaker. He complimented your city faithfully for the past six years on the payment of taxes, stating that he had accumulated your debt. I am in favour of having the lights on the park for reason than to attract visiting yachtsmen in the summertime," I won't say it was my policy to put a short outline of his views on the mayoralty, Alderman Lewis of Belleville. Alderman Wm. Harvey another candidate for mayor, Alderman Minnie Allen of your city, 25 years in civic life and know the needs of the community. We must look to industry in our city, but it will take the united efforts of all," stated the speaker. Mr. Harvey is one of the Hydro Commission, also of

All speakers of the evening agreed with Mayor Bone, however, The City of Belleville is in a good financial basis and ready to add to the sanitary conveniences under the tax rate. Alderman Clarence Clapp, head of the present city council, presented his report on the workings of the Public Works Department, which, he stated, from the estimates given me and would have the effect of saving by the installation of storm sewers that cost $7,000.00. He concluded Alderman Clapp in giving due accounts of his stewardship.

Alderman Ambrose Armstrong and Harvey, who are seeking election for the office of mayor on Monday, the aldermanic candidates present were:

J. W. Barlow, A. Kennedy, E. J. Baldres, L. Lewis, B. F. Jennings and Barrager, and Messrs. Ackroyd, M. J. Haig, Ben Sale, Raymond Carr, Eddie Logan, Robt. Martin, Harry Rollins, T. Stephenson and Dr. J. Marshall.

The candidates aspiring for School Trustee positions present were: H. J. Allin (youngest chairman of a school board in Ontario), W. J. Harrison, Dr. Kinnear, Geo. Griffin, P. C. McGuire, R. E. Zufelt and Reg. Moncrief.

In a more elaborate setting and giving their final appeal to the electors of the city, the various candidates will address the electors at the City Hall tonight, where all issues pro and contra pertaining to the welfare of the municipality will be thoroughly discussed by the candidates.

Deseronto may acquire one more new industry it was learned by The Intelligencer today, at that town in an announcement that a new canning company plant would be erected there at a cost of $30,000. The plant is expected to be in operation there for next season's pack.

BEGGING TRANSIENTS ON THE INCREASE

Cold weather of the past two or three days has driven many begging transients from the railway jungles and the sides of fast moving box cars, and with the result there is an increase in numbers noticed morning and evening on the main streets and requests for dimes for the usual cup of coffee and the old standby of hard luck stories. The police force continue to gather in strength and every night about 10 o'clock a motley ship into pockets for the necessary cash. Householders also find the requests increasing for the usual handouts of sandwiches or meals.

DECORATIONS AT CITY HALL AUDITORIUM TO BE LEFT IN PLACE

Electors of the city who visit the city hall this evening on the occasion of the meeting devoted to candidates running for city offices at this coming election, and who will be given their chance to outline respective platforms, will be greeted by the Christmas-like effect these exhibition which was brought to a close in the city hall on Wednesday evening.

Though the prize exhibits of needlework and other effects will have been moved, the beautiful decorations which have transformed the auditorium are expected to be left in place. They constitute problems which will be solved before the ever undertaken in the auditorium.

INFLUX OF TRANSIENTS SHOW INCREASE

With the advent of colder weather a general influx of transients, seeking warm sleeping quarters at the Belleville police station, is general at this time of the year. Statistics obtained from police authorities today revealed that a total of 348 transients obtained lodgings at the police station during the month of November an average of 11 3-4 per night. A marked increase over this average has been noted for the first two nights of the current month of December, however, as 24 and nineteen "knights of the road" were housed in the police cells while last night saw 15 taking shelter from the cold bleak winds and frost of the night.

BRITISH LIBERALS PROTEST LIVING COSTS

Oppose Taxes on Food, Claim Burden Resting Most Heavily on Poor

'Tax Tariffs And Quotas Off Food' Urges Sir A. Sinclair

CAMPAIGN STARTS

6800 Manchester Homes' wives Start High Price War

By GEORGE HAMILTON

London, Dec. 4 (CP)—Under the leadership of Sir Archibald Sinclair, Opposition Liberals are organizing a minister petition to parliament protesting against the cost of living.

"Liberals always fought for the liberty of rights of the subject," declares Sir Archibald. "They oppose food taxes because the smaller the individual or family income, the larger the proportion thereof which is spent for food — therefore, the poorer the individual or family, the heavier the burden of indirect taxation."

"The demand is that the government should take tariffs and quotas off the people's food."

Liberals challenge the view that wages are rising as quickly as prices. They point out that, while the cost of food increased during the first nine months of 1937 by 11½ per cent., wages increased only 6½ per cent.

"It is not only food that is increasing in cost," Sir Archibald declared said, speaking at Llandrindod Wales. "So are bricks, baths, furniture, clothes, pots and pans — all articles that are taxed under the tariffs and quotas."

During the week-end Liberal organizations throughout the country are to have the movement in full swing.

The campaign arose from a petition signed by 6,500 Manchester housewives protesting against high prices. The Manchester petition now will be incorporated in a national petition.

CHORLEY PARK ISSUE RAISED

Macaulay Seeks Appointment of Non-Partisan Probe

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP) — Ontario political circles today still teemed with talk of a possible contract between the Beauharnois (Quebec) Power Company and the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, though members of the legislature were back home today no wiser in this regard than when they arrived.

The special session of the House Wednesday was prorogued twenty minutes after it started. It's third sitting Friday afternoon. The House passed three measures that the government hopes will remove legislative hurdles to the investigation of electricity development. Discussion circles are eying the provinces.

The most important of the three bills changes the status of the investigating commissioners. Hitherto under the statute their findings have been registered with the Supreme Court and have had the same force and effect as judgments of the court. Now they become finders of fact only and the government will use in the course if the amount is not to its liking.

The second bill extends to the Provincial Treasurer, his representatives and appointees judicial immunity while acting under the Succession Duty Act, 1934. The third bill provided for the inclusion of the amendments in the revised statutes.

No Discussion On Contract.

As the House met for its final sitting, Leopold Macaulay, Conservative House leader, asked Mr. Hepburn if a possible Beauharnois contract had been discussed at the Liberal caucus. The premier said "no" and would not say more.

Mr. Macaulay said the government had seemingly changed its mind on having Chorley Park probed. Perhaps it might change its mind too on closing Chorley Park; until a few days ago the minister of Chorley Park and it could. The same thermometer rain will not cover, but this time it will fall through the cool mass of air to the ground below. If the temperature of the surface air is below freezing, the raindrops will freeze and fall as sleet.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Tilmouth

Former Belleville Meteorologist

Why is rain in a warm layer? The reason is that a cyclone (or barometric depression) and why it rains there needs to be explained by thinking of warm, moist air flowing from the south northwestward. The water vapour in the air will condense and fall as rain on the mountain slope. Replace the mountain by the cold air mass, a relatively cool air with warmer air on top, and you have a "warm front". When the warmer air flows toward the cooler air, it rises, cools and is cooled. The same thing occurs as rain will occur, but this time it will fall through the cool mass of air to the ground below. If the temperature of the surface air is below freezing, the raindrops will freeze and fall as sleet.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—A moderate depression is moving over Northern Ontario, has a trough of low extending south-westward across Lake Michigan. It is bringing unsettled and while high pressure and cold weather covers the Western provinces and northwest States. Rain and snow is occurring in the region of the Great Lakes and local snowfalls have occurred in northern districts of Ontario, Quebec and in the east Maritimes. A severe storm is moving northeastward across the southern portion of the Grand Banks.

Lake Superior—Strong northwest winds and moderate gales today and colder tonight and Sunday with snowflurries.

Manitoba — Strong northwest winds; fair and decidedly cold tonight and Sunday.

Saskatchewan — Mostly fair and decidedly cold tonight and Sunday.

Alberta—Partly cloudy and cold. Sunday, mostly cloudy and some what milder probably light snow in some districts.

STRANGE DEEDS ARE IN MAKING IN ANCIENT TIBET

Spiritual Ruler of Forbidden Land of Occult Dies

WAS HE POISONED?

Buddhist Priests Seek For Baby Reincarnation of Spirit

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

New York, Dec. 4 (AP) — In the west of Asia, in remote Tibet, an ominous strange deeds likely are in the making.

For the Panchen Lama, spiritual ruler of that forbidden land of the Occult, is reported dead in Tibet, at the end of thirteen years of exile.

The news came out of New Delhi, the British capital, yesterday. Right now it will have penetrated Tibet and created, in some quarters, excitement, by word of mouth among the primitive folk who dwell among the cloud-capped peaks of the fastness that lofty world apart.

Mysterious Illness.

Through most minds will run the query of whether the long arm of Britain's diplomacy reached out and aided Holy Man, as it has so many times before, in removing one whom Tibetans can answer that dark question. But the mystery remains obscure, and the inscrutable, mask-like faces will give no indication.

The death of the Panchen Lama (if he is dead) leaves Tibet without any ruler, even an effigy one. Normally there are two. The other and greater being the Dalai Lama, but he and effect as judgments of the court. Now they become finders of fact only and the government will use in the course if the amount is not to its liking.

The second bill extends to the Provincial Treasurer, his representatives and appointees judicial immunity while acting under the Succession Duty Act, 1934. The third bill provided for the inclusion of the amendments in the revised statutes.

No Discussion On Contract.

2 PLANES CRASH IN MIAMI RACE

Wittman Wins Race in Which Other Fliers Are Killed

Miami, Fla., Dec. 4 (AP)—Two fire-blackened patches of debris formed main topic today for two thousand spectators at race track in the United States as Miami's annual air derby neared its second day.

Deaths yesterday of Rudy Kling, 29, and Paul Redfield, 25, pilots of trout, in accidents singular in the annals of American airplane racing, left the spectators greatly saddened at the travail of a third pilot from the record-breaking pace.

Of the three crack riders of thy the exceptionally speedy machines entered, only S. J. Wittman, of Cincinnati, Wis., remained. The contest consequently narrowed to a race for one of his name from the list of contestants.

Wittman won the race in which the fliers were killed. His average speed was 214.64 miles per hour.

Versions varied, but it was agreed that Kling was flying on a banking turn ground at tremendous speeds within in seconds of each other at the first turn of the pylon course. Redfield, of a tight, triangular, five-mile course.

Saturation Point in Land Speeds Near at Hand Says Eyston

400 Miles an Hour is Long Way Off

TAKES CAR HOME

By GAYLE TALBOT

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 4.—(AP)—The "saturation point" in land speed is near at hand, says Captain George Eyston of England, who recently established the new mark of 311.42 miles an hour on the Bonneville salt flats in Utah.

When he sailed through New York the last time, enroute to Utah, he hadn't the vaguest notion how fast the thunder-bugsie eventually might go. He didn't say "no" to a suggested 400 m.p.h. but he learned something important since then.

"You remember, I reached 316 on one of my runs," he said, thoughtfully today. "Well, it sounds peculiar, but I felt a greater sense of acceleration between 310 and 311 miles an hour than I had from 0 to 310. All at once, at that speed, the car seemed to jump right out from under me.

"At 310 I felt sorta and confident. I wasn't too keen, of course, on the taxi strain. At 319 I suddenly felt that I was standing on a banking peeling. Perhaps I can go a little faster than that, but I know now that 400 miles an hour is a long, long way off."

Eyston, who makes his living as a consulting automotive engineer, is taking his big "thunderbolt" back to England where it will be carefully dissected and every part examined. Car manufacturers of this country and England will pay him plenty of what he has learned.

One thing about super-speed racing, in Eyston's opinion: It's safer than any feminine competition. Women haven't the arm and shoulder muscles needed to hold one of the monsters down when it is hurtling along at over 400 feet a second.

Operation Controls Bone Growth of Polio Victims

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH

New Orleans, Dec. 4 (AP) — An operation to control the growth of the leg bones of children suffering from infantile paralysis and restore them to normal activity was announced yesterday before the closing meeting of the Southern Medical Association.

Cares of Bones Checked Out

The operation, reported by Dr. J. Warren White and Dr. W. P. Weaver, Jr., of Greenville, S. C., consists of chiseling out cores of bone from the long bones of the leg at the knee in such the same way the core of an apple is removed with a paring knife.

It was done, they explained, to stop the growth of these long bones in growing children who have had one leg shortened by the infantile paralysis infection. Instead of allowing to lengthen the short leg the South Carolina surgeons prevent the longer leg from growing so that the two will be equal in length when growth of the bones stops.

Twenty-nine children who would otherwise have been crippled for life have been corrected by the operation, Dr. White said. Twenty-eight others have been operated on but time is too recent to estimate the value of the results, he added.

Disease Unknown to Science Takes Lives of Ten Babies

No Known Defence Against Infection, Disease Strikes Suddenly

CAUSE IS UNKNOWN

Chicago, Dec. 4 (AP)—Physicians and scientists waged a concerted fight today against a strange disease which has claimed the lives of ten babies and imperiled the lives of eight others during the past eleven days.

Six of the tiny victims were in the infants' ward of St. Elizabeth's Hospital. The disease, which killed most of the babies within 24 hours, was characterized by violent inflammation of the small intestines and was diagnosed as enteritis, or acute epidemic diarrhoea.

Infant Isolated.

The outbreak, confined to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, began May, 25. Four babies died before the symptoms were fully recognized. The hospital immediately declined new obstetrical cases and isolated the other infants, but six succumbed and eight others were stricken.

The victims ranged in age from nine days to twelve-four days. Seven of them were girls.

Attending physicians said they had two hobies to die disclosed both had the same infection. They said, however, marked changes in the brain which apparently had occurred just before death led them to suspect it believe that the disease is caused by a virus or germ.

Strikes Without Warning.

Dr. Herman Bundesen, president of the Board of Health, said there was no known defence against the infection. That it strikes without warning and that its rate of mortality was about 50 per cent. Recently recourse, he said, was isolation.

Dr. Bundesen said the disease may be carried by virulent ultra-microscopic, filterable virus," and added "no one knows how what causes any disease."

Dr. Francis Dulak, member of the hospital staff, expressed the opinion the outbreak was under control.

Rev. John W. Barrett, Diocesan director of Hospitals, said the baby death was not unique in the history of nurseries.

"The cause of the deaths appears to be intestinal inflammation or enteritis, but the start of experts have not been able to discover the cause," he said.

GETS MONEY BACK

Detroit, Dec. 4 (CP)—An Old Maiden lady of Scotland has received her pocketbook lost in the case of Albert Segren of Detroit, who found it and forwarded $38 back to him.

Segren, a native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., lived in Detroit, had amount to bring Mrs. Agnes Smith, Malta that he might marry her. When Segren became ill, he decided not to marry her and requested to refund the $38, so Segren sent, and the court awarded him the money.

TURNER ACQUITTED ON MURDER COUNT BY ASSIZE JURY

Dresden Resident Leaves Court Free Man After 4 Day Trial

CHANGE OF VENUE

Defence Claimed Wife Killed When File of Wood Fell on Her

Walkerton, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP)—The death last Feb. 25 of Evelyn Turner, Dresden, Ont., housewife, was accidental, in the opinion of a Bruce County jury which acquitted Lorne Turner, husband, Walter Turner, of a charge of murder. The verdict concurred in defence contentions she died in the fall of a woodpile.

After nearly six hours' deliberation, the jury reported to Mr. Justice J. C. Makkay in Supreme Court here at 9:56 p.m. last night that Turner was "not guilty of murder". The jury had been instructed by Mr. Justice Makkay that in the case "in either murder or it was accidental".

Four Day Trial.

The verdict ended a four-day trial in which the defence contended Mrs. Turner was fatally injured by death from a pile in the Turner woodshed falling upon her as she lay upon the floor. The defence charged through expert witnesses that some heavy instrument had been used to cause the fatal injuries.

The trial, switched from the Kent County Court here to Bruce County at the request of defence counsel for a change of venue, was the first murder trial in Bruce to be decided. It was within the past six years. None has resulted in the death sentence being passed.

The first was the case of Harry Lounge, sentenced to seven years in penitentiary on a reduced charge of manslaughter. Edith White of Owen Sound, whose hearing on a murder charge was moved from Grey County to Bruce, was declared insane at the time he allegedly set fire to his home. His wife and child were burned to death.

Captain Crawls to Wheel, Steers Ship Out of Range, Origin Firing Unknown

Vessels Was Attempting to Rescue 9 French-Canadian Nuns

ATTEMPT FRUSTRATED

Chief Chinese Officer is Killed, Several Persons Wounded

Shanghai, Dec. 4 (AP)—The British steamship Siuhan was reported today riddled with bullets from an undetermined source while on a mission of mercy to Japanese-occupied Tsungming Island, near Shanghai.

The vessel was attempting to rescue nine French-Canadian nuns reported on the island for about three months.

Among the ship aboard "the 396-ton Siuhan were Rev. Adrien Beauvais, a French-Canadian missionary, and Jean Jacquinot, a British Consular official.

Efforts Foiled.

Boothby sought to rescue the isolated Canadian nuns but his efforts were frustrated by the machine-gunning.

The chief Chinese officer was killed. A sailor and several passengers were wounded.

After more than 300 machine-gun shots had been fired, the steamship's master, Captain N. McMillan, crawled on his hands and knees under the spray of bullets to the wheelhouse. He reached it, wheel safely and steered his vessel out of range.

British authorities said the Japanese, who have an air base on Tsungming, had been informed of the voyage in advance.

(Tsungming Island is in the mouth of the Yangtze Estuary, leading to the rangehead of Tsung, was depicted as a stir-shaped crescent, which he pointed out that the nuns wasn't concealed. He said he carried in his pocket a letter from the nuns.)

Washing said Fort Smith, Ark. "was the first gun on a similar change."

Deanna's income, from pictures, radio and commercial tie-ups, totals about $3,500 a week.

Municipal Candidates, Trustee Nominees Discuss Before Electors, Assessment, Taxation and Report on Public Utilities

Mayoralty Candidates Occupy Majority of The Time

LITTLE EXCITEMENT

Speaking before an audience which filled the auditorium to but three-quarters of its capacity, mayoralty candidates, trustee candidates and candidates for the office of public utilities commissioner at a meeting Monday next outlined their respective platforms and pledges at the city hall evening.

The annual event, while attracting a large audience, failed to develop the heated candidates for municipal honors for years past. The candidates a chance to enunciate their policies in regard to municipal government if elected this year, with a calmness that presaged or indicated a lack of interest on the part of electors on the matter or who might guide the destinies of civic management during the 1938 term.

Only One Interruption.

Only one unenthusiastic interruption from the part of specially decorated hall, marked the reception by the city's new mayor-elect, mayoralty honors. Applause to the various candidates as they took their seats on the platform was given grudgingly and in restrained volume.

The chairman of the meeting was Mayor and present Hydro Commissioner Geo. A. Reid who departed from usual custom in opening the meeting only a few moments after the scheduled eight o'clock time, pointed out he had been asked to preside by Belleville's present mayor R. D. Arnold M.P.P. at present in Toronto on provincial matters. Requesting that full attendance be given all candidates, ex-Mayor Reid pointed to the list of speakers as being a heavy one-thirty-seven in all for the various offices. Each speaker, he declared would be given only a brief period of time to announce his policies.

Alderman Harold Armstrong, as first speaker, declared that there was little time in the amenities of the season for speeches of pleasure as for being once again able to offer himself in service to city to which he had already devoted years of effort, he declared himself further happy to be able to speak in the same hall under Mayor Arnott during the past term.

Praised Retiring Mayor.

"As mayor for the year 1937, I can assure you electors that Mayor Arnott has given you all the effort that has often possible and devoted every moment that the city's affairs called for," declared Alderman Armstrong.

"Another year has rolled around for Belleville and again come when the citizens of Belleville are asked to choose those who will direct the affairs of Belleville for 1938. By the book of the auditor's report for the past year, the council must have given you good service; if it hadn't it would have been found out and never turnout this evening to ask for the continuance of the membership that has been rendered," continued Alderman Armstrong.

"I can give only a summary of the problems the various municipalities have been confronted with during the past years, and our municipality in this respect has not suffered from the general rule. Since Belleville spent money in the past on improvements, and I am not criticizing that. When prosperity was here, and times were good, it was felt by the citizens of that time that the things needed in the city should be done. They went ahead and did them, and I believe they were necessary. But I do say now that no city can spend money on work and get by without paying for it any more than an individual can.

Electors Told Utilities in Splendid Condition by Chairman

MAY PURCHASE PLANT

This city has not been different from others."

Cited Figures.

Alderman Armstrong cited figures which showed that a total of $6,000,000.00 in improvements had been made to the city and that an additional $2,000,000.00 in assessment had been added to the city.

"All these were made at the one time and with a small debt of $1,115,000 paid up. This will affect the tax rate by 15 mills, equivalent to four mills. That was the situation in the depression year. But since then we have had the added social burdens of relief, of hospitalization, of caring for the unemployed and other costs.

"Council since 1934 has tried to adopt the pay-as-you-go policy or nearly so and by this means has been able to keep the tax rate down and not leave any debt to other councils. Since then, except for two work projects, we have had no debentures issued and have left the trail clear. I think you'll agree, that councils have done pretty good to keep the assessment down at our present revenue and stop the piling up of interest. When the tax rate has been reduced, then we are in a position to help the tax payers who have been carrying on under this burden.

CARTONS OF TOYS SENT AS PRESENTS
Young People of United Church Presbytery Ship 36 Cartons

Young people of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, long noted for their interest in causes of human nature again respond to a crying need when within the past few weeks they packed thirty-six cartons of toys for distribution among the needy children of families in the drought-stricken areas of Saskatchewan.

Approximately fifty cartons will be available before the end of the week, the Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church stated today, commencing on the fine efforts being put forth by the Young People's Society of the presbytery. Tuesday of every description are fairly rolling in" he said. "The response has been wonderful and will do a lot of good. The packages will likely leave for the west sometime next week.

Kenneth Sakos, Tenor and Weldon Kilburn, Pianist Give Delightful Program

Making his first concert appearance in Belleville, Kenneth Sakos, tenor soloist with the San Carlo Opera Company, and soloist with the Chicago Opera Company, rendered an excellent program last evening at the opening of the season of the Canadian Concert Association. Assisted ably and delightfully by Weldon Kilburn, Mr. Sakos was called again and again, before the footlights to delighted his hearers with his generous encores. With Mr. Sakos was Miss Fleming who, as Weldon Kilburn as accompanist and soloist, whose contribution to the program added greatly to the success of the evening.

Practically the entire membership of the local association was represented at the concert last evening and by the gaiety and pleasure of those present the season could not have opened more auspiciously.

President Welcomes Members

Mr. C. A. Cameron, M.P., president of the association, in his opening remarks in welcoming the members, paid tribute to the work of the immediate past president, Mr. F. C. MacLaurin, whose encouragement and co-operation in the early days of the association undoubtedly helped to ensure the success it had been in previous years. Mr. Cameron also thanked those who had worked so zealously to further the interests of the association, mentioning particularly to Miss Leona Fleming, Mrs. Ernest Vandaveer for efforts to promote the undertaking.

It was announced that the membership for the season 1937-38 was one hundred and thirty at the close of last night's meeting, applications again. This had made it possible to arrange for three concerts, the other two to take place in the early Spring. Mr. Cameron introduced Weldon Kilburn, Kenneth Sakos or Kilchener and Mr. Kilburn of Toronto.

Possessor of a beautiful voice, magnificently handled, Mr. Sakos in his audience at once by the music which will not soon be forgotten. His range is classical in a voice that lent itself admirably to the expression of every feeling, from the simple recitation of songs of classical beauty, Italian, French, English and Greek.

The feeling rendition of his opening number "Pagliacci" (Straddle) and the artistry of the songs which followed, captivated the audience and so varied was the appeal of his program that it was completely satisfying to the members of the audience.

Mr. Sakos sang with fine restraint. He has volume unusual in a tenor, and his higher notes had outstanding clarity and purity of tone. His operatic numbers revealed extraordinary dramatic ease and dramatic ability which readily explained his success in the operatic stage.

Two Modern Gre'k Numbers

In his lighter offerings, Mr. Sakos' rendition was a perfect reflection of the subject of his song. Two modern Greek numbers were the two modern Greek numbers, "Anthemoessa" and "Next to Sandspondo" (Kalomiris), the first was a gay number with no trace of the mournful melancholy of ancient Greek music, while the second although tragic in theme was a favorite and interestingly handled by composer and singer.

Mr. Sakos' versatility, personality and humour as he described the significance of several groups and his splendid translations of the lyrics into English made his appearance a delightful one from start to finish.

In his accompanist, Mr. Kilburn, the singer had a talented and sympathetic fellow artist. He displayed considerable skill in the numbers on for his solos. Familiar compositions, they showed the remarkable command of the pianist. He has "Ballad in A Flat" by Chopin being his outstanding number for a treatment by Mr. Kilburn.

The program for the evening included the following numbers:

I.

Pieta Signore .... Stradella

(1645-1685)

O' Tu Tuo Placer Ch'io Mora .... Handel (1685-1759)

If Thou Be Near ..... Bach

Board of Education Election

Electors of the city for the first time since the formation of the Board of Education this year will be asked to reduce the number of members from its total of twenty-one to ten members.

Nine members will be elected by vote at the municipal elections on Monday by public school supporters and one member will be appointed to the Board from the Separate School Board.

When balloting the voter is entitled to vote for nine trustee candidates.

This year, after a period of years during which time only men have guided the destinies of the city educational system, a woman candidate will offer herself for election on the Board. Not since Mrs. J. A. McFee resigned after serving several terms on the Board has a feminine member offered to accept the nomination for honors of trustee.

Women Have Served on Board

The novelty of women upon the Board is not a new one; for a number of years both Mrs. McFee and Mrs. Wm. (Florence) Ponton served successful terms, and were responsible for many beneficial places of legislation while serving as such.

Mrs. Allen Logie, who this year has added her name to those seeking honour of trustee, is no stranger in the municipal life of Belleville. She has served as president of the Women's Canadian Club, and was responsible in a large degree for the formation of Belleville's Home and School Clubs. A desire to further increase her usefulness in service to the city, prompted her this year to accept nomination.

Electors will have their choice of five men and candidates for the position of trustee this year, the choice being greatly enlarged through the addition of women.

From the elected body a chairman who will preside over the sessions of the coming year will be chosen by the members.

In the past year, under the chairmanship of H. J. Allin, who this year is also offering himself for re-election, the Board decided that the interests of the city could be better served by the reduction in numbers.

Present Board members who are offering for re-election are, H. J. Allin, chairman during the past year term; H. B. Fetterly; Col. E. A. Geen, former chairman; W. J. Harper, Chairman of the Collegiate Committee; C. L. Hyde, Chairman of the Buildings and Property Committee; Dr. J. W. Kinnear; Ray Moncrieff, chairman of the Supplies Committee; P. G. McCrodan, chairman of the Music Committee; Mrs. A. B. Payne, chairman of the School Management Committee; Rev. C. W. Wight, chairman of the Playgrounds Committee; Russell Wooten and Raymond Zufelt, chairman of the Finance Committee.

These seeking initial honors as trustees are Mr. C. H. Griffin, representative member of the Canadian National Express at Belleville and Secretary of the Rivoli Curling Club, Miss Alice Logie and Mr. Arthur F. Wesley, factory manager of the J. and J. Cash Company.

Obituary

MRS. MARY E. CHISHOLM

Mrs. Mary Emma Chisholm, widow of George Colin Chisholm, passed away at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Alkins, 26 Benjamin Street, Belleville, on Friday afternoon, Dec. 3rd, after an illness of four months' duration.

The late Mrs. Chisholm, who was in her 74th year, was born in Sidney Township, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Bonisteel. She resided in that township until about thirty years ago when she came to reside with her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Alkins at Belleville. In religion she was a members of the United Church and a Presbyterian by training.

Besides the late Mrs. Chisholm's daughter, Mrs. C. M. Alkins, Belleville; Mrs. A. Mitchell, Toronto, and Mrs. Thomas Love, Santa Barbara, California; one brother, Mr. Arthur Bonisteel, Astoria, Ont., four grandaughters, Helen Alkins and Mrs. Ernest Vandaveer, Belleville, Georgo Alkins, Her husband passed away last June.

Funeral notice announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE MRS. JOHN W. JOHNSTON (Sidney)

The funeral of Mrs. John W. Johnston took place from the family residence in the 8th concession of Sidney Township, Friday afternoon, Dec. 3rd. The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. J. W. MacDonald, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Foxboro, assisted by the Rev. F. Perfect, pastor of the Foxboro United Church.

The bearers were Messrs C. Wilson, H. Smith, Sr., Charles Bird, G. Wait and J. Longwell.

The service at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. W. MacDonald.

MRS. CYNTHIA COOPER (Sidney)

The death occurred at the Belleville General Hospital early this afternoon morning, Dec. 4th, of Mrs. Cynthia Cooper, age 58 years, wife of Mr. Benjamin Cooper of Sidney, Ont. She had been a patient at the hospital since Dec. 2nd.

Police Blotter

Found in a very intoxicated condition, a transient, who police say is John Morris, was arrested on Front Street by P.C. Thompson early last evening. The man was in such a condition that it was necessary for the officer to commandeer a passing motor vehicle in order to transport the inebriate to the police station. The transient Morran appeared before H. R. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, and was remanded in custody until Monday, when further investigations are offered it was sleeping quarters in the police station last night. During the progress of the patrolling their beat last night the local constabulary discovered the front entrance to a hardwarehanery insecure. The door had been inadvertently left unlocked, it was learned when the proprietor was informed of the incident.

Indians of the western deserts were enterprising enough to dig wells for water, and cities of these Indian wells are still known.

Letters to the Editor

Reduction And Beneficial Competition Necessary

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

As one in a position to speak from experience in business, I would like to have the opportunity to give publicity to a brief statement of the Belleville business men of the Trunk Road Commission and what it has done for the city. Not that this was the only fair thing to do as the bakers pay taxes to help support the city and hire only Belleville citizens in their business. Don't the wood dealers pay taxes to help support the city and hire Belleville citizens in their business?

Are the grocerymen asked to lower prices on their groceries? No, they will treat grocerymen, bakers and wood dealers alike?

Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper.

I remain truly,

Belleville Wood Dealer.

FURTHER DECLINE IN EGG PRICES ON CITY MARKET

'A' Selects Offered at 35c, Chicken And Fowl Prices Rise

GOOD DISPLAY

Continuing on their rapid slide towards lower prices, eggs declined sufficiently on the city market today where a fairly large number of farm and city housewives were offered a good display of stock to choose from at 35c a dozen for 'A' grades. Mediums were quoted at 30c and 32c, while 'pullets' were offered in a slow-tipping bottle at 26c per doz. Paradoxically, chickens, ducks and other 'feathered' stock were rocketed to a new high, as vendors offered birds at prices not reached thus far in the current season. Good quality birds were offered at from 28c to as high as $1.25, while inferior quality chickens were quoted commensurately. Ducks were offered at from 24c to 28c, ranging around $1.80.

One pound rolls of butter were offered at from 34c to 36c per pound.

A loss turkey heralded the approach of the Christmas season and was offered at $2.00. The bird according to the vendor, weighed in the vicinity of eleven pounds. They will be higher than that," the vendor prophesied, "for there is a shortage of turkeys, especially in our part, of the country."

On the outside market a variable display of winter fruit and vegetables were offered at prices that were fairly stable for the season's last-week quotations. Potatoes, however, showed a slight fluctuation, selling at five cents the peck and last week's prices to 90c and 95c. Cabbages were offered at 10c each and other vegetables in good quantity were available with prices set at per basket, parsnips at 75c, turnips at 60c and winter cabbage at 60c per dozen, carrots at 60c a peck display.

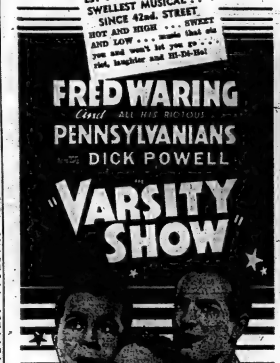
Onions Higher

Onions shot up to a new high to $2.00 per bushel today, Western Ontario onions are also high in price as well as other years," a prominent grocery clerk stated. "They were stricken with some kind of a blight early in the season and I would quantify and not the crop quantity as before. There will not be many supplied from that part of the province, so naturally the prices are high."

Winter apples offered in good variety found a good response from early morning shoppers with a good quality Northern Spies selling at $2.00 per bushel, and good apples at from $1.50 upwards. Tolman Sweets were quoted at the same price, while Baldwins Delicious selling at $1.50 per bushel. Snow apples were offered at $1.25 per basket-ful.

Belleville fish was in evidence today with the popular whitefish selling at 20c per pound. Fresh herring were also in stock and found a ready market at the price. Pike were offered at 15c per pound and mullets at four for 25c. Fresh lake herring was offered at 10c per pound.

Six-weeks-old pigs were plentiful on the market at from $4.50 to three dollars and fifty cents attracting but few buyers.



Produce Down

Under present production methods only 30 to 40 per cent. of petroleum in most reservoirs is recoverable.

The dingo, found in Australia, is the only variety of dog that lives in the bush in a wild and a domesticated state.

Germany is lessening its grip on the Saar industry. In 1921 it received a complete collapse of the German credit system.

FOR MAYOR

ALD. HAROLD J. ARMSTRONG, an employee of the C. N. R., Harold Armstrong has resided in this city for some years. He was a member of the City Council at various times for a period of six years. During his tenure of office he has held the chairmanship of Water and was so named this past year until the system was taken over by the Public Utilities Commission. He is thoroughly conversant with the business of the city and one of the best debaters on the floor of the council.

JAMIESON BONE, Insurance and Bond Broker, a former member of the City Council and a resident of this city for many years is seeking election this year. Mr. Bone has always taken a keen interest in the municipal affairs of the city and while a member of the council was Chairman of Finance. His business affairs in the city's life are quite extensive and he is an able speaker from the public platform.

ALD. WILLIAM HARVEY, employee of the C.N.R., Mr. Harvey has served the city 32 years in various departments, being a former chairman of the Board of Education and in the council for four years. This year he is Chairman of Printing and Stationery. Mr. Harvey has always taken a keen interest in municipal affairs and is well posted on all departments of the city's business.

FOR ALDERMAN

ALD. ERNEST J. BALDWIN, salesman, has served one year in the city council; but did not hold a chairmanship. Mr. Baldree has always taken an interest in the relief problem of the recipients in this city and champions labor in all branches.

ALD. G. CLIFFORD BARAGAR, tire dealer and a member of the council for the past two years. Cliff Baragar is a former president of the Kiwanis Club and interested in service work. An able debater, Alderman Baragar always takes part in the discussions before the council.

ALD. J. W. BARLOW, retired C. N. R. engineer, a member of the council for the past three years and at present Chairman of Fire. Alderman Barlow has spent considerable time on this department, and has it in perfect shape.

ALD. THOMAS CUSHING, retired C. N. R. dispatcher, a member of the council for the past three years and at present Chairman of City and Market Property. Ald. Cushing has served on many committees of the council and was the proposer of many changes in the setup of municipal government.

RAYMOND CARR, C.N.R. trainman, Mr. Carr is seeking election for the first time although he has been interested in municipal affairs for a number of years. He has been quite active in sports in this city and served as President of the Senior Baseball Club. Mr. Carr has been a resident of the city for a number of years and is well known about the city.

LEONARD FOZARD, Insurance Adjuster, has been a resident of Belleville for some years and this is his first venture into municipal life. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club and of the Belleville Golf Club and quite interested in all healthy exercise.

McLEAN HAIG, Insurance Broker, purchasing the business of Shirley Fisher three years ago and this is the first time in the municipal field. A young man of business ability, Mr. Haig has made many friends since coming to this city.

SIDNEY I. HOWELL, Barrister, and member of the firm of O'Flynn and Howell, this young man is entering the contest for aldermanic honors for the first time. A member of the Kinsmens' Club, he is quite active in service work and prominent in sports.

ALD. BURTON JENNINGS, Retired, was former owner of the book store under the name of Jennings and Sherry. Has been a member of the council for two years and acted as Chairman of Gas until Utility was taken over by the Utilities Commission. At present he is Chairman of Special Parking and in charge of that work now being conducted at the rear of Front St. stores and when completed will provide additional parking space for the heavy traffic usually seen seen in this city.

ALD. ANDREW M. KENNEDY, Retired C. N. R. engineer has been a resident of this city for many years and last year was his first year in the Council. He was Chairman of Industry. Mr. Kennedy is prominent in Masonic circles and also in the brotherhood of Railway Engineers.

ALDERMAN LAURIE LEWIS, Merchant and member of the Council for the past two years, has been vitally interested in the relief problem and has been Chairman of Welfare for both terms. Mr. Lewis came from Toronto some years ago to conduct the business formerly known as Jennings and Sherry and has fully entered into the business life of the city.

J. EDSON "EDDIE" LOGAN, Jeweller and manager of Mc Fee's Jewelry store, is president of the Kiwanis Club and contested the election a few years ago. Eddie is very popular in the younger circles of business men in the city and very active in community service work and the Retail Merchants' Association.

DR. JOHN MARSHALL, Dentist, and native of this city is running for the council for the first time. He is a graduate of Dental College in Toronto and while a student took an active part in sport, being sports champion of his faculty. Since his graduation he has successfully practiced in this city and is well known by a wide circle.

ROBERT H. MARTIN, Manufacturer being connected with the Robb Wave Organ Company and the Frontenac Paper Box Company. This is his first venture into municipal life but has been a resident of Belleville for 12 years. He is also interested in sport being an official of the Bay of Quinte Country Club.

HARRY W. ROLLINS, Foreman of the Houston Lumber Company and President of the Essential Conservative Association also interested in sports being convenor of the Ontario Softball Association in this district and a member of the Provincial executive is seeking his first election. Mr. Rollins before coming to the city was interested in municipal affairs and has been a keen student of the needs in this city since he took up residence.

BENJAMIN SAPE, Furniture merchant of the city and former member of the council. Served in various chairmanships, he being Chairman of Public Works in his last year in the council. Dropped out last year.

ISAAC STEPHENSON, Painter, has been a contestant for municipal honors on three occasions and was only beaten last year by ten or twelve votes. Takes a keen interest in municipal affairs and is well informed. Has been a resident of Belleville for some years.

ALD. GLENCOE E. THOMPSON, Baker and member of the council for the past two years. Serving this year as Chairman of Light. Glen is a keen debater in council and active on many committees.

ALD. THOMAS W. F. WELLS, Barrister and serving his fourth term in the council and has been Chairman of Finance since his entry in to the council. Mr. Wells is a keen student of financial affairs and has handled this executive job with fine ability.

Who Vote:

MONDAY AT THE POLLS

Belleville voters will go to the polls on Monday to elect a Mayor and 12 Aldermen, 9 members of the Board of Education, and to decide the question of Daylight Saving. There are three candidates in the mayoralty field, nineteen candidates for the aldermanic seats and fifteen candidates for the elective posts on the Board of Education.

The fields are well filled in all the contests and citizens have hence an opportunity for a good selection. The constitutions of the City council and the Board of Education is the hands of those who enter the polling booths on Monday and who choose those whom they will have serve them in the administration of civic and educational affairs. These voters who do not use their franchise are allowing the majority of others who do vote to choose for them, while the purpose of voting is to bring out the largest possible number of voters so that there may be a representative vote in the election of members of the City Council and the Board of Education.

This year the school trustees are elected under the new system which will create a board of ten members to be elected on Monday and one who will be chosen by the Separate School Board to represent the Separate School supporters of the city. The five who receive the largest number of votes will take seats for two years and the other four for one year, so that the board may have its full membership the first year, for it must be remembered that today some of the present members of the board, both public and collegiate, are stepping out of office before they would ordinarily do, if the new measure had not been adopted.

DAYLIGHT SAVING BYLAW

This year the voters of Belleville once again are to deal with Daylight Saving. The city has had daylight saving in the past, and it has observed also standard time so that the people have had a good opportunity to compare the two systems during the summer time.

There are two points which are being given emphasis by the advocates of the Daylight Saving bylaw. One relates to the position of Belleville among the cities and towns along the front of Ontario, and the other to the workers and staffs of shops, employees and others who themselves have not the opportunity of enjoyment of extra daylight which their employers have.

On the first question it has been noted by everyone that for several years now Belleville has been the only one of the cities and cities between Toronto and Montreal has been on standard time while other cities and towns, business, the travelling public, tourists and others follow "Daylight Saving" time. The result has been confusion. Belleville has been found to be out of step with a great deal of the business of the Province, tourists who come here have found that they are one hour ahead of the time and in most cases realize that there is no possible way in which to fit into the time system here. Consequently loss of trade and interference of business have been complained of. On this score it is not so much the principle of Daylight Saving as the necessity of adjustment to the general time and business conditions that is at stake. On this count alone there is expected to be a good support of the daylight saving measure, for it is very important, as everyone who has been on Front Street early in the morning during the Daylight Time season in other cities, realizes, from seeing parties of tourists arriving in the city expecting to find "summer time" observance, to find only a few about. It is clear that Belleville loses heavily as a result of this situation. One can understand also how different of time affects local businesses with office connections in towns and cities on advanced time as most local firms have. These businessmen have to be constantly adjusting themselves and their business on this account because the business public and the traveling public expect all municipalities to be observing the advanced time.

Then on the other hand, persons working in factories, clerks in shops and offices will under Daylight Saving, have an extra hour of daylight at the end of the day. They will not have the privilege of the extra hour of daylight unless there is daylight time, but their employers and those running businesses of their own may have that extra daylight free from business whether there is daylight time or not. Hence the growth of the sentiment that Daylight Saving time will equalize this advantage for worker, employees and employer and business man alike.

Therefore support Daylight Saving.

DAYLIGHT SAVING IS AGAIN TO THE FORE. Voters at the municipal election to be held Monday next will have an opportunity of marking a ballot for or against Daylight Saving for Belleville for the summer of 1938. At the 1935 municipal election the vote on Daylight Saving showed a small majority against, a fact which, taking in conjunction with the fact that no concerted drive was made to induce votes in favor seems to indicate to those favoring Daylight Saving that sentiment has changed materially in the past few years in favor of Daylight Saving. Almost all municipalities between Windsor and Montreal have swung to Daylight Saving, leaving Belleville an isolated unit to the amazement and inconvenience of tourists and the travelling public generally, also effecting inconvenience and loss upon Belleville business concerns. Daylight Saving is sought largely by the workers in factories and stores, seeking an extra hour of daylight in the open. Employers personally it makes little difference as they can adjust their time to suit the occasion. Last summer Daylight Saving was observed unofficially by a number of industrial plants and the hotels were forced to put their dining rooms on D. S. T. to accommodate the travelling public. The extra hour of daylight for recreation was appreciated by all who were able to enjoy it. Factory workers, clerks in stores, etc., are asking the citizens generally to support them in obtaining daylight saving for Belleville this summer as a gift of one more hour of daylight for recreation.

"I GO TO WORK IN THE DARK AND COME HOME IN THE DARK" said a factory worker recently. "I hope that the voters will mark their ballots for Daylight Saving Monday so that we factory workers can get more daylight next summer outside the factory."

RAILROAD MEN ARE NOT ALL AGAINST DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME, apparently. A C. N. R employee sends in the following: "It is a mistake to think that all railroad men are against Daylight Saving Time. I believe that sixty per cent of C. N. R. men are in favor of D. S. T. In fact, Montreal and Toronto C. N. R. headquarters are on Daylight Saving Time in the summer and Belleville and all offices adjust themselves to this by adopting what is called "split time", starting working half an hour earlier so that the staffs can work harmoniously with headquarters in both cities. I believe that this system finds favor with those affected. Also the employees of the Canadian National Express Company observe Daylight Saving Time in the summer, although train schedules remain on Standard Time. The staffs favor Daylight Saving Time. Therefore anyone who states that railroad men are against D. S. T. is mistaken, and I believe a poll of railroad men in Belleville and district there are 2,200 of them, would reveal more than sixty percent in favor of Daylight Saving Time. This is based on my own observation and I am satisfied it is correct. The fact that all other municipalities doing business with Belleville are on Daylight Saving Time in the summer makes it awkward and inconvenient for business men in Belleville, and some workers in stores, I believe have to work extra time in consequence,—"come earlier for the tourist trade, stay late for the city trade."

CANDIDATES ARE NOT LACKING for municipal office this election—a healthy sign of a progressive municipality. Stagnant communities find it hard to get candidates enough to fill the various offices, let alone have a surplus of candidates as generally happens in Belleville.

German Looks at English

The difference between England and Germany may be observed by listening to the conversations in any small inn in the two countries. The Germans will talk as if worldpolicy were centred in their own Reichstag. Not so the English. Their talk will be of weather and holidays, of business, sport and the bringing-up of children.

Let these mild family men be put into an awkward situation, however, and they will get themselves out of it much more readily than their more politically-minded German brothers. The English are politically incapable; they act politically, not because they concern themselves with political questions. Even the English language is political with its "would's" and "might's", its vague lines of expression that always leave room for compromise, and its frequent use of the word "suggest".

From the English voice that is never raised, the English eye that never blazes, the apparently gentle abstraction, are not wanting in political effect. French politicians, too, kindly as the Englishman may be by nature, has a diplomatic line.

x x x

When an Englishman tries to imagine what is most likely to impress the stranger within his gates, he chooses that in him that is individualism. In fact, the foreigner, wherever he looks, sees standards and clothes and conventions, and is apt to be somewhat disappointed. On the other hand, he is in a perpetual state of wonder at English individuality, which is found in all classes and which survives both the worst inequities of evening and personalities on the Continent. London is incomparably more polite as a city than Paris. Its courtesy is far more sincere than that of Rome and more natural than the over-schooled regimented politeness of Berlin.

One of the most important means of relieving tension in England is the English sense of humour. If human attributes may be divided into primary and secondary, humour is certainly among the former in England. Humour in that country is not a mere matter of laughter or witticism. In England it has been raised to the dignity of philosophy. Humour is the Englishman's fundamental attitude to life, and because it is a part of his nature he never loses it.

x x x

The Englishman's profounded confusion lies in his sense of humour that prevents him from taking things too seriously and thus losing the slight detachment that makes life easier to control. Humour is a most useful if somewhat corrective machine with which the Englishman closes himself. No individual, and taken all in all, no nation laughs and smiles at itself as much as these Englishmen do. It follows that a man who has no sense of humour has a bad time of it.

Among the defects that the naturally humorous Englishman cannot forgive, bad manners and the lack of a sense of humour take first place. Those who cannot laugh is taken seriously in England. He cannot enjoy that right and comradeship in a community that looks up to humour as to a god—or an idol. The most indeed become an idol if it prevents its disciples from succumbing to boredom, against which its dominion cannot extend.

x x x

The bad side of this dictatorship of humour is shown in a certain tendency to superficiality in the English character, in the habit of quick appraisal of a situation in conversation, in the reputation enjoyed by shallow persons purely on the basis of their power to evoke laughter, in the capacity of humour to mask moral inequities or actually to paralyse mental energy.

Nevertheless, the power of humour are out of all proportion greater. It is to humour that England owes many of the pearls of its literature and wisdom, to humour that it owes its distinctive way of life, many of the charms of existence and social intercourse, and, at least, a large number of its distinctions.—Kurt von Stutterheim in Berlin Taggeblatt.

A Shore at Sea

The steamships companies' advertisements not only grow more lavish and more alluring as the years roll by; they also grow less like mere nautical boats and more like damsels who photographically depict the delights of tropic ports and appear in more and more nearly skintight bathing suits; the tropic steamships themselves further and further into the haze behind the decks, which, with their contingents of crude passenger is luxuriously surrounded.

We are unable to state at what moment the horse race (with wooden sleds propelled by men under the supervision of the purser) became an essential element of every cruise; perhaps it only ever night to Boston. But we seem to remember hardly a dozen years ago the best that the smartest set Hoss trailing to the Caribbean could offer in the way of a swimming bath was a twenty-by-twenty tank constructed of boards over the cane canvas, precariously rigged on the fore bridge. No cruise ship today could face her public with less than a built-in pool; and we note that the latest to be put on the "Lido decks" to Europe provides not only potted palms, beach umbrellas and cabanas, but even a row of lamposts along the promenade, their globes glowing softly in the dark heart of the mid-Atlantic and their coverside by a canvas curtain.

The marine architects have outdone themselves in the effort to persuade the passenger that when they are still ashore. Now, the development might be regarded as complete, except for old and unsegoing sentimentalists were it not for the exquisite tenderness that land architects, who strive no less earnestly to convince the prospective traveller ashore that they are really at sea. Where the modern hotel has for years retired the potted palms behind its doors, celebrated and popular Park Lexington Avenue which the patron enters by a footpath across real water, where the horizon (as seen from within) through the portholes of the lounges and halls is gentle roll, and where it would regarded as bad form in the way of sound effects to hear the creak of the timbers and the rattle of spray on the windows.

And this, no doubt, is only a beginning. The solution is plain. Ultimately all those who crave the repose of terra firma will go to sea and those who yearn for a heaving deck and marine adventure will stay ashore, tell the waiter to put another pinch of salt in the air-conditioning apparatus and ask the chief electrician to speed up the groundswell.—New York Herald Tribune.

EVERY PATIENT NEEDS TREATMENT—MENTAL OR PHYSICAL

Dr. Coler, he greatest physician of modern times, died shortly before his death that he was using not more than fifteen drugs in his treatment of patients and that, if absolutely necessary, he could get along on four; but the day might come when he would use no drugs whatever and depend upon "suggestive therapeutics", which means calming and strengthening the patient's mind and hence the body also.

There are few without which no physician would attempt to practise medicine; those which relieve pain or give strength such as morphine and digitalis. However, at least half of all the medicines consisting a physician have no organic ailment but all need the physician's advice, if he can show how useful "suggestive therapeutics"—mind healing or whatever it may be—is to great many sufferers.

There are times when the purely neurotic patient with no organic ailment was packed on the back seat of his motor car and told to go home and forget acct his ailments. Then, after a few days, carefully examines the apparently sound but nervous individual and perhaps refers him to a dentist or to a nose and throat specialist to find something that is not present any source of low infection which may be causing the symptoms complained of. Sometimes it is.

If after careful examination and consultation with other physicians is found, the physician is justified in telling the patient that no real disease is present, that there is nothing to worry about; that his symptoms—fatigue, pain in the stomach, diarrhoea, anxieties—are due to nervousness.

Thus Dr. Leslie Kober, in Southwest Medicine, says:

"The neurotic patient should be told that the heart, the stomach, the kidneys, the nerves cannot be are under the control of an automatic regulator. If something is bothering us the automatic regulator does not work smoothly and we feel over tired, too fast, or our stomach does not handle food properly because of spasm or the production of too much acid. We lose in removing the emotional upsets which keep the body balance."

It is now long been known that emotional upsets will make organic disease definitely worse. Prof. W. B. Cannon, Harvard, found that emotional upsets can actually produce ulcers.

We should all try to acquire poise or calmness of spirit.

CIRCUS GOES HOME

The wandering family of 1,500 persons who troupe under the "big top" of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined circus has come home for the winter. Sarasota, Florida, is the 1,500-mile tour of the country, the circus came from, and to which they can be reconditioning before starting out again next spring.

Many of the circus performers, including high wire and trapeze artists and clowns, have their own winter engagements in scattered parts of the country, but most of the remaining at their winter homes in Florida.

During the winter circus employes will repaint wagons and cages, and prepare new equipment. The wild animals will be quartered in the big barns where they can be seen by winter visitors.

Meantime, the performers will be busy rehearsing the new stunts they will present when the show starts out again next spring it will be under the direction of Mabel Ringling, the Ringling family again.

John Ringling North, circus-owning nephew of the late showmagnate, reportedly will assume management next season of the circus which was created by the Ringling brothers at Baraboo, Wis., 56 years ago.

JOLTS CONGREGATION

Being something of a realist, Rev. H. M. Paulin, D. D. tells his congregation at Ann Arbor, Mich., that all church people are autocrats at heart and that they can claim the minister of St. Andrew's, who has just resigned, tell the truth to mankind like those who face life squarely.

The chief trouble is that there are so many persons who try to exploit the church for their own selfish ends. For instance, many an individual goes to church to find another simply to further his or her political ambitions. There is a tendency also to make a strong appeal to the "church vote" and people without too many scruples jump into church life for no other reason than to help themselves at the ballot box.

Where get into a church because they think it helps them in business; and under the guise of being "good church folk" they can all over some deals that are shady.—Windsor Star.

The success of the Victory Loan was beyond the hopes of the most optimistic worker. When the final returns are received it is expected that there will be more than $2,500,000.00 reported from Hastings County. The original objective was $800,000.00 and the city of Belleville has nearly passed the first objective. No place in Canada has reported a better showing than Belleville. That is without special subscriptions of over $25,000.00, of which Belleville had only three.

During the Victory Loan Campaign the Griffin Amusement Company through their general manager here Mr. Geo. Forhan, has been most generous in supplying publicity, by the introduction of slides, the playing of the "Film Canada" bond, and in allowing the use of the stage for appeals in the way of addresses.

If Bachelors Married

If every bachelor in Canada, between the ages of 30 and 40, married a spinster in the same age bracket, so that all the young ladies in Canada between the same ages were provided with husbands, there would be enough brides to go round.

If all the bachelors really wanted to marry, those who found themselves in the rear of the procession would have to be content with second prize and take the quiet, domestic life.

The fact is there are over 368,000 more bachelors between the ages of 30 and 40 in Canada than there are maidens, so the Canadian girl has quite a large field from which to choose, if she has any inclination that way. The bachelor, on the other hand, will have to mingle with the flock on the wallflower at the dance.

This is a disconcerting situation and one that is entirely remedy for it is evident that many of the maidens are not content with attached like Queen Elizabeth in the days long ago. Consequently, a field for choice that is, any more than those to which they have already fallen her.—Kitchener Record.

Little Benny's Note Book

Saticky afternoon one doorbell rang, being some lady to see me, and she sat down on the sofa in the front room and I was half minded to upstairs to tell ma and the fellows started to whisper to me outside, and I ran down again to tell them to wait a minute and if I was Chums Magee and Sid Hunt, saying, Hay, come on, Benny, O, Benny, Pudd Hinking and Larry Dinkins are going to have a fite around in the back street, hurry up, come on.

Which I quick grabbed my cap and flew out, but not being worth ending on account of Pudd and Larry both being scared to start it, and Sid and me and Chums and I went around to the firehouse to see if there was anything doing, which there wasn't, and all of a sudden I remembered the lady in the front room, saying, Hoky smokes, good nile, O roosters.

And I said to Clumsy Magee, Hay Clumsy can I go in your house and use your telefone to fone to my house?

And he say, what's a matter? Clumsy said, and I told him and he said, Sure go in, come on and I called up my house and our cook Nora answered the fone, me saying, Nora, say

She is not, she went downtown this morning and you are her for yourself, Nora said.

Benny partly good news, and I said, Well have you looked in the front room lately, Benny?

No, but hay said I have no time to be answering riddles, Nora said. Benny partly bad news, and I said you mind looking in, and if there's a lady there, tell her mother for cost tell her ma out.

What's a time be blathering, I just come from there and there's not a sole in there with fur or without, Nora said.

Mountain View, Ontario,
Dec. 3, 1937

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Parliament,

Dear Friends,—

It was with deep regret we learned that you were leaving our midst, we have always found you true friends and neighbors, ready to assist in all community affairs.

We will indeed miss you in our Sunday School, you, Mr. Parliament as Superintendent and Mrs. Parliament as Bible Class teacher, and also in the church work where you have both taken active parts.

You are not going to a strange community and you will fill the places you vacated not so many years ago. Trusting you may have the very best of health and happiness in the future years.

We ask you to accept this gift as a token of our esteem for you and our appreciation of the many helpful and kind deeds you have done in the community.

May it help remind you of a few years that have passed by as quickly.

Signed on behalf of the Mountain View Community.

Mrs. Parliament expressed her appreciation for the lovely gifts and hoped she would be able to attend the Institute meetings occasionally. Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed by all.

At a very enthusiastic meeting in the Madoc Rink plans were made for one of the biggest hockey seasons this part of the county has ever witnessed. The proposed league include a nine-team league made up of teams from the following places: Belleville, Tweed, Madoc, Marmora, Stirling, Campbellford, Marmora, Trenton and Norwood.

In the proposed schedule Bancroft, Marmora and Belleville will play all of their home games in Madoc, which will give the Madoc fans at least 32 games during the season or an average of four games per week. The league has been divided into two sections, with the first, second and third teams of each section meeting in the playoffs with the surviving teams meeting in the finals.

The following officers were elected:

President, Mr. Earl Fox, Stirling; Vice president, Jack Henderson, Madoc; Sec. Treas., Mr. Wells, Stirling.

Another meeting of the newly organized league will be held about the 15th of December when a schedule will be drawn up and final arrangements made.

ATTEND COOKING SALE

On Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 1st, the Madoc Branch of the Women's Institute sponsored Miss Aitken's Cooking School with the compliments of The Canada Starch Company and The Maple Leaf Milling Company. During the afternoon Mrs. Aitkens demonstrated several fine dishes and gave many practical and helpful suggestions during her class hour. About one hundred and seventy-five ladies attended the class. Members of Marmora, Eldorado, Bannockburn, Cooper and Ivanhoe branches were present. At the close about thirty gifts were distributed to the holders of the lucky numbers. Those successful in holding the lucky numbers for the several dishes made during the afternoon were: Mrs. Jas. Kincaid, Miss Mooney, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Mulholland, Miss Stroke, Mrs. W. Smith. At the close afternoon tea was served by the ladies of Madoc branch.

Latta

Latta—Mrs. John Moore spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. R. Denyes.

Choir practice was held at Mrs. Clarence Hall's on Thursday evening.

Mrs. H. Harrison directed a pageant at Sunday School Sunday morning. Mr. Ralph Wilder represented Joseph and Mrs. Wilder Mary. Three young men, Mr. W. Morse, Norman Kessington and Mr. Bill Bailey acted as shepherds and Mr. Carmen Emerson, Mrs. Vernon Emerson and Oscar Moore acted as the Wise men and sang as they came in to present their gifts. Then as Mr. and Mrs. Wilder sang: "Away in a Manger", the white gifts were brought forward first by the little tots and on up to the adult class. Miss Phylis Hall sang "Holy Night" as the pageant opened.

This is the first time such a pageant has ever been conducted here. It was in connection with the Legue and presents will be sent out next Sunday free of charge. It was very nicely done and there were tears in many eyes as the pageant impressed on all minds many fine thoughts. There were enough parcels to fill a large packing box.

Mr. Walter Hall, Mrs. W. Elliott and Mrs. Roy motored to Napanee on Sunday and Mrs. W. Hall and Miss Isabelle Elliott returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gaffrey and children and Mrs. and Mrs. J. G. Sills spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. Denyes.

Mountain View

Mountain View—On Wednesday night over one hundred and fifty relatives and friends gathered at the Community Hall at Allisonville in honour of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Weir (nee Reta Way) who were married recently. Mr. King Tuey brought the gathering to order and invited the bride and groom and their attendants to come to the front. Mr. Russell Laifman read the following address:

Dear Sherman and Reeta:—

It affords us great pleasure as your friends and neighbors to extend to you our best wishes and hearty congratulations.

Sherman, you have lived most of your life in this neighborhood and we have always found you a true friend and a good sport in whatever you chose to do.

Reeta, although you have spent some time away from this community, we have always thought of you as one of us and have always found you ready to do your part.

We are glad to hear that you will be residing among us and we ask you both to accept these gifts as a token of our friendship.

Signed on, behalf of your friends and neighbors,

Russell Laifman, King Tuey.

Mr. and Mrs. Weir replied thanking their friends for the lovely gifts and invited everyone to visit them in the near future.

All joined in singing: "For they are Jolly Good Fellows."

Delicious refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Weir were recipients of many lovely and useful gifts of silver, china, pyrex, linen, etc.

The Wellington Orchestra furnished music for dancing.

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walbridge announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Ruth, to Mr. Victor Rosebrugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Rowbotham of Belleville. They were married quietly at Bedansville on November 11, 1937. dd-11

Mrs. Albert Duggan, Jr., who is progressing favorably in Bellville Hospital after her recent operation.

Miss Helen Potter and Miss Kathleen MacPherson will be hostesses at the Badminton Club party at the Armouries tonight.

Mrs. Grace McEwan, who has been confined to her home through illness for quite a time, has sufficiently recovered as to be able to take her office as Worthy Matron of Rose Chapter No. 204, O. E. S., last night at the regular meeting in Oddfellows' Temple.

Mrs. B. Servis, 3 Railway St., who has been in Belleville General Hospital for the past month is progressing favorably.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lee of Cobourg are visiting Mrs. Lee's brother, Joseph Strout, and Miss Doris Lee is visiting Mrs. Doris Mansfield, Station Street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Mercier, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Contact Association in honor of Mrs. Mercier's mother, Mrs. Weldon Kilmer, following their recent trip to Collegiate Auditorium last evening.

Miss Isabella DeLong, 48½ Dufferin Street, was hostess at a delightfully informal bridge party on Thursday evening in honor of Miss Ruth Galley who is leaving this week to make her home in Ireland. The guests were school chums of Miss Galley and during the evening Miss Galley was presented with a handsome silver umbrella for her friends. Games, cards and dancing were enjoyed and a delicious lunch was served.

Mrs. Q. T. Lester, 367 William Street, is celebrating today the 82nd anniversary of her birth and she is receiving the congratulations and good wishes of a host of friends. Mrs. Lester, despite her advanced age, is still much interested in the events of the day and reads regularly the newspapers, current literature and books. Her bright and happy disposition undoubtedly has helped Mrs. Lester cause Miss Pickup to make her home at Belleville in the year 1867.

Nancy Kilne, formerly proprietress of the Napoleon Kazuzo in Belleville, visiting friends and Lewis Kilne of Belleville and Charles, of Trenton. Mrs. Kilne has been a resident of Chicago for some years, although she and her family still maintain a home here. At midnight a delicious supper was served. Arrangements for these parties are made by all members of the Cadet Rangers who are to be congratulated for the success of the evening.

expenditures; all controllable expenditures have been closely scrutinized in every department and cut to the core, where this was able. You can't say of Yeo, noted a Ward 3 ratepayer, that the 1937 council and say it has failed in any matter, that has overspent the spending of the ratepayers' money; or say that any thing it has done has been "half hearted," declared the alderman.

"A lot has been said about reducing the taxes of the city during the coming year," continued Alderman Armstrong, "and some of the candidates who have talked this have apparently told you how they'd go about it. The only way I can see to do it is on the wage question, and that during the course of a year cuts do not amount to very much as far as expenditures go. We have to be careful of the manner in which we control economy in the various departments, the fire department, for example, which is one of the city's best investments, because of the efficiency of the fire department is hinged the control of key rate of insurance the city would have to pay. If it did not maintain its efficiency, then the rates might go much higher.

Should Adjust Assessment

"There has been a lot of talk about the inequality of the assessment of the city, and I believe that something should be done along this line. Some close scrutiny of this matter should be undertaken by the new council; and if its been accomplished by the old council, whose members have retained the confidence of values. We have found that many other municipalities have had their assessment completely revised. That is one question that will be brought in the new council and I hope, that something concrete can be done along this line. I believe there will be left enough of the old council to guide the new in the manner in which they have been undertaken so far. If elected I will ask and press that this be done," pledged the speaker.

Alderman Armstrong turned to the matter of the North Front Street sidewalk, a sidewalk, which has been demanded, in the absence of children using the street going to King George School, necessary to be undertaken. The matter of the construction of the walk has been under fire for some time past, after protests against the cost had been laid by several tax payers.

"This walk was placed upon by council, that it be advertised in order to give the ratepayers a chance to protest or vote on the work. No judgment has yet been rendered by the Municipal Board on it," explained the candidate.

Asked For Support

"You know my record in council for the past 16 years. You know I have always endeavored to do my best in the best interests of the city and have tried to carry out my work, that has been assigned to me in the best manner in which I was capable. You must remember that during the past 16 years council and any municipality have been called upon to deal with problems more serious than they have ever been faced by previous councils.

"I feel that I have now suited to you to carry on as mayor, to give you the benefit of the experience which I've been able to acquire of municipal workings. If you believe, that my record of the past 16 years will entitle me in asking for this honor I promise you that you will be the first that I have tried to do to the best of my human ability. I can only promise that I will do my best in all a fair and square deal. I realize the problems both that confront the tax payer and the man who earns a living in this city because I can qualify as both. I am a tax payer to-day, I can only say, that I appreciate the honor I have conferred," concluded Alderman Armstrong.

Jamieson Bone.

"A good chairman is the one who doesn't open his mouth," declared Mayor Reid at the conclusion of the address by Alderman Armstrong, and his introduction of Alderman Jamieson Bone, mayoralty candidate.

"I appreciate this chance to speak to you and to lay my platform before you of what I hope to do if elected for this coming year," acknowledged Mr. Bone.

"It may be a trite expression to say that I view with alarm . . . but I do view with alarm the manner in which the affairs of the city have been carried on.

"I'm not puffing myself up for the honor, but I think the mayor's chair, because, frankly, I have no actual desire to do so. But for years I have expressed myself in more definite action; I have urged this and asked for that and done about it.

"Remember, all I say here tonight hinges on if—as—and when I become mayor. I believe that the council you also elect should be a council which is in sympathy with the policies I feel should be carried out. If I don't get the help of such a council, then I feel that nothing much can be carried out.

Says He Has Been Misquoted.

"If I am mayor I will attempt to do something in getting a little tired of so much talk. I'm getting tired of hearing myself misquoted, and having things come back to me that I have not said at all.

"I note there are quite a lot of serious, thoughtful taxpayers in the hall this evening and that is a good sign; it shows that at last they are waking up to the fact that things cannot go along as they have been."

Ex-Alderman Bone, in his declaration that Canada was "probably the worst governed country in the Empire to-day, and is suffering in every department from complete public apathy" intimated how Belleville was also subject to a large degree in the same apathy that allowed management to go on as it had.

"Everyone everywhere admits that all sorts of things need to be and could be done, but nowhere can any one be found who will do anything about it," he added.

22 Per Cent. in Default.

"Twenty per cent. of the total municipalities of the province are at present in default." Mr. Bone further declared. "They have borrowed millions they can never repay and are borrowing millions more. The morale of the country is steadily being lowered and the taxpayer is at his wit's end, and nowhere is a way asked for or found. The murder of the goose that lays the golden eggs goes steadily on, and the hocking is certainly becoming louder.

"Are we going to continue in this way this year," he continued, "is to help the 1500 property owners of Belleville who pay the bulk of the taxes—of police, fire, library, hospital, Falconbridge, Parks Board and others—who are bored to death. We also pay the entire cost of educating everybody's children, until you have left the age of well past the time they could go to work. It is high time the tax payer took a stand on his own behalf, and he should have something to say about the way his money is spent.

"North Front street walk is one thing that would have been completed long ago if I had my way. I opposed this and I oppose all walks until the time comes when the tax payer can get a few loaves of bread for himself.

Not Opposed to Education.

"It has been said I was opposed to education. It certainly am not. But there are no grounds that I have been. I believe that some reduction could be made in some of the frills of education taken off relieving the tax payer. I believe that the Board of Education can do so by one of the city that has not found it necessary to economize as the rest of us have been forced to."

The matter of the assessment and the declared unfairness of the present system was aired by the speaker, who has been approached by a man who was left $100,000 in bonds paying 4 per cent. interest, and by them as tax, and the man left the same amount of money in property that paid him 2 per cent. on this investment.

The result is that property has no real value; there has been no building for years. Rents have become flats and flats have become slums. That's are places in this city, Bone declared, that have never been. Building trades have languished, there has been no improvement in business, wages have been lowered and there have been more taxes levied on the same to-day.

"If I am elected Mayor, I may not be able to do all the things which, but I will kick up an awful fuss trying, and with your assistance I will force the issue and see that what I believe should be undertaken," declared the candidate for the office of Mayor assured.

Bone also referred to the matter of reassessment of the city mentioned by previous speakers, and agreed that it should be done. In short it should be undertaken without delay. The matter of water rates is good. It is certainly time for a change. We have been going along too long without caring very much as to time our citizens showed more backbone, and less timidity. In short it is time for a Jamieson Bone," he concluded.

Ald. William Harvey.

Alderman Wm. Harvey as the third candidate for the mayoralty chair, also expressed himself delighted not only with the privilege of being able to address the citizens of the city, but also to solicit votes as the office himself as Mayor. "I come to you with a great deal of confidence in this election, and particularly as I have merited through my past efforts," he added.

Alderman Harvey warned, that he would confine his talks only to matters which concerned the city in which he lived, had raised his family and in which he hoped to end his living.

"Mr. Bone has raised the matter of the North Front Street walk. I was on the School Board, when that matter was built, and I can assure you that I fought at that time for the walk, which I believed was necessary in the interests of the tiny children, who attend the school and who must cross that busy street in front, when traffic grows heavier yearly. I consider that street a danger to these children and the walk a necessity.

The speaker turned to the matter of relief in the city.

"In the past five years Belleville has been forced to spend a sum of $126,000.00 as her share of the relief given to the workless families. There is no question about this matter of relief, but I say give relief where it is needed. The alternative would be to give employment, but we have had no opportunity to reduce this unemployment by locating industries here.

Must Create Work

"We must try to create work for our people in order to get away from this matter of relief; work instead of charity is what is needed."

The cost of education, declared by him to be about $1,500 a day for tax payers of the city, was raised by Alderman Harvey. "I have always contended that a representative of the city council should be on the School Board, and to that end the matter of legislating in this respect is now being considered, to be commenced.

One manner in which the tax payer could have his burden of a large sum of taxes spent at a time, lifted was outlined by Alderman Harvey.

"I have been asked by some of the tax payers of the city if it could not be arranged by a small deposit on taxes owing on their property. Why could not a monthly scheme of paying taxes be arranged? My belief is they could be paid in small instalments. Pay the first one in April, then continue once a month and these taxes would be paid in three months for grace, in which the voter could be built up for the year without a penalty."

23 Years Service

"I have served you for a period of twenty-three years in various offices in this city, as you well know, and am willing to continue to serve you for three years more, if you have the confidence of the experience I have gained," declared Alderman Harvey. "Now I ask that you continue my service by electing me to the office of Your Chief Magistrate and have every confidence, that you will do so at the polls on Monday next. If re-elected Mayor I will gladly promise that I will give the same faithful service that I have in the past and will really try to legislate this city's affairs in the best manner in which I am capable. Thank you for the kind hearing you have given me and particularly remember that my record of service during the past many years deserves your consideration at the polls on Monday," concluded Alderman Harvey.

Ald. Thomas Ward.

Alderman Thomas Y. Wills, Chairman of Finance: "I will give you my attitude on one or two matters that will come before the council for the first sitting next year, that of reduction. I am in favor of that at this present time, but not much hope for reduction by ordinary means as we are spending the full limit of a million in debentures. The net result will be about 3½ mills according to the value of assessment."

Speaking on the sinking fund, the speaker explained the motion before the council. "There is a substantial balance in the sinking fund," he said, "first, due to sound investment of the city, now by estimated on a 2 per cent. basis. I think it should be used. There should be a drastic restriction placed on this money to prevent the use for any purpose other than sinking debts. I think there should be a re-assessment of the city, also a survey of increase or decrease assessment but to be a means to make adjustments in assessments long overdue."

Alderman Clarence Clapp

Alderman Clarence Clapp, Chairman of Public Works: "The expense of the work done by his department Alderman Clapp stated that: "We have tried to cut taxes and this council has done everything to attain this end. Industries are essential," he said, "for that will bring to the city more taxes and more home owners. Chairman Clapp, touching upon the work done, stated that his appropriation was $50,000 out of which $7,250 had been expended for the new construction. The speaker stated that in previous years sewer projects were debentured but while this year they were financed by the pay-as-you-go policy of his department. He complimented the mayor and council on their work for the past year.

Alderman A. W. Mackie, Chairman of Fire:

"In the fall of 1934 I asked for your support and that support has increased every year since. The help given by Alderman Wills are absolutely correct. I have my differences and have tried to be fair and have never attempted any issues. A few years ago the 3?re Department used 18 to 40 thousand dollars; this year and last 60 and about 90 thousand. This is a rather large figure but the department has been maintained at a high standard of efficiency. I believe we will get a little support." Alderman Mackie concluded his remarks with congratulations to the members of the Fire Department.

Alderman Thomas Cushing, Market and City Property:

Following an appeal for support this year, Alderman Cushing stated that the market is "allright". "While the revenue will not be as high as other years, there will be a considerable surplus. With very little expense, he said, "the third floor of the City Hall could be fixed; place the police station on the ground floor and do away with the unsightly building. I think we should cover the market," he said.

Alderman Lazie Lewis, Chairman of Welfare:

"Five years ago a new department was created and I was appointed chairman," opened Alderman Lewis. "At this time the city was spending $150,000. Since then through the appointment of a welfare department, the city has spent $100,000. This amount has been considerably reduced and will only be about $50,000 this year. Able bodied men cannot get jobs they do not earn their relief and they are better for it. We have accomplished by buying from Belleville bakers and have won work on the Beaches project. Shan maintained the price of bread and wood, and I think these are fair. This all went to the citizens of Belleville with the exception of a month when wood was purchased from outside. I offered services of Mr. Soules on the Mothers Allowance Board and I have the services of weigh master thus affording a saving of two employees."

"This is what I propose to do," declared Alderman Lewis. "I think legislation is going to be needed to get in touch with the citizens. If Belleville is going to pay $16,000, it should call the time. I think there are too many specialty bodies. I don't think that legislation should say whether or not we should have a city manager or not. I am not involved for it, and I think we should be allowed to use the surplus of the sinking fund.

"We have a most inequitable assessment, especially in the north," he said the speaker. "There we have flats and some shabby property to be a private citizen owning a single is assessed for $40,000."

Alderman Clarence E. Thompson,

Chairman of Light: "In the last three years you have elected me, I have attended meetings faithfully and have given advice freely to save the taxpayers money. If elected I will serve you faithfully and official. Then, I think, we would have got some results. I think I'd look after your interests and ask for your support."

Mr. Raymond Carr, who was unable to be present in the flesh, sent a message of support in a letter read to the audience in which he stated that "if I am elected I will endeavor to do my utmost to give to the people of Belleville honest and faithful service during my term of office".

Mr. Leonard Fisard: Stating that he was a new candidate in addressing the meeting, Mr. Fisard stated he has lived in Belleville for ten years and has always had interests in respect to taking on municipal affairs. He added, he has no excuses to make and if elected I will have no excuses to make at the end of the year. He stated my time to help manage this city to the best of my ability."

Mr. MacLean Haig: Seeking election for the first time, Mr. Haig explained that he has lived in the city for the past three years and has been employed in the city for a long time yet. "I have served in the council of the town from which I came," said Mr. Haig, "and feel that I have no platform here. I am offering myself for election on my ability in the management of the city. Short H. Ketcheson: I have served all citizens to exercise their franchise.

Mr. Sidney L. Howell: "I have heard a lot of complaints that you would not be able to get a start," Mr. Howell said, "but this year there is a large field giving the younger citizens opportunity for service. I think the legislature should carry a very large part of the cost of education." Mr. J. Edson "Eddie" Logan: Residing in the city for eight years, Mr. Logan told his listeners that although he had never served in the council he had acted in other official capacities. "I think we should have everything that could be done for us and effort has been made to secure same. I am in favor of spending some money in this respect, but I think possibly this money could be better spent on the scheme of providing city property free of debt."

Mr. Martin said, "and I think I can be of some use to the community. That is why I am running. I will be glad to co-operate with any administration."

Mr. Stanley W. Rollins: "You have listened to a lot of oratory so all I can say is that I will serve all citizens to the best of my ability."

Mr. Benjamin Safe: "I have been an industrial man for years, have dropped out of municipal life last year," Mr. Safe told his listeners. "I am a heavy taxpayer and industry and that is our high tax rate. Mention has been made of a tax to the west of us getting industries. I am in favor of influential citizens who would move heaven and earth to get them.....

"I have every confidence in Mr. Owen Bentley," declared Mr. Safe, "and what can he do in the way of industry on a sum of three hundred dollars a year. He should have a resume of his work while in council for four years and the savings effected while acting as chairman of Public Works.

Ald. Ellis, Chairman of the Board of Education:

Reduction of the estimated budget last year was a good move, Mr. Allin stated, adding that he has represented the citizens there for a number of years. "I think the number of the burden of the cost of education should be more heavily borne by the Federal and Provincial governments. Requisitions last year were $131,000 which amounts to 27 cents per day per pupil, he added. "The speaker explained the school board has made the savings effected thereby. He made reference to the building of a sidewalk on the west side of North Front street from the bridge to Pinnacle, stating that he recommended the School and Home Clubs.

Mr. H. B. Pefferey: People are filing out of the auditorium as this speaker arose to his feet. "I am so sorry there is such little time for education," he said. He spoke of the co-operation of education by principal and inspector. "There has been a complete change in curricula and I advocated changes for many years ago," he said. "However the changes have been made as far as I can see, and at that time but I believe they will come eventually."

Mr. W. J. Harrison: "I have been a member of the Board for four years and have done everything in my power. I will appreciate your support."

Charles L. Hyde: "I believe the Public School Board will operate more efficiently in the interest of the people."

Dr. J. W. Kinnear: "I came before the ratepayers of this city nine years ago and served for three years as an alderman," the speaker said "Tonight I am here on different business. That of giving my time to educational matters if you elect me." Dr. Kinnear asked for the support of the electors.

Mr. Reg. Mountcirl: In the course of his 16 years as a member of the Board, four years as Chairman of Technical and two years as Chairman of Supplies, Mr. Mountcirl pointed out that he would suggest to council that taxes should be taken off schools. He thought educational grants should be borne by governmental." I promise to serve you faithfully in the office," he concluded.

Mr. Percy McGehee: "I was a member of the Board last year, and with this experience I feel, that I will be better able to support you," Mr. McGuire told his listener.

Rev. L. S. Wright: Introduction with youth for the past forty five years fitted him to serve youth, Mr. Wright said. "I am a taxpayer and solicit your support. I submit that the reactores of this Dominion lie not with agriculture, mines or other department but in the youth."

Mr. Raymond L. Dorrell: In appealing for the support of the taxpayers, Mr. Zufelt stated that he opposited the re-roofing of two schools and saved the city $1,800.00.

Mr. Merrill Chairman of the Belleville Public Utilities in a brief resume of the assets of the Belleville Utilities Commission, stated that a year ago a vote was taken by the Public Utilities and this has been done.

"The capital setup of the three services, water, hydro and gas is $1,100,000.00, while included in these three services are 9,000 services. The yearly payroll is $50,000.00. Efforts have been made to co-ordinate these services," Mr. Duff stated.

The speaker struck an optimistic note, when he said that the present gas indemnity debt of $155,000 may be reduced three thousand dollars at the end of the year. In the water works debt of $135,000 the speaker stated he hoped to lift now is $12,000. "We may be able to give a reduction in rates," he said.

Turning to Hydro the speaker pointed out that up to Oct. 31st a surplus of $17,000 was shown, while the surplus on hand is $51,000.

"There is a plan on hand to save this surplus and that is by consolidating the Reid Street Sub-station," he said. "The decrease in rates this year is fifteen percent. From 1930 to 1937 consumers have been given a decrease from 50 to 60 percent in rates and we are giving the city lighting at cost."

Mr. W. C. Mikel questioned the speaker as to what amount the Reid Street sub-station will cost. "About eighty thousand dollars," Mr. Duff replied.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

"Brud" Holland, Negro at Cornell Gains End Position

By ALAN GOULD

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—In an era of football specialists, developed to handle the growing complexities of the United States most spectacular college sport, it is noteworthy that the 1937 all-American team, announced today, emphasizes the part iron men played in one of the most stamina-testing seasons on record.

Short troops and specialists still figure prominently in the manoeuvres of the nation's forward and gyrations of gridiron talent.

Many played vital roles this year by coming through in emergencies, but the all-star spotlight shines the brightest on the boys who not only stood the gaff by going the 60-minute route when needed but who also scaled their greatest heights of achievement under pressure.

That is not surprising that the country-wide experts, forming the basis for the Universal annual Associated Press all-America selections, stressed durability in major leagues' competition together with essential all-around qualifications.

Equipped To Go Route.

This year's all-America team is equipped to go the route, with a rugged line averaging around 200 pounds each from end to end, and a backfield quartet possessing barbed lightning in the person of No. 1 opportunist, Charles Alexander, Swarthy, Notre Dame's spectacular and the first entry in top company the Fighting Irish have had in five years.

It features experience, with nine seniors in the unrivaled lineup, along with two standouts who have a year to go, Pittsburgh's Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg in the backfield and Cornell's giant Negro, Jerome (Brud) Holland, at end.

Two choices with nation-wide endorsement, Byron Haymond (Whitey) White of Colorado University, and Clinton Edward Frank, Yale's backfield sparkplug, are unanimous ones that seemed destined to echo through the corridors of football's hall of fame.

Two of Knie

Frank cut a two-year swath through tough jerry league opposition that marked him among Yale's all-time greats.

Ranking but a finer crop of ends been studied in action or has any position offered more hazards than the all-American picker. The choices fell upon Notre Dame's Sweeney and Cornell's Holland, first Negro to make the first all-America team since Fritz Pollard, celebrated Paul Robeson of Rutgers in 1918.

Sweeney repeats the decision play to three Notre Dame victories over Navy, Minnesota and Northwestern.

Holland, a 202-pound "Brown Bomber," wrecked interference, blocked and tackled, snagged passes and carried the ball.

The old reliable two finest ends were Andy Bershak of North Carolina and Bill Jordan of Georgia Tech.

Ed Franco, Fordham's underrating play-wrecking "Chesterfield" Wahlmatisi, 224-pound powerhouse, got the call for tackle.

Guards Easy to Pick

The guard position offered one of the few all-American breathing spells, with little or no dispute to the selection of Joe Routt, the battle of enemy operating on an ironman basis for Texas A. and M., and Alabama's Joseph Paul (Hutch) Hutchinson, Leroy Monsky.

The choice for centre, Carl Columbus Hinkle, Jr., of Vanderbilt, measures up to the highest standards, but his magnificent war by no means dominating. Hinkle closed a three-year Varsity career at which he played 60 minutes in 13 games, snapped the ball unerringly, and every where out-fored on the defence.

All four men selected for this year's all-American backfield are halfback types, though Yale's Frank carries fullback drive and power in his chunky frame, like California's Sam Chapman. Frank also qualifies as a defensive backer-up of the first magnitude. In fact, with Frank and Chapman to furnish the locomotion, it is difficult to see how any opposition could have much success stopping their mates, Whisner White and Biggie Goldberg, from running wild all afternoon.

In the general shake-up of the Detroit Red Wings, N.H.L. champions for the past two seasons, Howard Mackie, speedy young right-winger from the Pittsburgh club, has been called up to fill in on the line with Marty Barry and Rookie Carl Liscombe. The Red Wings have slipped badly this season and the bringing up of Mackie is only part of Manager Jack Adams' plan to try and get the club climbing again.

Belleville Redmen Score First Win in Kingston Loop Defeating Garrison by 3 to 1

Will Jackson And Ken Mallett Marksmen For Winners

WILSON SPEEDY

Locals Play Wide-Open Game to Please Large Crowd

Checking their opponents profusely throughout the entire contest, the Belleville Redmen unleashed a torrid third period attack to defeat the Kingston Garrison 3-1 and register their initial win in the Van Horne Memorial series in Kingston last evening. The Redmen's victory was the lightest to see in the Kingston pee-season loop, elevating the Thomas-men segregation into striking distance of the initial rung of the league ladder.

Getting up a stonewall-like defence the Redmen literally checked the Soldier boys from the start-son, into oblivion and kept the locks off the score sheet in all periods, except in the second stanza, when a combination play resulted in a soldier score. The Redmen combination of the Jackson brothers put the locals into the lead in the initial period and duplicated this feat in the final stanza, with Mallett getting the lucky counter. There was no scoring in evidence in the middle canto, however.

Wide Open Hockey

Playing wide open hockey in the initial frame the Redmen applied the pressure early in the contest, led by "Wink" Wilson, who undoubtedly stood out as the star of the night, Wilson's speed being dazzling. The game was only a minute old, when the Jackson boys split the defence, at brother Clayton drew the Garrison rearguard to one side, passed to Bill, with the latter beating Lang at-close quarters. The Redmen met every advance of the "soldiers" from that point on, however, and despite the fact four penalties were meted out in the middle stanza, the opposing squads thwarted the power plays applied by both teams.

Early in the third period Carr-Harris knotted the count as he took a pass from Belwa at the Belleville goal-mouth, giving Wait little chance to save and the score stood 1-1, when the Belleville second line swung into action and after numerous thrusts into the enemy territory were rewarded for their efforts as Mallett rifled the boot heel past Lang after a three way combination play of Robinson to Johnson to Mallett. On a solo effort from the Garrison blue line Bill Jackson clinched the night's honors for the Redmen as he skirted the Garrison defence and skated in on the helpless Lang to score one of the most sensational goals of the night.

Large Crowd Present.

The largest crowd of the current Van Horne series season witnessed the game and encouraged the Redmen with vocal accord. The game was cleanly contested and wide open hockey seen for the entire sixty minutes of play. Kingston drew down four penalties, Smith getting three, while the Redmen were accused of infractions on two occasions, Wilson being the offender in both cases. All penalties were of the minor nature, however.

Once again Ken Wait gave a sensational exhibition of goal keeping and was ably defended by Fred Bentley and Ken Murphy who played sixty minutes without a rest. The combination of the Jackson boys and Wilson was too tricky for the Garrison, while the fine work of the second line, Ken Mallett, Dormer Loudon junior, Bill Storms at centre and Don Johnson proved their worth as they matched the soldiers at every turn and checked well. For the Garrison Belwa, Carr-Harris, Belwa and Younger-Lewis proved the best and were always dangerous. The wide open hockey played proved most pleasing to the patrons of the game who stamped their approval on the continued efforts of the Redmen in endeavoring to play open hockey.

The line-ups:

Belleville Redmen — Goal, Wait; defence, Murphy and Bentley; centre W. Jackson; wings, Wilson and C. Jackson; subs, Mallett, Storms and Johnson.

Kingston Garrison—Goal, Land; defence, Carey and Smith; centre, Thurlby; wings, Belwa and Carr-Harris; subs, Clarke, Younger-Lewis, Longhurst, Armshaw and McTigue.

Summary:

First Period.

1. Belleville, W. Jackson (C. Jackson) 1.05

Penalties—Wilson.

Second Period.

No score.

Penalties—Smith 2, Wilson, Carey.

Third Period.

2. Garrison, Carr-Harris (Belwa) 7.10

Penalties—Wilson, Johnson) 9.45

4. Belleville, Will Jackson 14.10

Penalties—None.

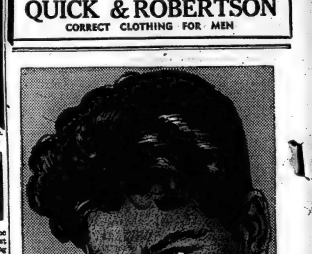
The matter of daylight saving is often misunderstood. Some folks think it means getting up an hour earlier in the morning. That is true, but only for one day only, and then the hour of deep is regained on the last night of daylight saving period—so it is all even in the long run. Daylight saving, as some would have us believe, is not a device for shortening sleep, it is only a reapportionment of the twenty-four hours. In reality daylight saving simply means that we adjust ourselves to the summer season, when the sun rises earlier and sets later. The clock is merely advanced one hour and we continue to retire and rise according to habit, but we take advantage of one additional hour of daylight in the evening.

There are many advantages in daylight saving than disadvantages. Among the advantages are:—1. We quit our daily labours while there is still plenty of daylight left to allow us ample time for recreation. In the matter of golf, at the beaches, longer evenings for fishing, or gardening, to participate in team sports and individual play and to engage in other activities to provide play and recreation for a tired working person. 2. Garden lovers will have an additional hour of sunlight in the early part of the flowers and vegetables. 3. All office, store and factory workers will have an additional hour of sunshine to do with as they please. 4. It will be important in the matter of health every day. 4. There will also be a saving in electric light bills, as we would retire earlier. 5. Daylight saving does much to people's community with tourists, and goodness knows Belleville cannot afford to lose as much of the tourist trade as was the case this year.



Personally we do not believe daylight saving should be put into effect during the school period, but should be put simply for a short period in June, July and August, commencing, say, the last Monday in April and ending the last Monday the voters of Belleville will be given the polls to vote on this very important measure of daylight saving. To some it may appear of no importance and it is in the hands of those chosen few that the balance of power really lies upon their shoulders will fall the responsibility. To them we suggest they give daylight saving a trial for one year—give those who want a little extra daylight for recreation purposes an opportunity to enjoy themselves. To the sportsmen of the city we say—"get out and vote for daylight saving and then use your influence in the same direction." After all if the sport loving fraternity does not support the sport of golf, a stimulate interest in it, how can they expect others to assist them in the question?

Do you remember when Georges Vezina one of hockey's all-time great goaltenders, was ordered to quit the game 13 years ago today. Despite a temperature of 102, the Canadien netminder played his last match and 36 and in the following week lost 30 pounds. He died at Chicoutimi, Que., March 29, 1926.

Playing wide open hockey the Belleville Redmen broke into the win column in the Van Horne series last evening, winning over the Kingston Garrison, 3-1. Eddie Thomas' charges have been knocking at victory's door all season and last night the breaks were well oiled and swung open easily as the Redmen skated to victory. Last night's win elevates the Redmen's chances considerably while a win over Peterboro Wednesday will elevate them into striking distance of the league leadership. Lack of condition and inadequate alternating cost the locals a less opulent fee "Fives" last week, but last night they threw their all into the fray and are very much in the running today. Key Wilson really burned it last night. The "Wink" wants to skate there are few in this neck of the woods who can skate with the Napanee flash.

A little conditioning and the addition of a couple of youthful alternates and you'll find your Redmen knocking at the door in the near future. The main feature of the locals is their willingness to play wide open hockey which naturally pleases the fans of the city.

Belleville will definitely have a ladies' softball team in the Lake Shore group of the O.B.C.U.A. question was decided last evening following a regular practise of the team at the "Y". Marion McLean was elected captain and Laura Melchior vice-captain of the squad. The colors of the team will be purple and gold, the official Y.M.C.A. colors, Instructor Fred Hicken informs us. Last night's league organization meeting was postponed for one week but the local interests would far rather have the organization meeting on Saturday, Dec. 11, they say. Coach Jack Dickens has fourteen players out, many of whom played for outstanding B.C.I.V.S. squads in years. The girls' team is facing one problem, however, the appointment of a business manager. Realizing the importance of such an official, the girls are carefully scanning the city for the proper person to fill this position. Provincial girls' basketball never has been completed in Belleville and the future success of the game lies in the hands of the fans. The experienced boys' rules will prevail, which should speed up the game considerably.

Foxboro

Foxboro, Dec. 3.—While Gift Service was offered on Sunday morning in the Sunday School and the front of the church was nicely draped in Christmas greens, the service was enjoyed which will be repeated on Sunday evening next.

Mr. and Mrs. Gowsell entertained the following guests on Thursday evening: Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Chambers of Corbyville, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wall, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Daniels and Mr. and Mrs. John Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Dalnard and Miss Ruth Wilson motored to Mr. and Mrs. Nick Dalnard of Wooler were Sunday guests at Mr. H. Stewart's.

Quite an enthusiastic prayer and church service was dismissed on Sunday evening when it became known of overheated stove pipes at the home of Mr. R. Morton and a chimney fire at Mr. J. Gowsell's. Fortunately no damage was done.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. J. J. Johnston and Miss Eleanor on the death of a loving wife and mother.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Sills were Sunday evening guests at Mr. Eric Denyse at Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott had Sunday dinner at Mr. J. Gowsell's.

A number attended the Sunday school convention at the Zion Hill church on Wednesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Daniels and Marion sent Sunday at Mr. Arthur Scott's, Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Hodgen and Dale of Belleville had Sunday evening supper at Mr. W. Hodgen's.

POEMS THAT LIVE lxxi. ..... SYMPATHY

The maid I love ne'er thought of dying
Amid the scenes of gaiety;
But when her heart or mine sank sighing,
Ah, then it was no longer so.

From the slant palm she raised her head,
And kiss'd the cheek whence youth had fled,
Angelic some future day for this;
Give her sa sweet and pure a kiss

At the Movies

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"Varsity Show"

Back in 1919, Woodrow Wilson was President, the boys were coming back from the war, there was a four young lads were playing ragtime," the current movie hit, The Alpha Chi Rho fraternity house at Penn State University, and their leader—bag an idea: "Let's organize a dance band.

Fred Waring was the leader and played the banjo. His brother Tom played the piano. Fred Buck strummed the banjo too and "Poley" McClintock banged away at the drums.

The first job Fred Waring's band played netted them exactly $10. Recently they finished playing in "Varsity Show" at Warner Bros. studio for what is reported to be the greatest sum ever paid an orchestra—$150,000.

Born in Tyrone, Pa., Fred Waring, Tom, "Poley" and Fred Buck lived on the same block. They started to play musical instruments together and dreamed of going to Penn State. They did odd jobs to save their money and finally did enter college together. Fred Buck passed on several years ago, but his presence is still felt in the intricate arrangements which are contributed to the band's library.

New members were added to the orchestra as time went by and changed their name. Originally it was called Waring's Pennsylvania Collegians. Then Waring's Pep and then Waring's Banjaleers.

In 1924 they obtained a week's engagement at the Balaban and Katz Theatre in Chicago, the week been enlarged to ten in members. Fred Waring had developed the banjo for the baton and they called themselves Fred Warings Pennsylvanians.

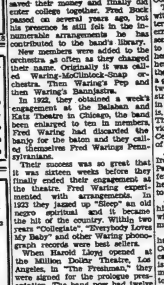
Their success was so great that it was only natural that they finally ended their engagement at the theatre. Fred Waring experimented with arrangements. In 1923 they jazzed up "Sleepy Time Gal" and made it a success as a jazz number.

When Harold Lloyd opened at the Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles, in the silent picture, they were signed for the prologue presentation. The show was a big success. Tom Waring was singing his own composition "Sympathy" and "Poley" McClintock was scoring a hit with his frog-voiced singing of "Annie Doesn't Live Here Anymore" when the band made their radio debut in 1933 on a sponsored program. They've been on the air ever since, and the success is now history.

Waring's Pennsylvanians come to the Belle Theatre today at the head of a big cast of funmakers in fast-paced musical comedy of college life, "Varsity Show", guaranteed to drive away the blues, and as such is a refreshing treat.

AT THE CAPITOL

"History is Made at Night"



Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur are starred in "History is Made at Night" at the Capitol Theatre, Belleville commencing Sunday midnite at 11.30.

The handsome Boyer has never been seen to better advantage than as Paul Dumont, Paris man about town and gigolo and head waiter, and lovely Jean Arthur is also at her charming best as Irene Vail, the New York manequin who pretends to break the bonds of her unhappy marriage to the jealous, domineering shipping agent, played by Colin Clive.

The story opens on a novel note, with Paul, the handsome and mysterious stranger, playing a part in the terrorism which her husband sends his chauffeur (Ivan Simpson) to her hotel suite to compromise her so she'll be compelled to drop her disdain of divorce. Paul discovers the chauffeur, carries off Irene and a glorious romance is begun as Paul and Irene, fascinated strangers dine and tango 'till dawn in the romantic Paris, city of love. Paul, posing as a bridegroom, is unknowne to Irene, head waiter at the ever-villain Max Martin (Leonard Carey) and another grand portrayal as Cesare, the temperamental chef of the cafe.

A tragic note is introduced when Fred Martin learns Irene and Paul are not married and that Paul's blow has killed the chauffeur. How will Irene face the lovers in the morning? Paul returns to Paris together almost Wally's next attempt to bring order and save the prisoner who is being unjustly held there.

One of the most unexpected and amazing climaxes to screen history follows and it would be unfair to reveal here—and the story ends on a happy note.

Fred Waring and his riot Pennsylvanians, Priscilla Lane and Dick Powell featured in the collegiate musical "Varsity Show" now on the Belle screen.

"Where There's a Will"

Since crazy comedy is the style nowadays—and we would be the last to object—we are happy to report that "Where There's a Will" is one swell Hay comedy at the Capitol as a first run hit on the same program. It completely crazy. In fact it is not only in style, but a little ahead of it.

Based on the actual story of the thrifty of the celebrated Ewing Moss Inn, from Ira Fresco, Lou Fox, "Where There's a Will" casts the Bamboo comedian in a Hay, in his celebrated role as the scatterbrained absent-minded Will in the art of hoodlums for pupils.

These young rascals use trickery to win the National Examination in French, with the sole object of procuring free theatre tickets to Paris. They also conceal in their midst an escaped criminal, "Arty" Jones, for the sake of his son, who is one of them. But Jones wants to get to Paris not only to make good his escape, but also to "pull" a big job while there.

At this point enters the "wrap", in the person of Lilli Palmer, who inveigles Will Hay into innocent participation in the theft. He walks home with the picture, thinking it a copy. But the boys learn of the plot, and scheme to untangle their professor. In the end the picture is returned to French authorities and Will Hay gets the reward, but not before there is a succession of riotous scenes that will do it 'rib' you off your seats.

Lilli Palmer, a Viennese importation, is no newcomer to the screen. She was the cute child star of the little autobiographical "Secret Agent," and the siren of "Silent Barriers". She is also cast in "Dr. Syn" and last complete show on Monday and Tuesday nights at 8.30.

Christmas At Church And School

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

FOR WEEKS before Christmas many classes, typically the primary grades, make many things suggestive of Christmas. In some classrooms the whole work is especially reading. Will be centred around the Nativities, and with good results.

Many of the younger children, under the care of a wise teacher and guided at school in making small gifts for parents, and for your child should bring home such a gift, however crude it is, express appreciation and the heart has been wrapped up in it!

Christmas programs

Christmas programs which require long rehearsals in school and out of school hours, and put fear on the teacher and neglect of regular school work and study periods, should be avoided. They are slowly passing. Staging or dramatizing has its place, however, if the standards for achievement are not unduly high.

Special Church Programs

In many churches there will be special Christmas programs put on by the choir, and there is much much costs of sleep and nervous energy consumed in rehearsals. But what entrances me most about some of these programs is that little cast. Individually, I will have to say pieces or sing songs. And if one of them should forget, the whole audience of the audience will laugh uproariously at him. I have seen it. Is that the spirit of Christ?

When church leaders are wiser and more sensitive to values, they will not so exploit little children. Instead they will try to educate parents to be more humane and less barbarous. And they will not have individual children in performance in public. They will have group performances.

It seems to me that in our public schools Jewish children should not be expected to participate in Christmas ceremonies if they or their parents have conscientious objection. Suppose most of the teachers and the children were Jewish. How would we Christians like to have our children forced to celebrate at school one of the religious festivals of the Hebrews? And just now, with all the hatred in the world, it behooves us to be peculiarly tolerant toward all our fellowmen. And the spirit of this tolerance be a filling tribute to the philosophy and life of Jesus.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Specialties, led by farm implements, gave a quiet display of strength in today's stock market.

While a few issues got up 5⅛ points or as at the best, most leaders lacked sufficient buying support to extend the recent rally at more than fractions. There also was an assortment of losers at the close.

Canadian issues moved narrowly both ways. Ahead ¼ point or more were International Nickel, Lake Shore and McIntyre Porcupine.

Canadian Pacific and Hiram Walker were fractionally lower. Sandoz 4s were inactive while bonds of Canadian funds remained at 100.03¾.

Coppers were bolstered by a modest advance in the export price for the metal.

While extreme advances were reduced at this finish, prominent on the upside were J. I. Case, Oliver Farm, International Harvester, Sound, Anaconda, American Smelting, Johns-Manville, Owens Illinois Glass, Illinois, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, Dupont, U.S. Smelting and Phillip Morris.

Backward were American Can, Youngstown, U. Gypsum, Pacific Fe, American Telephone and N.Y. Airbrake.

TORONTO STOCKS

(Close)

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—A fast market in the western oils marked the final Toronto Exchange session of the week with the close higher throughout except in some of the industrial groups. Trading hit a pace and about 500,000 shares changed hands in the two-hour session.

Royalite extended its gains for the week by two, closing around 49. Heavy traders among the cheaper issues were Calgary-Edmonton, up 24 cents to 290, Okalta, up about 15 cents to around 1.58 and Foothills, also up 10 cents to 1.20. Home added 8 or 9 cents and the close was near the top. P. E. Consolidated, East Crest, Brown, Commonwealth, Dalhousie, Monarch and United.

Smelters finished above the 30 mark. Metal around 43 and Noranda at 48, all showing gains of fractions to a point. Golds showed a strong spot in the silvers, holding around 3.30 at the close.

Gold shares were active and strong in the early stage and final stage. There were no wide net changes in the group.

The bid for Fanny Farmer was pushed about 1% under an active demand while other foods, including Canadian Breweries, Lobley A and Canners A were higher. Steel of Canada Preferred firmed while Dan a point bet, Associated rutled among the other steels and prices were down in the utility group. Canadian American was a strong spot in the senior oils, firming about ¾.

FIRE DESTROYS THURLOW HOME

Frank Pound's House Burned Friday Afternoon—Furniture Salvaged

Suddenly bursting into flame in the upper part of the house, fire said to have originated from a defective chimney, totally destroyed the home of Mr. Frank Pound, farmer residing on the third concession of Thurlow early yesterday afternoon.

While the house proper is a complete loss, practically all of the contents were salvaged before the flames and intense heat drove firefighters to a safe distance.

Making considerable headway in the upper stories before being discovered, fire swept rapidly through the large frame structure. A general alarm was sent out which resulted in neighbors flocking to the scene where combined efforts resulted in the saving of furniture and other household contents. A few potatoes in the cellar were destroyed.

The loss is covered by insurance, it was stated this morning.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT OF JURY

William G. Osborne Hit Fallen Tree in Tweed on November 28th

That William G. Osborne, 15-year-old Tweed boy, came to his death at the Belleville General Hospital on Nov. 30th last' the result of injuries received, when a motor car driven by the deceased accidentally crashed into a fallen tree in Tweed on Nov. 28th was the findings of the coroner's jury looking into the death of the said Wm. G. Osborne at the adjourned inquest held before Coroner Dr. G. S. Cronk at the police court rooms last evening.

Dr. O. H. Stobie, who attended the deceased boy prior to his death testified as to the cause of death. "I found Mr. Osborne was suffering from multiple lacerations on the face, a fractured nose and a compound fracture of the skull," stated the witness.

"What would you say was the cause of death?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., who conducted the investigation.

"General shock and the fractured skull," replied Dr. Stobie.

Did Not See Tree This Time

Chief Clare Hayes of Tweed was the only other witness called. Chief Hayes, who investigated the accident said he found a tree had fallen across Mingle Ave. in Tweed and a car had crashed broadside sheering of the entire top and permitting the vehicle to pass underneath the tree. A passenger in the car, Albert G. Osborne, a brother of the deceased told the jury he did not see the fallen tree until it was too late to avoid the accident," said the witness after which he described the terrific wind storm that struck Tweed on the night of the accident. Chief Hayes stated the lights in the car were in good order, but the brakes were found to be faulty when applied after the accident.

Statement Read

Mr. Donnan read the transcribed evidence of Albert G. Osborne, a brother of the deceased who is still confined to the hospital as the result of injuries received in the accident. Mr. Donnan read — "We were returning from Toronto. My brother was driving. We passed Corbyville. Driving conditions were good. Driving at high wind. My brother only had three weeks experience in driving. He lived with me and attended Tweed High School. We were just at corner in Tweed about 15 miles per hour. I noticed a street light was lit, but saw no obstruction until the car came to avoid the accident. My brother had no time to avoid the hospital, that he also saw the fallen tree, but that it was too late. The car belonged to me and the lights were in good working order," was the effect of the brief transcribed evidence read by Mr. Donnan.

The late William G. Osborne was known in Tweed and popular among his classmates at, with whom he attended school.

The coroner's jury impannelled by Sergeant Arthur Harman consisted of the following —Harold Malcolm, foreman; Percy Watson, Reg. Arnott, Tom Jeffery, Chas. Cochrane, Fred Gauthier and Geo. Ketcheson.

How to Use Water as a Beauty Aid

EVE MARCH

This rule of the star is proud of her lovely complexion.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hot water is relaxing to facial tissue and is in a state of depression. It's all right for the fresh, young face, and it works beneficially when eruptions are present. Cold water has a tonic effect. It hardens tissue and every not-so-young lady should use it often.

The cold shower is not for the elderly beauty seekers whose circulation is sluggish. Its blood streams do not react. For the healthy

C. TREVERTON NAMED PRESIDENT TWP. S. S. ASSOC.

Annual Convention is Held At Shannonville United Church

Shannonville—The annual convention of the Thurlow Rinday Schools in this township was held in the United Church on Friday afternoon and evening. The convention consisted of two sessions, the afternoon session with the Rev. W. D. Craig acting as chairman in the absence of the president. Although the afternoon session was not well attended the evening session lived up to expectations as the Church was nearly filled.

The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises conducted by the Rev. W. D. Craig after which the secretary-treasurer gave a report of the funds on hand and a report of last year's convention which was adopted. The reports of the Departmental superintendent were received after being favorably read by the Secretary-treasurer. The following gave reports: Miss Lily Wass, Supt. of Children's Division, Mrs. Henry Young, Peoples' Division, Mrs. Dan. Smith, Adult division, Mrs. Badgley, Missionary Supt., Mrs. O. G. Millgate, Temperance Supt.

Following the reports of the superintendents, the speaker of the afternoon session, the Rev. Richard Osborne of the Bay Circuit was introduced by the Rev. W. D. Craig. After congratulating the delegates Mr. Osborne decided not to give an address but to answer various questions forwarded by the delegates. Although many questions were asked of the meaning of the terms centred around the problem of decreased attendance and how it might be solved. The first question was asked by the Rev. W. D. Craig, wondering how teachers could hold the interest of the children for the space of the lesson. In reply the speaker said that it is advisable for teachers to use their own initiative when teaching their pupils although they receive instruction from the Ontario Religious Educational Council it is best to supplement with certain situations which arise often change the course of the lesson to be taught. Also should study their pupils in order to see how they act and react to the use of their own ideas on how to teach their classes.

Another question broached by the delegates was "How can we draw children to the Sunday School?" Mr. Osborne replied "It is always best to get children to realize that they are a necessary part of the Sunday School and also teachers should make personal contacts and friendships with the children." Another he was asked whether the approval of giving prizes for attendance was good or bad. Mr. Osborne declared that he did not approve of prizes for attendance as it was quite appropriate to give prizes for recognition of merit but not for attendance. "How can we get the children to be loyal to the Church?" to which Mr. Osborne said there is a friendship between Church and Sunday School and Sunday School and Church and Sunday School are separate institutions which is quite necessary localities there is an increasing tendency for Church services which is contrary to many in the west.

The session was given a vote of thanks by the Rev. W. D. Craig after which the meeting sang. The next half hour was left open in order that the delegates might render the delegates a discussion on the problems confronting them at the present time. At six o'clock a delicious lunch was served the delegates by teachers of the Shannonville Sunday School.

At seven o'clock the evening session opened with a song service led by Lorne Treverton assisted by the Shannonville Choir. The Devotional exercises followed which were conducted by the Rev. W. Craig after which the report of the 1938 nominating committee was received. The Rev. Osborne again addressed the delegates on the same dressed the delegates on the same topic as he used for the afternoon session. After the evening prayer are:

President, Mr. C. Treverton, 1st vice president, Mr. E. Hanna, 2nd. vice president, Mr. J. C. Millman, Secretary, Miss Jean Supt., Miss Merlene Dirth; Asst. Supt., Ward Smith; Asst. As Others See Us
A writer in the Ottawa Citizen describing a vacation trip to Prince Edward County and Hastings, had this to say about Belleville:
"I had a fussy experience looking for a place to eat in Belleville . . . We cruised up and down the street looking for a place where the most people were watching the parade. There was naturally a lot . . . . It was Sunday. There was nothing to see on the streets and these places were in charge to driving under the influence of liquor. There's justice for you.
"Brooks!", said Bryant, incredulous.
"That's right! David Brooks. Oh! such a legendary lawyer, probably explains why he skimmed out with a thirty-day jail sentence."
Bryant looked at Matt. He was probably warning in her eye. He didn't say anything.
Matt was reading again. Bryant said, "How would Helen Hayes strike you?" And something else and as much or as little dancing as you felt like after?"
Sandra thought, "I'm out of a job and I'll go mad thinking about David tonight. I think I'll go." But she hadn't quite decided when Matt jumped in his feet and flatly asked her.
"Do I tell you how to write this story? Didn't I give you the angle we want two minutes before you set out of here?" Matt looked at her the four pages of copy in his two hands and tore them into small bits. "Flash doesn't print that kind of stuff, do you understand? And I don't play favorites with anybody who can't understand English and follow instructions."
Sandra was smiling. She saw Bryant retreating, heard the door close behind her. She was out on the street and went on smiling.
"How you've got to write that story the way I say to write it. You're going to see this Brooke kid as an enemy of society."
"But why—I mean, aren't you going to fire me?"
Matt glared. Then his face softened: "Listen—you come in here and in a thousand in this game can really write. But you can. That story's full of dirt—enough to get a swell style and you don't lack for the right word to fit the right place. . . I'm not going to fire you. I'm going to show you what we want and—" He broke off and then laughed, and caught up the phone. After a little he put the receiver down. "Well, that's it." All right," he said. "It won't rewrite that one. We'll start another. Now, what's your angle on the next one."
"Was Judge Harrison on the phone?" Sandra asked, quietly.
Matt looked at her, nodded. "Why didn't you tell me he was your brother? After all, I'm human, you know."
Sandra went out and found Bryant waiting at her door. "Bryant, I'm all smiles." "What's the show and where do we dance?"
ENTERTAINING

An uncommitted host or listeners heard Ronny Musselfeller conduct the indoor pole meet at Squadron A that last Thursday in January, the Boston Garden-Arena management in Boston the next night and the Sunday afternoon broadcast of the casting set Hanover two days later. Not a few who thought they qualified in the absence of some vital visibility in the announcer's familiar voice.

Ronny Musselfeller, during his broadcasting had lacked—as it had for six miserable weeks—the stimulus of his accustomed audience. He had made it distinctive. "I'm off my oats. I'm off my oats," he had said, and pushed the thought that he was not up to snuff out of his mind. He was on his way to Maple Village now, to visit his mother, to the little town of his birth, where the first seventeen years of his life, where he knew and liked him, and made him know they liked him.

Long ago Ronny had explained Matt's kindness to Sandra in a brief note, dictated by conscience, to Lucille Baldwin—just before he began his Boston engagement.

Lucille had written: "Your mother was an artful prevaricator when we all were of course. Try to come soon, Ronny. We never had the pleasure when you are broadcasting, but hearing your voice isn't quite enough. We, your friends in Village friends, like you better than you know and we are as little like the people reading that Ronny had thought, "Why that everlasting editorial 'we'? Why can't we be in mortal fear I'll think she's personally interested in me. We haven't a lot of each other that last year in high school."

Two hours and a half after boarding the bus at Hanover, Ronny was shifting a suitcase from his mother's kitchen finishing an enormous supper, grinning proudly as he listened to his mother's quiet account of the reception the townspeople had given Lucille's and Christmas visit.

"You're something of a hero in Maple Village, Ronny," she told him with ill concealed amusement. "I can't begin to tell you the number of people who dropped in, here or at the office. Lucille was at the bottom of it, of course. She was determined to have a three-day carnival of your may."

As they walked, she heard Ronny say, "Listen, Sandra—there's no disgrace in this, no David unless you're going to make it. Now go to the street, a piece of chalk across the room and the teacher to see me stand in the corner for thirty minutes. I had never been punished in any way before and I thought I was disgraced. But when I smiled it over, I knew that was all. The disgrace was in forgetting the chalk. I broke a rule and I had been punished to clean the slate. Now you're going to see this Brooke kid as an enemy of society."

"But why—I mean, aren't you going to fire me?"

Matt glared. Then his face softened: "Listen—you come in here and in a thousand in this game can really write. But you can. That story's full of dirt—enough to get a swell style and you don't lack for the right word to fit the right place. . . I'm not going to fire you. Sandra went out and found Bryant waiting at her door. "Bryant, I'm all smiles." "What's the show and where do we dance?"

ENTERTAINING

An uncommitted host or listeners heard Ronny Musselfeller conduct the indoor pole meet at Squadron A that last Thursday in January, the Boston Garden-Arena management in Boston the next night and the Sunday afternoon broadcast of the casting set Hanover two days later. Not a few who thought they qualified in the absence of some vital visibility in the announcer's familiar voice.

Ronny Musselfeller, during his broadcasting had lacked—as it had for six miserable weeks—the stimulus of his accustomed audience. He had made it distinctive. "I'm off my oats. I'm off my oats," he had said, and pushed the thought that he was not up to snuff out of his mind. He was on his way to Maple Village now, to visit his mother, to the little town of his birth, where the first seventeen years of his life, where he knew and liked him, and made him know they liked him.

Long ago Ronny had explained Matt's kindness to Sandra in a brief note, dictated by conscience, to Lucille Baldwin—just before he began his Boston engagement.

Lucille had written: "Your mother was an artful prevaricator when we all were of course. Try to come soon, Ronny. We never have the pleasure when you are broadcasting, but hearing your voice isn't quite enough. We, your friends in Village friends, like you better than you know and we are as little like the people reading that Ronny had thought, "Why that everlasting editorial 'we'? Why can't we be in mortal fear I'll think she's personally interested in me. We haven't a lot of each other that last year in high school."

Two hours and a half after boarding the bus at Hanover, Ronny was shifting a suitcase from his mother's kitchen finishing an enormous supper, grinning proudly as he listened to his mother's quiet account of the reception the townspeople had given Lucille's and Christmas visit.

"You're something of a hero in Maple Village, Ronny," she told him with ill concealed amusement. "I can't begin to tell you the number of people who dropped in, here or at the office. Lucille was at the bottom of it, of course. She was determined to have a three-day carnival of your may."

Elliot Paul, elderly American journalist, returns to Santa Eulalia to recuperate and seclusion. The town of a hundred souls lies on the island off the Spanish coast, one of the Balearic group in the Mediterranean. He lived there for five years, until a few months after the outbreak of civil war in the islands were wrested from the Republican government of Spain by Italian troops.

Senor Paul, as he was familiarly known by the Inhabitants, found the peace he sought, grew to love the simple fisherfolk, peasants and the shepherds, and was treated similarly in their everyday life and manner with them when the civil war came, destroying an idyllic existence which had flowered for nearly a thousand years.

In "The Life and Death of a Spanish Town" he tells the story. It is a book of surprising beauty. For Elliot Paul is above all a poet, and it is also a tale of tragic pathos, when he sees it destroyed by ruthless violence and bloodshed, wondering what the final outcome may be.

The intimate, day-to-day story of a little village, typical of a large part of Spain prior to the rebellion, will give the reader a clearer insight into the tragic events which have taken place there in the past year.

"400 Million Customers" is a book which tells the truth about the present Sino-Japanese war. Carl Crow, an advertising man who has spent the last 20 years in China, has produced an interesting book. He tells of dealing with the Chinese customs, character and idiosyncrasies particularly in relation to commercial life. People who like the Ripley believe-it-or-not style will enjoy the book immensely.

MARIAN'S NEW JOB

By H. IRVING KING
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

Marian Markham, slender, rather pretty girl of 24, was, through the recommendation of a friend, offered a position in the office of Holliday & Whipple as a sort of secretary to young Mr. Holliday. She had found out now that his father had gone the way of both brokers and the broker. Marian's father had always told her that he had been the victim of the villainy of old Peter Holliday who, upon the dissolution of the firm of Holliday & Markham, had so juggled the accounts that the junior member had come out rich and the junior member poor. Marian scarcely remembered her mother, who had died when she was but two or three years old, but her father had been devoted to her father in the days of their affluence and prosperity.

Marian considered. The job was a good one and she needed the salary. She was disagreeable as would be a daily association with one of the principals in the matter, she might be, but, by taking the offered position, find out for herself if her father had been defrauded. Then what a triumph for Marian! Her employer with the evidence of his father's misdeeds and Marian would have rights.

"Too pretty to be efficient," thought Harold Holliday, when he saw his new stenographer; but as she soon proved her efficiency he changed his opinion. Senior Holliday looked rather bad, all her life, been devoted to her father in the days of his affluence and prosperity. Then what a triumph for Marian! Her employer with the evidence of his father's misdeeds and Marian would have rights.

Wireless report from the Soviet Arctic camp near the North Pole to Soviet authorities in Moscow, indicates the party of four Russian scientists is in peril because of drifting ice according to London sources who reported picking up the message. The party, living in the shadow of the pole since last May, is on an ice floe which has rapidly drifted 600 miles from the pole towards Greenland. The men who landed on ice 15 miles beyond the pole are living in tents, and the camp is shown in the upper photograph. In the lower centre is a map showing the Arctic area with an arrow indicating the direction in which they are reported drifting. Leader of the scientific group is Ivan Papanin (LEFT). You've heard all these years about "human dynamos". Well, here's actually a picture of one. It's a new device designed to show how much human effort it takes to light an electric bulb or run a waffle iron. It is a bicycle-propelled generator which can supply power to various electrical utilities. The rider is Henri Le Page, Canadian bike sprint champion, and the test was made in New York.

One of the biggest surprises in the National Hockey League this season is the remarkable change in the playing of Reg. "Red" Horner, of Toronto Maple Leafs. During past seasons he has been the regular "bad man" of the league, but this season he seems to be attending more to playing hockey and keeping away from fisticuff, high-sticking and all the other things that might bring penalties. At this early stage of the race, he is well up with the first four or five leading point-getters. Incidentally, he has only spent 16 minutes in the penalty box so far this season, yet by this time other years he had probably spent the equivalent to half a game in the "cooler."

City Workers Ask for One Hour Extra Daylight for Recreation, Back Yard Gardening and Home Improvement

Belleville Rotary Club

Favours Daylight Saving Time as beneficial to the worker, giving an hour extra daylight for Recreation, Gardening and Home Improvement.

FRED DOUGLAS, President. MacLEAN HAIG, Secretary

Belleville Kinsmen Club

Believe that the best interests of Belleville would be served by adopting Daylight Saving Time, being about the only municipality between Windsor and Montreal remaining on Standard Time during the Summer months. Give the workers a longer evening for relaxation and recreation.

NORMAN G. GARBUTT, President. WM. HURST, Secretary

Belleville Manufacturers' Association

The following manufacturers are in favor of Daylight Saving Time, in Belleville for 1938 - 39:

The Deacon Shirt Co.
Mead Johnson & Co. of Canada Ltd.
Stephens-Adamson Mfg. Co. of Canada Ltd.
Stewart-Warner Alemite Corp. of Canada Ltd.
Belleville-Sargent & Co. Ltd.
Corbin Lock Co. of Canada Ltd.
Bell Shirt Co.
Consolidated Optical Co. Ltd.
Houston Co. Ltd.
Swift Canadian Co. Limited.
Consolidated Distilleries Ltd.

H. SANDERS, President. W. B. DEACON, Sec'y.-Treas.

Belleville Retail Merchants' Association

We believe that it will be in the best interest of business in Belleville as well as tending to better health of the members of the store staffs, to adopt Daylight Saving Time for Belleville. With surrounding towns and cities on D.S.T. Belleville's isolation on Eastern Standard Time during the Summer months causes inconvenience and loss of business. This association is heartily in favor of Belleville getting in step with other municipalities in this matter.

W. J. DOYLE, Secretary. R. H. HENNESSEY, President

AAJMAA CLUB

This club as an active sponsor of outdoor sports supports Daylight Saving Time as a means of providing the workers with an additional hour of daylight each day for Recreation. We believe that the voters of Belleville irrespective of personal inclination will support the workers in their endeavour to have Daylight Saving Time observed in Belleville the same as other places.

D. J. BATCHELOR, Secretary. CLEM BOWLER, President.

Vote For Daylight Saving

ASK FOR THE BALLOT. YOU HAVE A VOTE, WHETHER TENANT OR OWNER.

PLACE X AFTER YES AS IN THE FOLLOWING:

DAYLIGHT SAVING
Voting on the following question: "Are you in favour of the adoption by Belleville of Daylight Saving Time commencing at midnight on the last Saturday in the month of May and ending at midnight on Labor Day in 1938 and the years 1938 and 1939?" Belleville, Dec. 6, 1937.	YES X
	NO

The various organizations represented on this page include the heart of the industrial life of Belleville, together with the Service Clubs—all working together for the prosperity and good welfare of this city. The members of these organizations believe that in the best interests of Belleville and the citizens generally Daylight Saving Time should be observed in the summer.

THE WORKERS' APPEAL.

The workers in factory, store and office ask all voters to mark their ballot for Daylight Saving and thus give them an hour extra daylight for Relaxation, Recreation and Home Improvement.

Many workers, young men and women have no vote on the municipal list, hence can not express their wish for Daylight Saving, but they are all in favor of it and ask the voters to mark their ballots YES and thus give them an extra hour daylight in the open in the summertime.

Belleville business men are in favor of Daylight Saving for business reasons, because Belleville has been practically alone on Standard Time, other municipalities having adopted Daylight Saving Time for the summer, causing endless confusion, inconvenience and loss.

BUSINESS LOST FROM AIRPORT.

The Dominion Airport is on Daylight Saving Time—another important reason why Belleville should be on the same time. The Airport is growing into a good-sized community and has a large volume of trade to give out. Trenton observes Daylight Saving Time to correspond with the Airport, and consequently draws much business from that source which might otherwise come to Belleville.

Whether we like Daylight Saving Time or not Belleville cannot afford to remain isolated in the summer time. Our neighbors are on D.S.T. and for business as well as other reasons Belleville should follow suit.

Belleville is out of step with other municipalities. Daylight Saving Time is observed from Windsor to Montreal with Belleville lagging an hour behind to its disadvantage. Belleville can not afford to be behind. Get in step by voting for Daylight Saving Time.

RAILWAY EMPLOYEES FAVOR D. S. T.

Canadian National Railway head office in Montreal and Toronto observed Daylight Saving Time and Belleville railway shops and offices are on "split time" to suit head offices and home conditions. Daylight Saving Time in Belleville would be welcomed by these railway workers as harmonizing the situation.

Hundreds of young men and women in factories, stores, offices, will not have an opportunity of recording their desire for Daylight Saving, not being on the municipal voters' list. They ask for an hour extra daylight in the summer for recreation. Every vote for Daylight Saving is a vote for more pleasure and better health for this rising generation, the citizens of the future. Their welfare and good health is a charge on every voter. Vote for the young people.

Canadian National Railways head offices in Montreal and Toronto observe Daylight Saving Time, and the C.N.R. railway shops and offices in Belleville adjust working time to harmonize. Canadian National Express employees observe Daylight Saving Time although train schedules remain on Standard Time.

It is too much to hope that the citizens should be unanimous on this question, but under the circumstances it is felt that citizens, even though opposed to D. S. T. personally, will vote for the common good, comply with the request of the young people without votes for an hour extra daylight for recreation; co-operate with Belleville businessmen in taking this handicap off business—and get in step generally with other municipalities on summer time. United we stand, divided we will not get anywhere.

Belleville Kiwanis Club

Supports Daylight Saving Time in the interest of workers in factory, store and office, who thus get an extra hour daylight for recreation, etc.

Y'S MEN'S CLUB

Daylight Saving Time means more sunshine for the workers in Factories, Offices, Stores; longer evenings more time for Recreation and Relaxation —Man can not live on work alone nor can women. Give the workers a break by voting for Daylight Saving Time.

LORNE McDOUGALL, President. DON RIDLEY, Secretary

The Quinte Skating & Tennis Club

Believes that Daylight Saving Time will promote better health by giving an extra hour daylight daily for recreation. All work and little play makes Jack a dull boy and Jill a dull girl. Lets' all enjoy more of God's good sunshine by joining the Daylight Savers.

IVAN SCOTT, Chairman of Board of Directors.
LILLIAN SPRACKETT, Treasurer. STEPHEN LICENCE, Secretary.

The Chamber of Commerce

BY UNANIMOUS RESOLUTION OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, ENDORSES THE PRINCIPLE OF

Daylight Saving

believing it to be in the best interest of the citizens at large as well as a means of securing greater patronage from Tourists and others who govern their movements by Daylight Saving Time.

Traffic Regulation in Ontario Improved in Past Two Years

ROOM FOR BETTERMENT

Says Hours of Work Were "Almost Disgraceful" in Motor Transport Industry

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—There is "considerable intimidation" by motor transport employers in Ontario to prevent growth of labor unions in the industry, L. G. Fabian, general representative of the Amalgamated Transport Section of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, told the Ontario Royal Transport Commission today.

Cross-examined by Arthur Roebuck, counsel for the transport workers, Fabian said hours of work were "almost disgraceful" in the motor transport industry.

Situation Chaotic

"Some operators have made every effort to provide satisfactory working conditions for their men but the greater majority have not and the situation is chaotic," he said.

Fabian said he was recently connected with the Ontario Provincial Police as special investigator of highway conditions.

There has been a great improvement in traffic regulations in Ontario during the last two years but there is great scope for more, witness said.

"Are rules and regulations well-enforced?" asked Roebuck.

"There is a fairly fair laxity in enforcement at present in connection with public commercial ve-

OLD "BLUE LAW" MADE WORKABLE

Many Held in Vermont For Carrying on Business on Sunday

Bellows Falls, Vt., Dec. 6 (AP)—The "nine" of their forefathers today weighed heavily upon the shoulders of Windham County residents.

A blue Monday found at least 200 of them caught by the old law laid down by Vermont's early settlers to ward off the "snuffing rodents" and the "devil."

Investigators yesterday scribbled down their names as they enforced a blue law banning on Sunday "any secular business or employment except works of necessity."

Here's how enforcement of the ancient statute worked:

Golf in this hilly state is a form of work. A foursome found that out when it ventured forth on a bleak course and was neatly stymied by officers who read them the blue law.

Enforcement of the law revived memories of prohibition days.

"Pust," hissed ice cream addicts to the drug store girls, "can I buy a coke here?"

Some Needed Cases

"Is it a necessity?" whispered the girls, "can you get along without it?"

"Won't eat a day unless I can get it" came the answer.

Said a physician to a soda clerk: "So I can't get a milk shake any more"—and then promptly wrote himself prescription for one and signed with a smile of satisfaction. Milk shakes became medicine.

Here and there in the county, church-goers toted guns, heeding Mayor's request that under the old law "menfolk" were required to carry guns to protect women from Indians.

Theatre managers frowned. At Kinjby shut down hit two theatres which found that the first showing was his fight against the blue law began a month ago.

Current blue law crime wave broke out when Ernest P. Berry, State's Attorney, started enforcement of the statute against Kinjry. The theatre manager's retort was a petition demanding general enforcement. Berry took heed.

CELEBRATES 100TH BIRTHDAY

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—Mrs. Catherine Rober observed her 100th birthday today. Seven of her 16 children are living. She has 12 grandchildren and 60 great grandchildren. A son, Oliver, recently celebrated his 82nd. birthday.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—A trough of low pressure has moved northward from Lake Ontario to the south Atlantic coast with relatively high pressure in the Lake region and the Northwest of the Great Lakes. A disturbance of the latter description is moving southeastward from Saskatchewan. Light to moderate snowfalls have occurred over Ontario and West Quebec also in some parts of the Prairie Provinces, and it has been unsettled over the Maritimes and Gulf with rain or snow chiefly in eastern districts.

Lake Superior—Moderate northerly winds; mostly cloudy and colder over east portion. Tuesday, fresh or strong winds; partly cloudy; probably some light snow and becoming somewhat milder.

Manitoba—Strong shifting winds; milder with some snow. Tuesday, strong northwest winds; becoming colder again with snowflurries.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Northerly winds; mostly cloudy and colder tonight and Tuesday with snowflurries.

JAPANESE TROOPS WITHIN SIGHT OF ANCIENT NANKING

Kuyung 30 Miles West of Nanking Now in Enemy's Hands

BRITISH INJURED

River Steamers and Gunboat Under British Flag Bombed

Shanghai, Dec. 6 (AP)—A vanguard of Japanese troops approached today within sight of the ancient walls of Nanking, Chiao's evacuated capital.

(Dispatches to the Tokyo newspaper Asahi said the Japanese had captured the Trakabeki gate, two miles from the Nanking wall, and that columns of smoke were visible for a great distance from fires within the city.)

A Japanese army spokesman announced the advance tonight. He declared that Nanking would be fighting within the city tomorrow.

The force, he said, carried Asia's Rising Sun banner to within three miles of Nanking. He said the army was advancing from Auyang, on the Grand Canal about 45 miles east of Nanking.

He announced also Japanese had advanced past Wuhu, Yangtze River port about 60 miles southwest of Nanking, and toward Chinkiang, place the Grand Canal and Yangtze merge about 40 miles east of Nanking.

Japanese planes, meanwhile, were reported making heavy attacks on a bridge spanning Lunghai railway street both from Nanking and Wuhu.

Japanese Deny Report.

Chinese sources reported the 32-ton Japanese gunboat Tatsuta sunk by aerial bombs on the lower Yangtze between Tungshow and Fushan. Japanese discounted the report.

A Japanese Embassy spokesman acknowledged that British consular authorities had made a telephoned report on the bombing of a British warship and two British merchantmen near Nanking at Wuhu.

Army Promotions Guided By Merit, Character, Ability

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Dec. 6 (CP)—In his own downright manner, War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha told the House of Commons today that "merit, character and ability as well as suitability for the post" are to be the guiding considerations in army promotions.

The House cheered his declaration but sought further information concerning the recent sensational changes in the army command "changes", Mr. Hore-Belisha said in replying to Arthur Greenwood, Labor, "that will take effect at the new year."

"If any further appointments are made," he added, "the House may depend upon it that merit, character and ability as well as suitability for any particular office will be the guiding consideration, regardless of youth, age or seniority. Holders will in all respects be fit and able to hold their posts under conditions of active service."

Those holding high commands outside the War Office would be selected by the same principle so that the general staff might have a maximum of freedom from administrative details.

Lindberghs Make Surprise Visit to the United States

Left States For England Two Years Ago to Seek Seclusion

VISIT BRIEF

By ROBERT D. FRICK

Englewood, N.J., Dec. 6 (AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are home from a two-year exile abroad but the guarded Morrow estate close by the Hudson River today was not the scene of any joyful welcome and how long they will stay.

The hero of American aviation and his wife Anne, who has shared many notable flights with him, slipped unheralded into New York yesterday aboard the United States liner President Harding.

They had sailed from Southampton Nov. 27 under the incognito of "Mr. and Mrs. Gregory" for their first trip to their native land since they went to Great Britain in search of the seclusion they felt they could not find here—just fifteen days short of two years ago.

Will Return Soon.

A waiting car whisked them from the Manhattan dock to the estate of Dwight Morrow, the late Lindbergh's 94-year-old mother. Only word of authoritative status concerning their plans came from a ship's officer who said: "Their visit will be very brief. They plan to return aboard immediately after Christmas."

Other than that, there was a bobbling spring of conjecture in a desert of fact; speculation that Lindbergh's trip might be a prelude to the flight of the Atlantic aviator in an effort to rebuild the lives shattered by the kidnapping and death of their child; that Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.; theories that he might have come to discuss matters connected with the expansion of American aviation; even suggestions that he might do an errand of science connected with development of the artificial heart of which he is co-inventor.

Guards Patrol Estate.

Whatever the purpose that impelled them to return, their secret was well kept. Telephone lines were at the Morrow estate, brought not (Continued On Page Six)

BODY OFFERED FOR AUTOPSY

Doctors Will Attempt to Seek Cause of Intestinal Disease

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP)—The youthful parents of 4-day-old Donald Ennesser, eleventh victim of a mysterious malady in Cook County's Hospital, offered the body of their first born today that medical science might seek the cause of the intestinal disease.

John G. Ennesser, the father, said he and his wife, Angeline, 26, thought it would help the other little babies" if doctors performed an autopsy on their child.

Dr. Herman Bundesen, president of the Board of Health, said the autopsy would be performed by Dr. William Saphir, chief pathologist of Michael Reese Hospital, and Dr. Loyd Arnold, bacteriologist of the Illinois Department of Health.

The Ennesser baby died last night as medical science marshalled its forces to save seven other infants stricken with epidemic diarrhoea.

A PROFITABLE THEFT

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Someone cracked open a packing case on a New York pier back in 1929 and stole its contents — 2,000 Chinese silver dollars.

Quints to Be Trained To Withstand Stares Like "Royal Family"

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—Callander's famous Dionne quintuplets will be trained to withstand the public stare like a "Royal Family", Dr. A. R. Dafoe, physician to the world's most noted children said early today as he paused enroute home from Montreal.

The quints, Dr. Dafoe said, will be educated to understand they are unique and to grow sensibly and unstultifying, just as children of Royal Families are trained to disregard the great public attention they attract.

"I am not going home to North Bay" after a brief visit to Montreal and Ottawa, he said as "private business", said the quints were "worth just $10,000 now and more all". "The only privacy they will ever get will be what they buy".

Dr. Dafoe said that on his recent trip to New York he had not done his Christmas shopping early, adding as far as the quints were concerned:

"Sure," he said, he had bought them presents, but he always bought them things when he was away from home. His real Christmas shopping for them "will be all in Canada."

Girl Rescued From Shark-Infested Waters in Tropics

New York, Dec. 6 (AP) — The electric current of a five-hour search for a young woman who had gone overboard in black tropical seas and her rescue from the jaws of shark-infested waters was disclosed today at the office of Miss Elsie Sterling line here.

The woman, Miss Eleanor Offut, 24, of Washington, was reported to be "severely shocked but recovering".

She was one of four persons on the freighter Lillian Luckenbach, bound for New Orleans from Los Angeles. Early Sunday Captain Gilbert Brown wireless his company that Miss Offut had fallen overboard as the ship was proceeding from north to south above Cuba.

The woman's cabin-mate, whose name was not revealed in the radio message to the bridge, crying out the alarm. The ship was stopped and powerful searchlights were switched on searchlights that swept the creamy wake.

In the churning waters they could see nothing. A life boat was lowered.

An hour passed, another ticked away, then a cry of dawn rewarded the search easier.

Finally, Captain Brown reported, the life boat spied Miss Offut, keeping afloat desperately. The woman was hoisted into the boat and dragged aboard.

The ship is due in New York on Wednesday.

Car Overturns, Burns After Crash

Marmora (Special)—A singular car accident occurred in the rock cut near Crowe River bridge at Marmora about 8 p.m. Saturday. A car driven by Harry Cole of Blairton skidded while proceeding towards Marmora and collided with Stewart Blake's car which was driven by Stanley Kerr in the delivering of goods.

The Cole named car turned over and caught fire. It was totally destroyed.

NINE ACCIDENTAL DEATHS REPORTED DURING WEEKEND

Unfavorable Weather is Contributory Cause in Three Cases

HIGHWAYS SLOPPY

Ontario Blanketed With Snow And Fog Prevailed in East

(By The Canadian Press)

Unfavorable weather that left much of Ontario blanketed with snow was blamed today as a contributory cause in three of the provincial nine accidental deaths over the week-end. Motoring was made hazardous in many sections as snow and sleet increased visibility and made highways sloppy.

Bad weather was general throughout the province. Rain and dense fog prevailed in Eastern Ontario, while the western, central, western and northern sections. And no improvement was in sight. For most of Ontario, the weekend's forecast is strong north-west winds or moderate gales with snow becoming colder by night.

Six traffic accident fatalities were in the list of dead, three of them the result of unfavorable weather. Two boys drowned when river ice broke under their weight and a man was killed in a fall from a roof. Another person was injured when two automobiles collided near Bradford on an icy highway, and a group of several accidents caused by weather.

Did Not See Pedestrian.

William Fach, 76, was killed near Kitchener when struck by an automobile. David Malcolm, the driver, said he did not see the man who was walking along a highway beside his car during a snowstorm. The son, middle-aged Reuben Fach, was notified and an inquest was taken to a Kitchener hospital.

MOTHER SAVED BY BRAVE SON

Battle Death in Car Submerged in Five Feet of Water

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—George Nixon of Selwyn and his mother, Mrs. Ellen Nixon, 70, of the covering today after a fifteen minute battle with death in the icy waters of an automobile submerged in the Otonabee River. Mrs. Nixon was found by nearby Lakefield is suffering from shock and possible concussion.

Nixon said he dove overboard when his car plunged from a bridge into five feet of water and dragged his mother through the window. He blamed blinding headlights of an approaching car for the accident.

He pulled his car too far to the right to avoid the other machine, he told police, and ran onto an unprotected section of the bridge. The car then left the highway a few miles east of Peterborough, struck a telephone pole, plunged off a bridge rail and fell nine feet to the water, landing upside down.

Shouting desperately Nixon managed to hold his mother above the water and dragged her out through the door. By that time the car was practically filled with water and they escaped just in time.

Son of Former Ukraine King Believes Monarchy to Return

Prince Danylo Meets Ukrainians in Canada.

LIKES BRITISH WAY

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—Prince Danylo Skoropadsky, 33-year-old son of the former monarch of the Ukraine who is visiting here, believes the day will come when a monarchy will be re-established in his native land along the lines of the British system of government.

"It is difficult to say how it will come about," he said when interviewed yesterday. The Ukraine is now a Socialist Republic.

Outspoken as an enemy of Communism, Prince Danylo was the guest of honor at a Ukrainian banquet last night which was attended by members of the Sudbury Anti-Communistic Association.

Return of the Hetman State depends on conditions within the Ukraine and the position on a tour of Canada. His mission was to meet Ukrainian people in Canada and encourage among them the nationalism which will ultimately bring about the return of the National State, he said.

"I am opposed to dictatorships," Prince Danylo said. "We would like as far as possible to emulate the British form of government. I am opposed to the Bolsheviks because they try to destroy a sound Ukrainian nationalism.

Japan Held Responsible For Subsequent Trouble In Shanghai Settlement

British And Americans Advised Again "Victory March"

JAPANESE WARNED

Eden Cannot Accept View Hong-Kong "in Danger"

London, Dec. 6 (AP) — Foreign Secretary Eden today told the House of Commons that Great Britain had warned Japan that last Friday's "victory march" through Shanghai's International Settlement was "provocative and uncalled for".

He said the British Ambassador in Tokyo, Sir Robert Craigie, also had been instructed to make clear British opinion that Japan "would have to take responsibility for the trouble which subsequently occurred."

(A Chinese student threw a hand grenade at 8,000 Japanese marines marching through the International Settlement in Shanghai Friday, Three Japanese soldiers and a Japanese policeman and a British Inspector were wounded.)

Foreign Secretary Eden explained both the British and United States commanders at Shanghai had informed the Japanese beforehand that the parade was contrary to their wishes and that they could not take responsibility for any incidents. Japan replied to a question on the general Oriental situation, Mr. Eden declared he could not accept the suggestion that British Far Eastern possessions like Hong-Kong "are in imminent danger".

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT ENVELOPS QUINTS

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—The Christmas spirit invaded the Dionne Nursery Sunday.

Eight bright-eyed sisters of the famous Dionne family gathered in the playroom, reluctant of the Christmas songs and seasonal music from the other side of the door.

The occasion was a visit to the quintuplets of their three elder sisters, Rose, Therese and Pauline, accompanied by their mother.

Assembled in the nursery, each youngster was presented with an instrument and with Rose and Therese taking turns as leader the group offered creditable presentations, to the delight of their mother.

The fact that Marie was a little off-key or Annette thumped a bold crescendo in the wrong place mattered little. The older trio managed to carry the rhythm. Rose, Therese and Pauline joined in the singing of the quints' favorite songs and then proceeded to teach them new ones.

It was a jolly noisome period, followed by dinner for which all feminine members of the Dionne family were seated in the nursery dining room. The quints' father remained at home with Oliva, 12.

Rose had gone over to the nursery early in the day and spent an outdoor play period with the quints, helping them pile snow on their toboggan slide and taking part in the snowball battle.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Upper air temperatures! After leaving the earth's surface the temperature decreases with increasing height. The reason is that the air, in spite of the variable climate, that the fall of temperature with height is so uniform. The rates is about one degree for every 300 feet. This almost regular decrease in temperature occurs, however, only up to certain heights, being about two miles in the winter, six or seven miles in the middle latitudes, and still lower at the poles. Above these heights, temperatures vary; and, strange to say, they are lowest over the equator. At about nine miles elevation the average temperature over the equator is 80 degrees below zero; while, over the 60th parallel, it is only 52 degrees below.

Western Canada, however.

Edward Truesdale, charged with vagrancy, pleaded not guilty, but was convicted following the confession of the accused. P. C. Thomson testified he saw Truesdale loitering in an alleyway off Pinnacle St. and when he approached the man ran away. P. C. Hopper, a motor car and arrested the accused on Front St., he added the officer. Both Chief Kidd and P. C. Thomson stated Truesdale had no visible means of livelihood.

"I had $1.32 in my purse and it is all the cash I now have right now" declared the accused man. Mr. Donnan introduced this man's criminal record also, which included two convictions of theft, one at Picton and the second at Belleville in 1935. Truesdale denied the second conviction, however.

His Worship found the accused guilty and remanded him for sentence for one week.

The local youth was convicted of theft, but restitution having been made and it being the young man's first offence, His Worship proved lenient and assessed the costs of the court, amounting to $3.50 and a six months suspended sentence. Mr. L. A. Pringle local barrister, appeared on behalf of the youth. The matter was investigated by Detective Fred Ireland.

WEST GRATEFUL FOR PROVISIONS
Saskatchewan Rural Relief Committee Chairman Sends Thanks

Rev. Dr. James Semple has received from Dr. J. W. Hedley, Regina, Saskatchewan, a letter dated the 24th of Nov. 30 in reference to the carload of provisions shipped on Sask., from Belleville, Ont., and was distributed by the local committee at its destination. We as the central committee will realize the sacrifice and energy as well as the organized effort entailed in assembling such a gift and we are anxious that a sincere message of gratitude reach you and all concerned. We trust that the recipients deserving ones have already acknowledged their gift. It is hardly possible they may not yet have had the opportunity to acknowledge it as soon as possible.

The residents of our drought area have much to be thankful for this season. The Slater Provinces have had a bumper crop and many of our people have now been better provided for than they have been for several years. We sincerely trust that the blessings of the last year such help is necessary.

Many expressions of appreciation have been received in this office. We only hope the true feeling of the people of the province who assisted in any way to make these wonderful gifts possible."

Election Highlights

Belleville this evening may count one of the lightest general municipal election votes in years, it was indicated late today by first reports from the various polling booths scattered through the city. The fact that the weather was generally anything else but "election weather" during the day, and the fact that seemingly little interest has been shown in the appointing by-vote of a Chief Magistrate and councillors, plus school trustees, during the past few weeks have all combined against the possibility of even an average-sized vote.

If you would be a candidate for aldermanic, mayoralty, or any other civic office, be prepared to work hard for the privilege of representing your city in the various capacities. Be prepared for midnight 'phone calls, for personal and intimate interviews at your home, for appearances on public platforms and speechmaking at all hours. "I've got so used to making speeches during the past few weeks that whenever I see three or four people in a crowd anywhere, I feel like taking off the overcoat and making a speech," confided one aldermanic candidate in the corridor of the city hall this morning.

Results, even when tied on strictly may disappear from the polling books. The paper and ink and pencil used by the deputy returning officers and their assistants in the booths may never find their way back to the office of the city clerk after the last ballot has been counted and the box returned, but the Bible Bible, the Book that is given each returning officer by which he may swear in his assistant is never left hardly ever—lost or misplaced and does its duty from year to year, gradually acquiring that aged and ancient look commonly attributed to those found lying handy to the prisoner's dock in police courts the nation over. "We hardly ever lose one" was the conservative report of the office of the city clerk.

The vote for Mayor, for alderman or school trustee may be a slightly unenthusiastic one today, but interest to a marked degree is being displayed in one ballot, that of Daylight Saving, it is generally observed. Proponents of the scheme and backers of Daylight Saving found little fault with today's weather, even if it did slow down the general vote. For the dark weather and the lowering clouds from which snow descended, looked upon as an omen—a good omen, "Sneaky," they agreed, "no such a day as this people are just naturally bound to vote for time to keep." Which could be very natural than marking their ballot for Daylight Saving.

In the editorial office of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer this morning preparations were being made for the handling of the additional hundreds of telephone calls from throughout the city and district which the instruments and lines which will extend into the office at business nights of the year. Not even the calls received on Dominion day or provincial election nights exceed the volume of Belleville's own municipal election day calls. The 'phone number, as in the past, will be 93. But just the day or hour will find returns be ready.

And there is variety—infinite variety and a wealth of human nature—in the calls thus received by the staff members at the busy 'phones on this night. There are the genial optimists and angry voices who want their information in a hurry; there are the slow and patient ones to whom the information and totals of votes must be relayed slowly and as patiently; there are the chatty and the not so chatty, and the conversationalists who seem to like to follow the fortunes of the respective candidates as the votes are counted, word by word. All these and the staff recognize and treat accordingly. Not the least one who, in the darker hours just before midnight has worn a bit of a chip on her face turning in.

The weather may have had a hand to do with it. Maybe even a batch of pre-Christmas bills had just been presented, but whatever it was the furnace went out last night, or breakfast was late, or the kids should have been. But to the voter who plodded along through the slush on the way to the polling booth on the day had started wrong. And this attitude of mind is reflected in other things in general was audible to the hopes by the supporters of the voter who awaited his chance to cast his vote. Even the little Scotty terrier, usually so much at home in the booth with his master, D. R. Caldwell, who spoke convincingly from 1. Thomasinians of whom was rendered by Mrs. L. R. Rundle. The church was packed to the doors with interesting services and a large number of sympathizing friends. Rev. Canon Bowles, Rev. James McAvoy, John Dowward and John McAlister.

The late Mr. Fisher is survived by his widow, Mary Florence Carrington, who survives with four young children, Allen, Carl, Lois and Jack. One brother, Clayton Fisher, Thomasburg; one half-brother, Harry Fisher, Foxboro, and one half-sister, Annie Harrison, Latta, Ont.

Accident Attributed To Slippery Pavement

At least one accident was attributed to the season's heavy snow storm when an automobile driven by Floyd Taylor, 20 years of age, skidded on the snow-covered pavement and crashed into the plate glass window of Strand early today. The front axle, fenders and headlights of the vehicle were damaged when the accident occurred.

Floyd Taylor investigated and was informed by the driver that the vehicle had suddenly skidded when he was passing an oncoming motor car, and the accident was unavoidable.

Another minor motor accident occurred at the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets early Saturday evening, but only bumper damage resulted, it was reported later after police untangled the autos.

Ralph Walmsley, Picton, complained to local authorities that the car in another motor car had sideswiped his automobile on the Trent Road and drove on without the driver stopping. "I had parked my car on the south side of the Bridge and was cleaning the windshield when another automobile approached from the west. The vehicle swerved off the side of my car and drove speedily southward," reported Mr. Walmsley to Sergeant Booth.

Twenty-five residents were afforded warm sleeping quarters at the police station over the week-end, ten on Saturday night and 12 last night.

Eldorado

Eldorado—The regular monthly meeting of the Eldorado and Union W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Chamberlain on Wednesday afternoon with thirteen members including visitors. The president, Mrs. Harvey opened the worship service with quiet music. A Christmas hymn was sung and Mrs. F. Comerford led in prayer for Missionaries and Mrs. A. Empey for Temperance. The devotional period was taken by Grace Robinson and responsive Bible reading by Mrs. Harvey.

The group leader Mrs. Robinson then took charge and opened with quiet music followed by Hymn No. 56. A story by Grace Van Dusen was read by Annie Holmes. A solo "Somebody Did a Golden Deed" by Mrs. Leslie Broad. Mrs. Harvey then gave a reading followed by a temperance reading by Mrs. Robinson. Another Christmas hymn was sung and the part of the programme concluded with prayer.

Mrs. Harvey conducted a short business period. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Miss L. Robinson, and the roll call was responded to by a Christmas verse and a white gift. The meeting closed with prayer and the next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Wm. McEwan. A dainty lunch was served and the close of the social half hour enjoyed by all. A vote of thanks was moved the hostess.

Y. P. U.

The regular weekly meeting of the Y. P. U. was held on Monday evening in Eldorado United Church with an attendance of 14. The worship service was opened by Cecil Robinson, convener of Christian Citizenship with the call to worship. The Bible lesson was read by Mrs. Geo. Palmer and Mrs. Lorenzo Walker gave the explanation of the Bible lesson. A reading "Peace League" was given by Glen Boyle. Mrs. Leslie Robinson rendered a solo and the topic "Temperance in Life—Ive your best" was well given by Mrs. Walter Moran. Prayer was offered by Miss Annie Holmes and a short business period was conducted by the president. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. It was decided that the issues in the contest put on a banquet at the close of the season. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction after which a recreation period was enjoyed under the leadership of Miss Grace Robinson.

RHEUMATIC PAINS

Take a combination of Natural Salts of the Earth

Rock in Manipur. If only we could all do that! Rheumatic pains are caused by acid in the blood. Acid is caused by poisons in the food we eat and the air we breathe. Nature has provided a combination of natural salts of the earth to fight acid. Kruschen Salts contain these six salts. Just one quarter of a teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of water or tea first thing every morning will help you to health and energy. Kruschen Salts are sold by all chemists throughout the world. Start with a bottle today. Get Kruschen Salts from your chemist. If you have any difficulty in obtaining Kruschen Salts, write Kruschen Salts, Windsor, Ontario, enclosing 60c and we will send you a bottle by return mail.

Roslin

Roslin—The regular meeting of St. Andrew's Helpers' was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White with an attendance of twenty. With the president in charge the meeting was opened with the singing of a hymn and repeating the Apostles' Creed in unison. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. J. W. McDonald who also offered prayer.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and spoken. Several items of business were dealt with and the collection was taken after which the Rev. James Douglas of Prince Edward Island, who was present, addressed the meeting.

Rev. Douglas said he was glad to be present and have the privilege of addressing the young people in this part of the province. He said he had always been interested in young people's work. He advocated the use of the Provincial program.

The speaker urged the young people to take advantage of every opportunity' they get to assist on the local programme as it was a great help to them later in life. He spoke of the way different people tear the Bible apart to suit themselves and the occasion. Instead of taking it as a complete book which is made up of chapters. He said some people make up a sermon and then search through the Bible for a text to fit it. Giving one very amusing incident as an illustration, saying that better way is to choose a text, then build up your sermon around it.

The president thanked Rev. Mr. Douglas for his splendid address. The singing of a hymn brought this part of the meeting to a close, after which the Crokinole Tournament was started for the coming season. Four tables were in play. Prize winners for the evening's highest scores were: Ladies, Mrs. Donald Hoin; gentlemen, Mr. Donald Chisholm. Later a dainty lunch was served and a social time spent.

Mrs. Wm. Weir spent Thursday with Mrs. H. Alexander.

The Young People's Union of the Roslin United Church met in the vestry on Monday evening with an attendance of thirteen. As the president and vice-president were absent the leader, Miss Blanche Reid, took charge of the meeting which was opened with hymns. The Bible lesson, taken from Psalm 103 was read in unison. Miss Marion Fargey led in prayer. Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The Roll Call was responded to by an important factor about a country. Collection was taken which amounted to 83 cents. A hymn was sung. The topic was given by Miss Kathleen Carter. Miss Whiteman gave a reading. A game was played and the meeting closed with all repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

Mrs. Ruth Duncan of Stirling was a guest at the homes of Mrs. D. Leslie and Mrs. F. Simpkins last week.

FORD offers two new cars for 1938—the Standard Ford V-8 and the De Luxe Ford V-8. They are different in appearance—but built to the same standard of mechanical excellence — on the same 112-inch wheelbase.

Because people liked our 1937 car so well, they bought more than of any other make. They liked its looks, its smooth performance, and the way it handled. We have improved on that car in the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.

But some folks wanted still more size and style, with the same fundamental Ford advantages. For them, we have designed a new De Luxe line.

The De Luxe Ford V-8 Sedans are longer with more room, larger luggage space, and finer appointments. De Luxe cars are equipped with the 85-horsepower Ford V-8 engine. They provide an added measure of motoring satisfaction at low Ford prices.

The Standard is even lower priced than the De Luxe. It is a brilliant, modern car. It has graceful new lines and well-tailored interiors. It gives you the same basic advantages of the 85-horsepower Ford V-8 engine.

Before Ford made V-type 8-cylinder engines available to every one, they were used only in expensive cars. Since then, four million Ford owners have learned the genuine enjoyment of driving an 8-cylinder car with all-round economy. The low prices of the De Luxe and Standard cars make it easy for you to step into the V-8 class.

FIT YOUR CAR TO YOUR NEEDS

With two distinct designs, two body sizes and two price ranges, you'll find a 1938 Ford car to fit your personal needs exactly. Whatever one you choose, you get time-proved Ford V-8 performance. Whatever price you pay, you get a car built soundly to serve you well. . . . That's the Ford way.

FOR LOW DELIVERED PRICES SEE YOUR LOCAL FORD DEALER

De Luxe Ford V-8 models are Coupe, Tudor, Fordor, Convertible Coupe, Club Coupe, Convertible Club Coupe, Phaeton, Convertible Sedan. Standard Ford V-8 is available in three models: Coupe, Tudor Sedan and Fordor Sedan.

Ford sells a fully equipped car at the lowest possible price. Prices on De Luxe models include twin tail lights, two windshield wipers, two sun visors, twin electric horns, cigar lighter, de luxe steering wheel, glove compartment clock and dock, chrome wheel bands, front and rear bumpers and guards, spare wheel and tire and tube, tire lock, and headlight beam indicator.

Prices on Standard models include front and rear bumpers and guards, spare wheel and tire and tube, tire lock, one tail light, one windshield wiper, one sun visor, cigar lighter, headlight beam indicator, and two horns.

WINTER

The first touch of winter, not in severe weather but in the white mantle of snow which was found lying on the landscape early today and adorning the trees and making the outlook a very fairy habitation and forest was welcomed by the youngsters who have so far this season been deprived of every semblance of winter entertainment—no skating, no snowballing, no sledding. To the merchants it brings that northern setting which is considered so essential a part of the setting for the Christmas festival. Northerners like to talk of winter winds when we speak of Christmas, even if they do not like wintry sleet or howling or raging winds.

The winter exerts a spell upon those who have ever lived in the northland. They do not forget the tinsel and the fine artistry of nature in the snowflake, the blast of the winter trumpet in a storm or the whining of the wind. It makes those somewhat materialistic think sentimentally and romantically of castles and seeds of daring and feasting in ancient halls centuries ago, and songs of minstrelsy.

Some day in the far-off future when all present generations of man will have long been gathered into dust, this northern part of the world may become warm, according to H. G. Wells in his "Outline of History," for at present the globe is coming out of the last ice age and the cold and ice according to some scientists are slowly retreating. That would end the type of winter men now enjoy but the race of men living at that future day will no doubt pursue the retreating ice king, even if it takes them close to the pole, for the northerner wants the Santa Claus aspect of things.

Meantime the season is not likely to change so as to eliminate winter. A few years ago after a spell of mild weather the country had the coldest winter on record came from the north, and in some places sent the mercury down to forty below. That was not the rule but the exception and is what happens in the economy of nature.

But most of us believe that we shall have not only springtime and harvest in the years to be, but also the winter with its cold and its snow.

THIN ICE

With the coming of winter and the first ice, children and youths and others who venture upon ice may be inviting a plunge into the water, at least a partial wetting or worse, a real disaster. The cold so far this season has not been intense and ice is thin as a result.

There is danger in the fact that severe weather has not yet appeared and hence impatience on the part of the young to get into winter games, such as skating on the bay and skating, without waiting for the assurance that the ice is sufficiently thick to bear up the skaters. Even if water is not deep there is danger of a skater or other person breaking through and getting under the ice.

Lindsay Post refers to the practice of skating on the Scugog and issues a warning. The advice the editor has offered and should be listened to. While there is no ice on the river locally, the editorial warning holds good for early skating on thin ice everywhere in this northern clime and on the river it does from time to time.

The editor says: "Already this season a number of local youths have invited disaster by donning skates and going for a glide on the thin ice of the Scugog. While the call of the smooth ice is admittedly strong especially at the beginning of the season when young folks are impatiently awaiting the opportunity to join in the pleasant sport of skating, the practice of skimming over ice on thin ice bends considerably under the weight is akin to boldly inviting the grim reaper to wield the sickle.

"Skating on the river is a practice calling for caution at any time, for even when the ice measures eight inches in thickness where the stream is slow moving, there are places where currents exist that wear away the ice to a point of danger. Unexpected cracks and air holes also provide hazards even in the coldest weather. There are places on the river where year after year the youngsters of the town have skated and played hockey with safety after the ice has frozen to a reasonable thickness.

"Just now we would issue a warning to youngsters to stay off the river. It is not safe. Parents should co-operate in avoiding tragedies by seeing their children do not risk their lives on the thin ice. Precaution should be the watchword for the next couple of weeks if needless tragedy is to be averted."

LAURENTIAN HILLS

We roamed the ancient hills on summer days;
Above us canopied the turquoise sky
With musing-cloud ships softly drifting by
And sometimes stooping with a soft caress
To the great hills, in all their loveliness.
Here, vagrant airs their golden magic wield
On wooded ways and on each verdant field.
The wild-flowers bow beside the wayside shrine,—
Through leafy spaces, church-spires rise, and gleam
Amongst the purple-tinted hills; we dream
And thrill with fine emotions, unexplained.
Something I know the hill-folk must have gained
From the eternal beauty, the sublime
Majestic splendour, Undisturbed, O Time,
By thee! Serene, they contemplating stand,
Profoundly silent, gazing long upon
The meditating waters far below,
Upon whose bosom is the mirrored sky
Of this God-given beauty. Mighty hills,
So incomparable in majesty
All-gracious in such loveliness to me,
Who knew but whispers of the dreaming lake.
Found in my soul, all new-born wonder's wake,—
Emotion, love and peace; something that thrills
At your grand memory, Laurentian Hills!
Toronto. —Aileen Ward.

CHORLEY PARK, OFFICIAL HOME OF THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR of Ontario is to be closed as the result of a pre-election promise. There does not seem to be any enthusiastic approval of this peculiar stop, in fact quite a chorus of disapproval has gone up. Folks, even plain folk like us on the back concessions, or on the front concessions for that matter, like to dress up for suitable occasions, and while we may depreciate swank and ask that in public places, secretly we're a bit proud of the ability of those whom we have selected, or elected to fill the Seats of the Mighty that they can fill the part in any company with honour to themselves and credit to the folks back home.

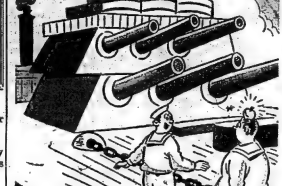
THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION DOLLARS is the estimate annual payroll of The Canadian National Railway in Belleville for the railway folks who have their residence here which means a population of 2,200. Quite an industry which any city would be proud to possess.

x x x



CHEESE GOLD THROUGH BELLEVILLE CHEESE BOARD THIS YEAR will exceed in value one million dollars. Other cheese boards in the district including Kingston, Napanee, Madoc and Campbellford will contribute at least two million more and thus to the mutual prosperity of Belleville Cheese District. Belleville also boasts a railway industry which pays out annual three-quarters of a million dollars in wages. Prince Edward County canners in bushels shipped to factories in other parts of the province and the canning crop was short. Peas, beans, corn, pumpkin, were canned in large quantities. Thirty-six million cans were shipped. The tomato crop was large and splendid quality in Prince Edward, amounting to one and a half million bushels. All available help was commandeered to harvest and can the crop. The canning industry, together with other agricultural production in Hastings and Prince Edward is the backbone of prosperity for many and should make this the best Christmas season the merchants have enjoyed for many a year.

MANY YOUNG MEN ARE BEING TAUGHT FORESTRY by Government experts, right on the ground, gaining health and skill and knowledge and getting paid for learning. These young men are taken from relief rolls and a great saving in dollars was made, beside the good accomplished in making better citizenship. Farm instruction has also proved successful, 46,000 men being placed in training with farmers last season. Of the 46,000 21,000 decided to remain on the farms permanently, rather than drift back to the cities and go on relief. This unemployment project has materially reduced the cost of relief from $10,000,000 to $5,000,000.

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

"Now just stand there a minute!"

Defenders of the Air

Every once in a while big birds, the kind with feathers, get the idea that the air belongs exclusively to them and dispute the presence of man-made wings. Such encounters means one less bird with warlike intentions.

Chicken hawks and eagles are the only warriors who set out with blood in their eyes for combat. We can see them at great distances and generally manage to avoid them," writes Mabel A. Williams in the New York World Telegram.

Buzzards, ducks and geese wander into collisions with aircraft because they are scared or just dumb.

"Several friends of mine flying single-seaters have been attacked by big birds that remained eagles. And not only would the hostile bundle of feathers attack once, but he would come back time and again for another go at the plane."

Big birds can do a lot of damage to fabric covered wings. Collecting forcefully against metal wings they can leave sizable dents. But a bird of any size can play havoc with a propeller when it is turning rapidly. Dick Atcherley of the British Royal Air Force, had the hard luck of colliding with a seagull while travelling about 180 miles an hour in his Schneider Cup racer. The gull struck the tip of a metal pontoon and tore a big hole in it.

From Canada's airline pilots have trouble with big birds which do not seem familiar with the Buzzards of Air Commerce and the road. By strange coincidence, the birds always strike the windshield in front of the pilots. Shatterproof though the glass is, the shock usually cracks a big hole in the windshield and the cockpit is clouded with feathers and spare parts of the dismembered bird.

"To my knowledge," continues Major William, "there's only been one case where a big bird deliberately attacked an air liner. In that instance the pilot had spied the bird at a distance. It appeared to be flying straight on. It was about 1,000 feet higher than the transport and about half a mile ahead. Suddenly the bird folded its wings and started in a steep dive at the oncoming pilot. The pilots saw it coming and throttled the engines and nosed down to avoid collision. The maneuvre caused the crazy bird to dive all the steeper. The two flew by. And then the crash. The eagle hit the left half of the windshield and tore a hole in the shatterproof glass with the sound of a pistol shot."

Alaskan Exploration

Prying-thatched Joseph Yolo recalled one of the most forest ranges with more than a mile of travel for every one of the 13,000-odd feet of 35-millimeter film he shot of wild animals, birds and fish.

Yolo was going home to Yakima, Wash., for "Xmas" when taken for the Alaska Game Commission and the Pan Forest Service. After the film was edited and descriptive matter completed, it was classified for 'shorts' and educational features.

Last May, after he had photographed Mount Olympus for the Forest Service, he was given two days' notice that he was to go to Alaska for the Federal Government.

The work, and in the ensuing six months endured innumerable hardships. Bad weather limited the shooting "time. He scaled high peaks for unusual shots and made 2,000 miles across the Gulf of Alaska.

The trip cost $10,000, or almost a dollar per foot of film.

Yolo photographed grizzly bears by camp on Admiralty and Chichagof Islands.

North of Circle on the Yukon River, Yolo and Indian hunters awaiting the migrating herds of caribou.

"The caribou are mysterious animals" Yolo said. "They appear and vanish—just as though you were rubbing an Aladdin's lamp. You can see them coming over a far-away mountain in a long safety."

Worries of Wealth

Doris Duke Cromwell, heiress to the Duke tobacco fortune, must be feeling a bit confused these days, what with Christmas coming on and a shopping list to be worked out. Mrs. Cromwell was 25 the other day and automatically came into possession of one-ninth of the Duke millions.

But the trouble is nobody seems to know how many millions there are for her, and the best estimate the Chicago Daily News has been able to secure is from $40 to fifty-ten. Apparently, says the News, Mrs. Cromwell won't know for sure "until the wrangling up in the courts is over and the man with the shovel comes to call. Where do you want it, lady?"

And that makes it pretty tough. A poor girl going out to buy Christmas presents and not knowing whether she has eighteen millions or only ten! Must she get her husband a good book, or can she afford that gorgeous dressing gown and a case of matched pipes? Can she send Aunt Maria, a ticket for a Mediterranean cruise, or must Aunt Maria be content with a real hand-painted vase? Because after all, the difference between eighteen and ten is eight millions in fact and eight millions can do a good deal of Christmas shopping.

We should like to contribute some sort of suggestion to the problem but, not getting Mrs. Cromwell down, but it seems beyond us. It would probably be impudent for her to proceed on the assumption that the difference between eighteen and ten is apt eighteen when it turned out there were only ten as well. Think of the embarrassment of having bills for eight millions coming in and having to get on the phone with which to meet them—no money for the furnace and no fuel for the kitchen. But if she spends lan and it turns out to be eighteen there's a nice little nest-egg left for her old age and something approaching a certainty that she never will have to go on relief.— Ottawa Journal.

straight line. For seven days thousands and thousands of them fled by our location. One herd of at least 15,000 was about to pass a certain point."

Yolo and the Indian tribes gathered where they knew the caribou will cross a river. He pointed out that it is against the law to shoot the animals while they are swimming, but Yolo was not to be denied. He shoot the animals on either shore and carry his bow their winter meat in the boats.

On the Kenai Peninsula he found what may well be the largest moose in the world; Kermit Roosevelt, a French count, a Polish count, a New York toy manufacturer and many millionaires.

He used a 13-inch telephoto lens mounted on his camera and his pictures are the finest in close-up sequences. In his 12,000 miles of travel he never encountered a bear. Two armed guides, however, accompanied him because, he explained, they were "good protection against bear protection."

Yolo photographed sheep in their habitats on Mount McKinley. There were bands of as many as 100 ramming each.

"Sheep are hard to approach because their vision is equivalent to six-power field glasses. A lookout from the highest point on the range is always posted. When they lie down, they form a circle with their noses pointed in all directions—assuring safety."

THE OPEN FIRE

In his day when science has put so many menial tabooe on us, wearing that foods we liked did all sorth of things to the system: that our hearts were tricky and had to be watched, and that perchance rotted in every corner, it is gratifying to note that there is still some respect for human frailty. The men of learning had to stumble somewhere and concede a point. In England the conquering hero has taken to the open fireplace.

Of course it is not a big concession, as anybody who has had experience with English central heating and open fireplaces will be back of it, would be quick to point out. But Lord Horder, noted physician, has let his heart rule his scientific head, and it is a gratifying phenomenon. He has "taken to the open fireplace," is his dictum. "I know all the risks and disadvantages, about 80 per cent. of the heat going up the chimney, about the smoky room. But I do not want to see the home deprived of its cheerfulness, its beauty and its influence, well-founded in tradition-al affection." He went on to speak of synthetic heating, of "mechanised flickers in living rooms that make like coal fires, but somehow look cheerful by comparison."

"The open fire is the most tolerable third party," said Thoreau. "Heap logs upon it, the blaze leaps merrily," said Browning's verdict. The crackling fire, like a good many similar things, is a big help in the windshield and the cockpit is clouded with feathers and spare parts of the dismembered bird.

"To my knowledge," continues Major William, "there's only been one case where a big bird deliberately attacked an air liner. In that instance the pilot had spied the bird at a distance. It appeared to be flying straight on. It was about 1,000 feet higher than the transport and about half a mile ahead. Suddenly the bird folded its wings and started in a steep dive at the oncoming pilot. The pilots saw it coming and throttled the engines and nosed down to avoid collision. The maneuvre caused the crazy bird to dive all the steeper. The two flew by. And then the crash. The eagle hit the left half of the windshield and tore a hole in the shatterproof glass with the sound of a pistol shot."

PIPES OF LIBERTY

One of the last strongholds of man's pristine independence is his choice of a pipe. His self-reliance in the choice of a pipe. His suit may be dictated by fashion, his tie by the mode, his hat by custom, even his umbrella—by the dominant female, but his pipe is his own. It is the sentiment when he first appraises its virtues to the last hard moment when with the bowl or fractured stem, it is laid aside. Of cajune, pipes, the supplies, the accessories, are here with-him success.

Horatio Bottomley Actor

Another recent news item has attracted my attention, but it relates to matters of pleasanter interest than the late Horatio Bottomley, who was himself no mean actor and a master of it. It seems that St Dunstley's ashes, which for some years reposed in an urn on a shelf in one of the latter's establishment, have at last been scattered over the Sussex Downs, where he at one time owned a small estate. This act was in accordance with the dead man's wishes.

One day when lunching at Romano's on the Strand, not very long after Bottomley's release from prison, I saw from my station at a little table near the door drinking champagne with extreme freely, as was his custom in happier days. He still appeared to be an extremely prosperous person, according to stage a sensational "come-back," but the old confidence was gone. Many of his backers had become wary, I was then reminded of Bottomley's earlier career—financier, sportsman, orator, politician and proprietor of the Sunday Journal, in all which capacities he attained prominence and he made considerable use of his nearances as his own advocate in the law courts. Yet he was a man of little if any education.

Horatio was also something of a wit, as the following story, related in his "best days," which were probably no better than they had fallen Bottomley knew everything on the turf. One famous follower of the sport of kings was in the habit of quis of Cholmondeley, known to his intimates as "Rock," because prior to succeeding to his grandfather's dukedom he had been the Earl of Rocksavage. I remember him well and how he was known always chewing an old fashioned quill toothpick which as other men chew an urn on a shelf in Cholmondeley on the accession of King Edward VII in 1901 became Lord High Chamberlain. The then Clerk to the Privy Council, Sir Almeric Fitzroy, is said upon one spring there was much anxiety in Court circles as to whether, upon the usual occasion should his His Majesty hand without removing the quill toothpick.

One Horatio in his political career, after one of his speeches at a Cheshire election, found himself in the vicinity of Cholmondeley Castle. He remembered his racecourse acquaintance with its noble owner, and, being a guest of many days, and I have no doubt they still connect it with the present British Ambassador to the Commonwealth in Montreal Gazette.

Kitchenette Farming

To future yearners for the good old farm going back home will mean merely a return to the old front door to the apartment kitchenette, the "suburban garden" and the "city slicker" going the estimated measure of popularity.

This is a task of water to which are added all the minerals needed to appeal to the appetite of the soil crop. It promises to result in the introduction of truck farming into the kitchen of the flat.

And who will deny that the "suburban garden" will be a thing of joy to the little dish gardens the arty girls used to be keen about a few years ago? radio top wherein grew a seedy grape-fruit sprout or baby cactus with colored stones, bits of moss and maybe a mirror to give effect of a tropical background!

You see, the "nutrient tank" idea is so much more serious than onto plain gardening. And talk about domestic economy! Just think of the budgetary savings to be derived from this tank-war on the high price of spinach!—Sarnia Observer.

"Flannel Foot" Gone

It is said on the authority of Scotland Yard that Sir Bernard Henry Williams, and we learn he was sentenced to prison for five years for burglary.

And Henry Williams was the famous "flannel-foot" who had been playing with Scotland Yard for a quarter of a century and more before he was be caught. Just how the police of Old London are certain that Henry was the "flannel-foot" is not stated.

Henry was a good many other, wise law-abiding people in London, who will feel a bit of regret that Henry has "gone west." who has also has furnished Londoners with a deal of free entertainment. He never did pull a very large job in his world of thieves, but he was attacked or injured people, but he was remarkably clever. So clever that he was the envy of all the old custom to telephone Scotland Yard that burglary was afoot. Henry returned to the city and was intending to start operations once more when the police arrived. He said he has even called to tell police where he was going to operate on the burg. One famous follower of the sport of kings was in the habit of

When Bossy's Sick

The Examiner received in yesterday's mail a peculiar request, and it came from a man who wanted to know how to tell when a cow's sick with a cow when the critter was sick. We answered the letter advising that he should do a little bit of reading because there are some good books published, and he suggested that he should call in a veterinary surgeon rather than keep on wondering what was the matter with the animal.

Getting a veterinary surgeon is more than it used to be. It can be accomplished in so much less time due to the modern use of the telephone, good roads and cars. On the Tenth Concession it used to take a good many hours. It would be necessary to drive to the village, a miles off and then to find the veterinary. If he was out on another call he would have to wait, but it was generally a good many hours between the start and finish of the proceedings.

Generally some of the neighbors would come over when a cow was ailing. We can recall a cow that looked all right the night before. She seemed all set for the dark hours and was enjoying the cud just like a contented cow should do. By morning the cow wouldn't get up and she didn't want to eat and didn't want to be milked. A cow is different to a human being. She can't say anything and herself. Can't tell whether she has a sore throat or indigestion, or something else coming on. May be colic, but the cow can't say so.

Hereafter was fairly good at doctoring cows, and at times he used to have a great liking for half a pint of raw oil. Or it may have been an-entire pint. He always wanted to know whether she had wet her cud and in that case he'd be inclined to give about a second piece of fat pork. Whether those remedies were good we do not know, but after a long conference of grandfather and and the neighbors always seemed strongly inclined to do something about it and then an effort was made to get the cow over to a stall which was well boxed in and where there would not be much room to kick. We don't know that any person knew exactly what to do, but each and every one had some idea that the hired man knew more than the rest. Possibly more and more every today than they did then. We hope so. But one thing will be exactly the same today as it was on the Tenth Concession—the cow that is sick and can't get up can't give a person much assistance in trying to find out what's wrong with her.—Peterborough Examiner.

Celebrate 25th Anniversary Of Wedding

On Saturday evening, Nov. 27th, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Huff, Tyendinaga, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary at the home of Mrs. Huff's nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. John Craig, Wellington. Friends remembering the event gathered for the happy occasion. The living room was beautifully decorated with white bells and pink streamers. During the evening the following address was read:

Mr. and Mrs. J. Huff,—

Our Friends,—

Your many friends and neighbors of this community have learned with a great deal of interest and pleasure that tomorrow is the twenty-fifth anniversary of your happy and united wedding day. No doubt as you look back over those twenty-five years they have seemed to you to have passed by like a dream of happy inter-chenery of love and helpfulness to each other so that the experience of those years has served to deepen and strengthen the Love, Loyalty and Ideals that made the happy event possible.

There are two possessions which every man must secure if he is to be happy in life. The domestic life which surrounds him at home and the friendship which shelters him outside.

It has been a source of great satisfaction to us to know you as friends and neighbors. As a friend and neighbor we have found you both staunch and true, ever ready to lend a helping hand at any time of need, and in time of sickness or sorrow, you could never do too much. We have always found you ready with your liberal gifts for every good cause and your ever ready with us in every joy or sorrow, which we have shared along the path of life. Such friendships are hard to break and long may the close relationship which we have and we ask you to accept this gift, given not for its worth but as a kindly token of friendship which can never be severed.

Also we wish to express our united wishes that the next twenty-five years may be radiant with God's richest blessings upon you both.

When I think of friends who are faithful,
When I think of friends who are true,
When I think of friends who are worthwhile,
And love loyal through and through;
When I think of friends I am glad for
Whether skies are gray or blue
When I thinks of friends like this,
Well,
Then I will always think of you.

Mr. and Mrs. Huff were presented with a lovely floor lamp, Mr. and Mrs. Huff's nephew and niece, Mr. Gordon Craig and Mrs. Gordon Craig, gave them a lovely electric toaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Huff made suitable replies thanking their friends for their kindness. Later in the evening a grand wedding banquet was served. A lovely three storey wedding cake centred the table.

Rev. Mr. Pepper acted as toastmaster during the banquet hour. The rest of the evening was spent in singing and music.

Signed on behalf of your neighbors and friends,

Mrs. Harry Murphy, Mrs. Frank Dickinson, Red. Hoe of Tyendinaga.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"The Bride Wore Red"

Joan Crawford again demonstrates her superb artistry in "The Bride Wore Red," coming to the Belle Theatre tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday, matinee daily.

With the lovely star are her distinguished actor-husband Robert Young and Robert Young in romantic competition. Others in the cast whose performances are noteworthy are Reginald Owen and Billie Burke, Lynne Carver, George Zucco and Dickie Moore.

The story describes the dramatic adventures of a charming girl who rose from poverty to wealth and then gained spiritual riches in love. It is, of course, Cinderella up-to-date, but this one is dated every night in the modern manner. Miss Crawford handles the part with finesse.

The director was Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's only woman megaphone-ist, and as her first achievement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer it becomes at once a proof of her former ability and an assurance of her future success.

Settings for "The Bride Wore Red" offer unusual scenic effects. The gay night life of Trieste, a cosmopolitan waterfront brings a new and invigorating locale to the screen. In contrast, much of the action was filmed in the high Sierras, 10,000 feet up among snow-capped peaks and the June lake district where the company was on location several weeks. World travelers compare the Sierras favorably with the Austrian Tyrol for majestic mountain scenery. Gowns by Adrian have a European flair. Many are startlingly different, featuring the influence of colorful peasant costumes.

Miss Crawford appears in one of the most startling creations ever fashioned even for screen purposes. It is a gown of red beads weighting, it is related, all of thirty pounds.

Nailen Arwood

Robert Benchley promises to arouse a slumber-drenched nation in his sequel to "How to Sleep," which is announced for presentation on the same program under the title of "How to Start the Day."

The writer - actor - commentator proffers many methods for getting up in the morning, using himself as subject for the lectures.

The Belle News of the Day with its up to the minute events garnered the world over is announced for presentation on the same program.

"Varsity Show" Funny

"Varsity Show," a musical comedy along altogether new lines, and possessed of a sparkling cast, will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times. Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians are the top-liners in this melodious, laughable, fast-paced tale of college life, featuring Dick Powell, Ted Healey, Priscilla Lane, Waller Catlett and Buck and Bubbles. A very interesting News reel precedes the feature.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Where's There's a Will"

The riotous adventures of an ad-dle-pated prodigal whose students involve him in the greatest crime of the century—the theft of the Mona Lisa—"Where's There's a Will" now playing the Capitol as a first run hit, with Will Hay starred, and featuring the beautiful Thelma screen, Lilli Palmer.

The man, Will Hay, famous for just that sort of role is wandering as an amazingly delightful comedy style and personality. He's a bit of combination Buster Keaton and Horton, if you can imagine that combination, and he can be hysterically funny.

In "Where There's a Will", he plays Dr. Twist, headmaster of a school for boys—the most engaging set of schoolboys you have ever set your eyes on. These young rascals win the National Examination in French by a trick, and are given a trip to Paris in reward.

In Paris, Dr. Twist is "vamped" by Yvette (played by Lilli Palmer), who is really the decoy for a gang of crooks who plan to steal the famous Mona Lisa from the Louvre. With the innocent help of the boys, the plan succeeds, Dr. Twist walking out with the original of the picture, which is sold to the gallery attendants think is a copy.

The boys learn of the plot, and repentant manage to smuggle an exciting story in place of the one Dr. Twist has. And it is this copy which is turned over to the crooks. Developments from that point on are fast and furious, but eventually the real Mona Lisa is restored to the authorities, and Dr. Twist gets the credit and the reward—neither of which he earned.

Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur make Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur are starred in "History is Made at Night" now playing as a smash revival on the same program.

The smart, fast-paced romance casts Boyer in a really new type of role as Paul Dumond, dashing man-about-town and the most popular head waiter on the Continent, while Jean Arthur is seen as a lovely New York mannequin. They meet in Paris under thrilling circumstances. The pair become involved in a gay, ultra-modern romance that carries them from France to America against a series of stunning, ultra-modern settings, including a mock honeymoon and the smartest restaurants of New York and Paris. Leo Carillo and Colin Clive are featured in the supporting cast.

Tweed

TWEED — The ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held a most successful sale of useful articles and candy on Wednesday afternoon in the basement of the church. Thrifty buyers found many articles to suit their attention. The church was tastefully decorated and the ladies received many well-merited compliments on the excellence of their supper.

Mr. George Lofthouse, for some months employed by the Gordon Steel Works, has resigned from his position and returned to Oshawa. During his stay here he was secretary of the United Church Sunday School and was active in Young People's Work. His decision to leave Tweed has caused regret on all sides.

Word has been received here that Stanley O'Keefe, a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Keefe, St. Catharines, is seriously ill with pneumonia. Stanley recently has spent left on an extended trip to Florida and South America. They have been advised of their son's condition.

William F. Kinlin of Tweed, local agent for the Canadian Life Insurance Co., has the honor of being the leading insurance salesman of the province in volume of business done during the month of November. He also enjoys the distinction of being probably the youngest agent in the province.

Mr. Grant Shorey has left for Montreal where he has accepted a position.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ketcheson and daughters Lois and Barbara Ann spent the past few days in Guelph as guests of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Clare at Homewood Sanitarium. Miss Lois Ketcheson, daughter, Elizabeth, at McDonald College.

Mrs. Frank Meyers of Sulphide is making favorable progress following her recent operation at Belleville General Hospital. She is spending some days with her sister, Mrs. Wm. Birdie, in Belleville.

Mr. George Allen Kingston is a candidate for alderman of Ward Two, in Toronto. He is a brother of Mr. J. W. Kingston of Tweed.

The Senior Girls' Room of the W. A. of St. James' Anglican Church held their November meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Tufts. Miss Laura Thompson presided. Rev. Smayne conducted the opening exercises. Miss Woodcock gave a resume of the first two chapters of the new Study Book. Several contests were held during the social hour which followed. The winners were Laura Thompson, Miss Wendt, Miss Bridge Ward and Stanley Tufts.

Belleville United Church. W. M. S. held their regular meeting for the election of officers. Rev. H. B. Herington had charge. The following officers were elected for 1938:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. H. B. Herrington
Pres.—Mrs. Murray Grills

Marmora

Marmora — Following the regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion held in the Legion room on Thursday evening, members together with members of the legion-aires, repaired to the home of the President, Mrs. Percy Gray, to present her with a dainty set of chinaware and to honor Comrade Gray also with a gift in commemoration of their 30th wedding anniversary which occurred on the day previous. Capt. Percy Gray, who was overseas at the time with the rank of sergeant, was married on Dec. 1st, 1917 to Elsie Rundle of London. They were married in that city. Since his discharge from the army he has been in turn Provincial Constable and Village Constable, holding the latter position at the present time.

A pleasant evening was spent by all who participated in the congratulatory event.

Mrs. P. Bramley is visiting relatives in Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dicken of Deseronto, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Sabine over Sunday.

Miss Rose Sharp is spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. (Dr.) M. C. Feeney at Elgin.

Mrs. Jean A. B. Caldwell, W. J. Cottrell and Norman Smith, attended the Hastings Deanery Sunday School Convention in Stirling on Thursday evening.

At the regular meeting of the Marmora Juvenile Orange Lodge No. 34 held on Friday evening, the principal officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

Worthy Chairman, Doris Hipson; Worthy Vice President, William Hipson; Chaplain, Ralph Green; Secretary, Clarence Holland; Treasurer, Grace Scott; 1st Standard Bearer, Ernest Gordon; 2nd Standard Bearer, Doris Bedore.

Stirling Institute Sponsors Mother and Daughter Banquet

Stirling—The Stirling Branch of the Ontario Women's Institute were hosts at the excellent Mother and Daughter Banquet in the Stirling Community Building on Wednesday afternoon. Members of five neighboring branches were present on invitation to this enjoyable event. There has come to be one of the Community's leading social events. The girls who took part in the 1937 program—Dressing Up Among Ornaments—Dressing Up Closet Up to Date" were especially honored. Mrs. A. Chalmers presided over the meeting and the guest speaker was Miss B. Lucille Bridges, Director of Home Economics of Kemptville Agricultural School.

Mrs. W. C. West acted as toastmistress and in addition to proposing the toast to the Queen at the opening of the program welcomed the guests in a fine address. The toast to the Institutes was proposed by Mrs. John Kane of River View Branch and responded to by Mrs. Emma Rainie of Wellman's Mills Branch. An interesting demonstration in "The Clothes Closet Up-to-Date" was presented by Misses Lillian Fielder and Phyllis Bradshaw of Hildorado. The next number was a pleasing vocal solo by Miss Irene Bronsdon of Springside Institute with Mrs. George Connors at the piano.

Miss B. Lucille Bridges

The guest speaker of the day, Miss B. Lucille Bridges, Director of Home Economics at the Kemptville Agricultural School delivered an instructive address bating her thoughts on the theme of "Home Economics and Rural Life". The home then in its present unfortunate state must come to its highest form of perfection in our rural areas, and the mother and daughter will have a greater a part our home plays in the general scheme of life in the farm than the home plays say, in the city. Miss Bridges is of the opinion that the rural housewarmer has a bigger task than any of her sisters in the city. Many of days gone by were home Economic Training Schools for the girls of the home. Mother taught her daughters to cook, to sew, to darn, to garden and to be taught her girls. All that is changed and it is believed for the better. Mother and daughter have a chance to learn together, which is not usually the case. Mother and daughter relationship as could be the best together if they learn the new is the much happier relationship for the mother and the daughter who just can't do anything right.

Let us consider sp...ings for the home. Dr. Leid, Superintendent of American Home Economics Association, says that the home should be mechanically convenient, physically, healthful, socially wholesome and culturally satisfying, socially responsible, spiritually inspiring and financially facilitating.

The efficiency expert has gone a long way in speeding up production and reducing fatigue in the home but there is room along in our home with little thought for energy and fatigue. Many women have been most interested in the saving of energy in doing their housework. Then they heard from Dr. Lillian Gilbreth. At a young woman married Frank Gilbreth also a young engineer. They both kept on in their professional fields until they decided to become an efficiency expert and then they worked together on time methods of doing the household tasks. Gilbreth had fourteen children and Mrs. Gilbreth had been designing simplification of kitchens in which she has cut down eighty per cent of useless motion. She advocates a long narrow kitchen just space enough to reach without walking.

A vocal solo offered by Miss Rita Carlisle of Carmel with Miss A. Fryer at the piano was followed by a period of Community singing with Miss Ernestine Fryer at the piano.

Prizes Presented

The presentation of prizes in product competition was made by Mrs. J. W. Wilson in the following order: First, Miss Lillian Pigden with 448 points, six salad forks; second, Miss E. Badgley, six salad forks; Junior girls, Margaret Pigden and Florence McFataine, colored dishes; "Clothes Closet, Up-to-date", Miss Lillian Pigden made 48 points but could be awarded two prizes. First, Laura Snider of Bridge Branch; 2nd, Florence Walker, Elgorado; 5 silver spoons; Junior 1st, Doris Pigden, 2nd, Phyllis Bradshaw. Selectivity; cutting schools. Following a brief address by Mrs. C. Holmes the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Annual Congregational Banquet of St. Andrew's Church, West Huntingdon.

Missionary Monthly—Mrs. L. M. Hall.

Literature—Mrs. S. F. Hagerman.

Press Reporter—Leaders of each Group.

Mission Band Supt.—Mrs. Warren.

Mission Band Asst.—Mrs. May.

Strangers' Sec. Com.—Mrs. Waddell.

A vote of thanks was given the nominating committee, also the retiring officers.

Meeting closed with hymn and prayer.

Curb Change In Family's Feelings

Growing Child Offers Problem That May Mix Love And Hate

By Lisa Grenelle

"I don't blame my sister for neglecting her children," a woman told me one day. "After all, what do these devoted, self-sacrificing mothers get in the end? The cold shoulder. Almost all children, as soon as they're grown, turn against their parents."

Do they?

And how about parents? Do they never turn against their children as soon as they become adult, or semi-adult, personalities with a few independent ideas of their own?

Certainly, whenever the faith fails it is tragic and much too common. —the turning, the loss of love. But with this it occurs in so many families when the children begin growing up.

Whose fault is it? Everybody's. To relinquish, to let grow, to be glad is a hard and painful business. It takes generosity and courage, and it takes honesty, which is perhaps the hardest of all.

That children, in their teens don't seem to care for their parents any more nowadays seems to be the common verdict.

They Still Care?

But, do they? Parents care for their children in their teens as they cared for them at six and seven? Why, they do, of course. But there is a sharper, almost a vicious edge to them. There is a time when they address them that cannot help but wound. There is a time when they address them that cannot help but wound. There is a time when children are not affectionate as of yore, you say? Are the parents? Undoubtedly! Jessie and Janie no longer want to be hugged and kissed as they did when they were little, but there are other ways of showing affection and friendliness—and, mother, there is a few sympathetic words.

What the situation may be does largely to the vanity of parents. Grown children make one feel old. "I'm not old," one may say, but feel old. We resent it, and the children know we resent it.

Then, on the other side, the children feel that parents resent their signs of impatience, and they withdraw stacks to freedom.

What can be done about it?

Parents who are brave enough and honest enough can face the problem fully. They admit frankly, at least to themselves, their own shortcomings and faults. They can put away mourning for lost youth, for their children's dependent babyhood, and devote all their energies to facing the new adventure.

They must realize that a new child you have to deal with, even though the same child, is on each new stage of growth a child a different problem, requiring a different but equally wise, line of approach. And Jimmie and Janie will still falter your lead, and give back friendliness for friendliness, co-operation for co-operation.

Tested Recipes

APPLE SALADS

Whether fresh, dried, evaporated or canned the apple is a wholesome food, easily prepared, attractive and available at all times. There is no waste in a good apple. Due to the large amount of pectin contained in apple juice, it may be used in other fruits to give a consistency to jams and marmalade, and even the parings and the cores of apples may be utilized for jelly. The following recipes are taken from the booklet "Canadian Grown Apples," issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. This bulletin may be obtained from the Publicity Extension Branch of the Department at Ottawa free on request.

BAKED APPLE SALAD

Bake Canadian-grown apples until tender. Stuff the centres with nuts and sugar and serve with salad dressing or whipped cream.

APPLE SALAD

Cut in dice half a pound of cold veal or pork and two large Canadian-grown apples. Add two chopped pickles, one tablespoon of olives, one tablespoon of vinegar, salt and pepper to taste, and mix with mayonnaise dressing.

RED APPLE SALAD

Scoop out the centres of bright red Canadian-grown apples so as to make them into cups. Put them into water containing a little lemon juice until ready to be filled. Mix equal parts of the apple pulp with celery, nuts and cream dressing. Fill the apple cups. Garnish and serve on lettuce leaves.

BRAZILIAN SALAD

Remove skins and seeds from white grapes and cut in halves lengthwise. Add an equal quantity of Canadian-grown apples pared, cored, and cut in small pieces. Add shredded fresh pineapple and celery cut in small pieces. Then mix with cream or mayonnaise dressing.

CREAM DRESSING

Yolks of 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1-3 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon mustard, pepper, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 2 tablespoons butter, cream, 1 cup cream, whipped until thick. Heat eggs, add vinegar slowly sugar, butter and mustard. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until thick. Remove from heat. Beat in whipped cream just before serving.

Picton Kiwanis Club May Be Disbanded

Lack of Interest Given as Reason For Possible Dissolution

Picton—Lack of interest and membership was given as the cause of the possible dissolution of the Picton Kiwanis Club at the first meeting of the club held recently in the Prince Edward county town. Fifteen members were present to discuss their interest in the club by joining at a canvass to be taken shortly after new year's and the end of the club is in sight, the club was advised, and even the club has discontinued its regular meetings indefinitely.

The charter will not be surrendered immediately, President Blakely stated to the Picton Gazette, although that was a likelihood at the first of the year unless new life was found. Correspondence and programs from high officials of Kiwanis International were read at the meeting and offering to assist in a new membership drive, but none of the members present at the meeting.

Genuine regret over the situation was expressed by several of the members present, who emphasized the good work done by the club in the support of various projects by the club since its inception. The belief that there was no longer any opportunity of carrying on with the present membership was expressed by others.

The usual work at this time of year is distribution of Christmas cheer, food and clothing would have to be donated with only a few lack of funds and interest on the part of the greater number of its members, it was pointed out.

At the end of the meeting prizes for the winners of a Boys' Fruitlift Club sponsored by the Kiwanis were presented.

Cure for World's Ills Suggested by Author

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.*

MR. H. G. WELLS has been touring the United States and Canada, gathering material for his next book on our present civilization, and uttering a few remarks on the causes of social reform. The diagnosis is being undertaken, apparently in mechanical devices means of transportation and communication. But brain organization of the modern world has not been organized to deal with the new problems which these machines impose.

Personally, I am not sure that this is possible. From what I know of human nature, mankind is a mechanical, not a logical, animal, who will find his salvation in mechanical ways, and that the average population, even in these days, will find means of subsistence somehow, and carry on some semblance of any modern civilization to hand on to the next generation. It will be pretty hard to eradicate the human race. We even find it is impossible to eradicate mosquitoes and typhoid germs.

Mr. Wells' Solution

Mr. Wells' solution is to have an encyclopaedia drawn up by the best minds of the world, and have everyone learn the facts about the business. It seems strange that a man of Mr. Wells' historical outlook would not realize that we have had encyclopaedias from the very earliest days of printing, and before. Each of these contained a chapter on medicine, and for that reason I have been interested in them, because some of the early discoveries in medicine were written in these books. The "Margherita Philosophica" was one of these, which was probably in Shakespeare's library. The medieval schoolmen, such as Albertus Magnus, were constantly writing encyclopaedias, and they were widely distributed.

One of the most interesting of the encyclopaedias was Bodger Bacon.

He had greatest "apparation of the Middle Ages", and in one part of the encyclopedic books he carefully concealed in a cipher the invention, by which he is best known today. In this book the first eight chapters were written in clear and readable Latin, but the following chapters, according to an eminent scholar, read like so much gibberish.

The fact is that Bacon had devised what is called the "Argyle Cipher", which consists of a clever way of hiding sentences that are important under a lot of unmeaning phrases and words. Allegedly the secret of the Philosopher's Stone and actually he described saltpeter and S., the ingredients of gunpowder, and he puts the most important sentence, which discloses the proportions of the explosive mixture, in an innocent looking sentence artfully withheld translation for almost 700 years. It is not too bad that the encyclopaedia is not the fad over rediscovered?

Apparently the curse of the world's ills, we are reminded of what Prof. H. G. Rose says, is the failure to realize that the dove of peace is not the eagle of prize or the vulture of greed, but the stork!

Eleanore Whitney

Black Dress Brightened With Metal

THE BASIC black dress brightened by color is worn by Miss Eleanore Whitney, screen dancer.

The dress is made of black crepe satiny crepe, and it has high neck and long sleeves, tight at the wrist and tapered at the shoulders.

A turned-over collar of gold and brocade and a bridal sash of the same tied about the waist, are the highlights of the dress. These may be replaced by girdle and collar of different materials and colors, of course.

The wise woman who does her own sewing will make herself one of these simple black dresses, and supplied herself with several sets of accessories to wear with it.

MEN LOVE PEPPY GIRLS

If you are happy and peppy and full of fun, you will find that men love you. If you are moody, they will invite you as a last resort. Why?

Well, if you are moody, you are like Simone and Jean. You don't want to be interrupted when you are in the dumps. You want to be left alone to mope. You don't want to go parties or enjoy yourself. You don't want to dance or play games. You don't want to be bothered with men. You want to be left alone to be "suffering through". Well, maybe that is what you want, but it is not what men want. Men want girls who are peppy. They want girls who are full of fun. They want girls who are ready to go places and do things. They want girls who are ready to dance, play games, and be entertained. 2. Christmas Gifts In Family

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

YOU AND I can afford to give some thought to moral values for our children, in relation to Christmas gifts within the family. The average kid has an orgy of receiving gifts "from Santa Claus". Later, from his parents and others he strongly and as early does he acquire the attitude of always receiving, that he naturally gets very little of the spirit of giving. Essentially his Christian training for years is in selfishness.

Even while he still believes in Santa Claus, there should be a gift or so "from Mother and Daddy". Gradually the proportion of gifts "from Mother and Daddy", or from other persons, should increase while those "from Santa Claus" should decrease correspondingly. This gradual shift will help him make gradual emotional adjustment to the myth of Santa Claus.

I assume that your little child has been led to believe in Old Saint Nick. He is just about the right matter, of course, but so soon as he asks you if Santa is a real person, you will, I suppose, frankly answer "no"; we have just been saying that he is a myth and that you will go on pretending with the child as long as he cares to have you do so. Kids' questions may ask when he is five or six; surely soon after he enters school. Why so many parents will try to force Santa Claus on the five-and-ten child, or even younger child, is more than I can understand. Neither can I understand why the younger child should be denied the joys of Santa Claus and other fairies.

Give Tot Some Money

It is well to give the child four or five a little money—better to intrust him to save his pennies for it—to buy an inexpensive gift for each of his parents, who will receive it with deep and sincere appreciation. As he grows older, if there are other children, let him also provide a gift for each of them.

While serving as a fellow-speaker at a teachers' state convention, with a certain eighteenth city superintendent of schools, I was told by him that in his home it has been a custom since his youngest child was nine for them, before Christmas, to write the name of each family member on a slip of paper and then shuffle them all in a hat, each drawing one. The name drawn by each member is the person for whom he was going to provide the Christmas present. This makes for secrecy, and is a secret until Christmas morning. In the words of the youth, "it's something there."

Greatest moral values come to children when they make sacrifices over a number of days, applied toward the ability to purchase a gift for one they love; and the greater the sacrifice, the greater the joy and love in the giver from his giving.

YOU SPELL IT.

An eminent educator asserts that one person in 40 can spell from memory correctly: Diaphragm, rhinoceros, receipt, parallelogram, bouquet, tattooed, ecstasy, supercede, inferred, liquefy, ransack, hypocrisy, scheme, sacrilegious, separate, villain, consensus, indispensable, sandwich, tarpaulin, New York Post.

"I go to church for the same reason that I go to the theatre—because I get something out of it."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, I get a thrill."

Paris' Short Dance Frock, Long Regal Costume

Trailing Skirts Are Preferred For Most Gala Nights Abroad

By LISBETH

THE SHORT dance frock has not proved so popular with the youths of America. Modern damsels love the femininity of the long skirt.

The short black crepe dance frock pictured, was photographed in Paris, and is a Robert Piguet model. It is trimmed with black velvet which fastens the bolero effect on the bodice, and bands the skirt. A headdress of black velvet ribbons is worn with this dress.

The long evening gown of gold lame with the draped front is also a Paris model, and is worn with a long velvet cape which is fastened with a gold clip.

Two things are very noticeable in this year's evening fashion: one is the number of sheer materials, like net, chiffon, etc. The other is the lovely combinations of colors which are used. It is true of the daytime dresses as well as the evening ones. Did ever before we such exquisite and unusual color combinations. Who wonders' appealing of color combinations, an evening costume I saw consisted of a gold brocade dress over which was worn a dubonnet coat lined with the gold brocade. A black velvet dinner dress had huge sleeves of gold lame. There were many other combinations, of course, which space hardly permits of detailing. Rainbow colors used for a wide girdle are worth mentioning, however.

French Chiffon for Blonde

Another dress that was exquisite for a blonde or just the right type of brunet, was peach chiffon illustrative of the vogue for sheers with a full skirt and a small but glittering headdress.

Black and blue and black and purple and violet and blacks are always interesting combinations.

From Robert Piguet is a black dull sort woolen dress, in which the sleeves of the jacket are continued as gloves, the backs being embroidered with gold cording set with jewel stones, this treatment also being used on the back of the jacket.

Above, short dance dress in black crepe and velvet; right, gold lame dress, long vest, cape with gold clip.

Poems That Live

ROMANCE

Romance, who loves to nod and sing,
With drowsy head and folded wing,
Among the green leaves as they shake
Far down within some shadowy lake,
To me a painted parroquet
Hath been—a most familiar bird—
Taught me my alphabet to say—
To lisp my earliest word.
While in the wild wood I did lie,
A child—with a most knowing eye.

Now, eternal Condor years
So shake the very Heaven on high
With tumult as they thunder by,
I have no time for idle dreams.
Through gazing on the unquiet things—

And when an hour with calmer wings
Its down upon my spirit flings—
That little time with lyre and rhyme
To while away—forbidden things!
My heart would feel to be a string
Unless it trembled with the strings.

—Edgar Allan Poe.

LAMB STEW, NOODLES CONSTITUTE MAIN DISH

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Kerns Hint

Lamb Stew With Noodles
Buttered Carrots Celery Pickles
Molded Rice Cake
Tea or Coffee

Following are the directions for making the lamb stew with noodles according to Ines S. Wilson's recipe.

Cubes cut from the lamb shoulder, breast, neck or shank are used. Brown the meat well on all sides in one-half to one-inch cubes. They may be browned in hot lard, seasoned with salt and pepper, covered with hot water and simmered until the meat is tender, about one and a half hours.

Cooked Separately

The noodles are cooked separately in boiling salt water and put on the platter as a bed for the meat cubes. The noodles are seasoned with peppy seed or flavor. The liquid in which the lamb is cooked is thickened with flour, smoothed in cold water, and served with the lamb and noodles.

To prepare a stew, it is important that the meat should be cooked at a simmering temperature, rather than at the higher temperature of boiling. While a low temperature in cooking meat increases tenderness, a high temperature for any considerable length of time decreases the tenderness in meat. Therefore, a simmering temperature is recommended for all meats which are cooked in water.

Whether or not the meat is browned before water is added for the stew depends upon personal preference. Browning does give the stew a richer flavor, but for the sake of variety, it may be that you will want to omit this step occasionally. Unbrowned stews are quite acceptable, and are prepared exactly the same way as described with the exception of browning. The meat is seasoned, covered with hot water, the kettle covered tightly, and the meat allowed to cook slowly until done. If desired the noodles may be cooked in the lamb broth, so that they will take up part of the delicious meat flavor.

In a church in Scotland, confusing echoes caused the sermons to be nightmares of sound.

My six boys carry girl friends always are on the fence.

The weather remembered the story of an old Roman architect who ended such troubles by placing notice boards around the walls of a building. Rounding up, the architect had placed them in rows around the church ang the confusing echoes disappeared.

Parents Interfere With Job

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: Are one's elders always right?" asks a disgruntled youth. By no means. Parents are people, believe it or not, and they make mistakes just like the rest of us.

However, this young man, whom I will call GENE, cites his case in which he thinks his parents made a "drastic mistake".

It seems he was offered a job which involved hiring several other men. He asked his parents' opinion and they told him they didn't care what he did, so, knowing that that remark was tantamount to consent, he went ahead.

The night before he was to start his new project his parents told him he could not go through with it—that he must call the whole thing off. Gene thinks his parents have a right to dictate to him to a certain extent, but when they let him go on with a project that involves other people, and then make him give it up at the last moment, he thinks that is going too far.

Gene wants my reactions to the old phrase, "You'll learn you're wrong" and to have been hurled at him.

I'd have to know more about the deal you tell me about, Gene, before I could give any intelligent opinion. In other words, I would have to hear your parents' side of the matter. That might make what seems an injudicious procedure the proper thing or to do.

I agree with you that parents should examine a project that their children are going into to see if it is all right, and then let them work it out without interference. So, from your point of view they had no right to smash your plans at the last minute, causing you and your associates embarrassment.

Your parents must think you do not make altogether wise choices or they would not so often tell you "you'll learn yet." Such a saying gets a bit monotonous after a while, I'll agree, and I hope you WILL learn, and very soon, if you need to. Good luck to you, Gene.

A. J.: I guess the only thing you can do is take the girl at her word and try not to see her. A. J. I suppose when you were together she felt all the time how much you cared, and being inexperienced and not wise to feel for you as you did for her, it made her happy to be with you.

I know how you feel and how unhappy you are, but by taking your self constantly out of her way away from her for a long time, then if you care to meet her, you may have again. But don't mention love to her again for a long, long time. It can be nice to her, but unemotional, if you possibly can do it. Do you think you can go through with this?

Do not with other girls and make an earnest effort to forget this one. You may not be able to do it, and then again, maybe you can.

Occasional Changes in Parting of Hair Is Good for Scalp and Aids Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty" INDIVIDUALITY is the keynote of present-day hair styles. But if you desire to know how unique the average woman's coiffure is, look around at some of the women you know, and observe the manner in which they part their locks. You'll find, probably, very few who do not part their tresses on the side, for most women, once they adopt a certain hair parting never think of trying a different one!

Sometimes we say that it is a wise thing to change the part of the hair occasionally. Changing the part, for instance, has a certain stimulating effect on the circulation in the scalp. The blood grows somewhat sluggish when the hair is continually parted in the same manner. And the good hair health, the circulation in the scalp should be brisk and vigorous, so that the hair follicles will be given plenty of nourishment.

Not Becoming to All

The centre part has been more or less in the discard for quite some time. But since our new styles demand that we appear demure and romantically feminine, it would seem that the centre part is to be restored to favor once again.

Of course, it stands to reason that the centre part will not prove becoming to everyone. Naturally, if your features are of delicate, cameo-like loveliness, or the pure, classical beauty, you'll be able to carry off that centre part to perfection. But if you have irregular features or a gaunt, thin face, the centre part will not prove very flattering. What's more, if you have a low brow, the middle part will only emphasize it. And it will do the same for the extremely high forehead. Both types of forehead appear to best advantage when the coiffure obscures the hairline somewhat.

The girl with the long, thin face should avoid a centre part always, as it will accentuate the length of her face. And the tall girl will appear even taller if she adopts it for the middle part is especially becoming to the dainty girl with a normal forehead, an oval or heart-shaped face and regular features.

And if the lass who fits these qualifications adopts a centre part and permits a few soft ringlets to curl about her ears and to peep from beneath her hat, she'll appear most bewitchingly demure and fascinatingly feminine.

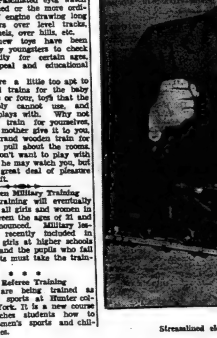
We Suggest—FOR JUNIOR—At Christmas

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

IF YOU have an idea boys don't care for dolls, and just wander around to the mechanical toy department of any big store any time during the weeks before Christmas, and watch the lad boys and the little boys enjoying the electric trains that are always running there. Especially they watch the streamlined or the more ordinary type of engine drawing long trains of cars over level tracks, through tunnels, over hills, etc.

All the new toys have been tested out by youngsters to check their suitability for certain ages, their fun appeal and educational value.

Parents are a little too apt to get electrical trains for the baby of the house, three or four boys that the child possibly cannot use, and which dad just plays. Why not get such a train for yourselves, dads, or let mother give it to you, and then let the train run around the baby to pull about the rooms. Then you won't want to play with his toy, and he may watch you, but he'll get a great deal of pleasure out of his gift.



Girls Given Military Training

Military training will eventually be given to all girls and women in Turkey between the ages of 21 and 40, it is announced. Officers' courses were recently included in courses for girls at higher schools in Turkey, and the pupils who fail in their tests must take the training again.

Dutton's Men of Manhattan Now Within Point of Leafs by Two Victories over Weekend

Toronto Leafs Hold to Tie by Habitants Saturday Night

BRUINS SHUTOUT

Canadiens Now Undefeated in Last Six Contests

(By The Canadian Press)

Red Dutton's old men of Manhattan have proved the worth of that hockey axiom that it's not the goals you score but the ones you plot to score them.

With the National Hockey League season a month old the New York Americans have bagged just a few more than half the goals Toronto Maple Leafs have piled up. But today finds America's answer to Conn Smythe's idols in fourth place in the division leadership.

A brace of wins in the week and battling left the New Yorkers just a point behind Leafs and they may switch positions when they go into action again next week end. And America has done that on 34 goals, compared to Leafs' 49.

Dutton's men are practically reckless with their scoring Saturday night when they defeated Montreal Maroons 3-1 but against the world champion Red Wings of Detroit last night they kept the figure to a neat 3-1.

Two goals for goals is about the Amerk average and Montreal Canadiens did almost as well over the week end by taking a win and a tie with the Ottawa Senators. Leafs drew Saturday night and worked out a 3-3 win over Boston Bruins on Tuesday night, running their undefeated string to six games.

Blackhawks Third

Those three points gave the Flying Frenchmen third place in the Canadian division, Montreal Canadiens being in the cellar after having shared the runner-up spot with Americans. New York Rangers made the only other move in the standings during the week-end when they won Bruins 4-0 last night and moved into the Boston team's second spot over the Hawks.

The rejuvenated and the youngsters among the Amerks shared the spotlight in their two wins. After old Nels Stewart had scored the winning goal at Montreal, Sweeney Schriner showed the way to the scorers at Detroit.

In the Montreal game Stewart broke a 1-1 tie but minutes before the game ended and then made the play for Smiley Wiseman to get their third goal. Schriner had started them away in the lead early in the game and Herb Cain had tied it in the second period.

Schriner Got Two

Schriner handed Wings their seventh defeat in 10 games with his two goals in the first period. Desparate, Jake Milnes tried his forward lines in every combination he could muster in the third period but Lewis line he had broken up earlier was re-formed in the third and scored, Larry Aurie getting the counter.

The affair at Toronto Saturday night was one of the roughest games of the season with 13 penalties being handed out. Tex Blake of Canadiens and Bob Davidson of Toronto were given majors for fighting in the third period and Harvey Jackson of the Leafs drew a misconduct penalty for talking to the officials.

The Frenchmen were flying high from the start and George Mantha and Blake scored in the second before Syl Apps and pal Toronto into the running. Jim Fowler tied the score in the third on a long shot and when Bill Thoms and Gord Lewis ahead for the first time Hod Morahn tied it again. All but two of the goals were scored with men on the penalty bench.

Bruins Shutout

In Chicago Canadiens spotted Hawks goals by Louis Trudel in the first and Paul Thompson in the second before Blake and Lorrain tied it up in the middle session. Polly Drouin gave Habitants their well-earned win late in the final session.

The Ranger win over Boston was the Bruins' second straight shutout defeat in a spectacular early season record. They had won six and tied two before Canadiens beat them Thursday.

When Goalie Clint Smith took Lynn Patrick's pass for a goal half way through the first period last night Boston loomed safe defence and went after goals.

They unsuccessful and Rangers were unable to take advantage of the open play until the third when Art Coulter, Butch Keeling and Patrick increased their margin.

L. O. H. A. HAVE SENIOR SERIES

Only One Series Will be Operated in Ladies Hockey

Toronto, Dec. 6.—(CP)—Delegates to the 15th annual meeting of the Ladies' Ontario Hockey Association decided here Saturday night only a senior series would be operated this season.

The decision came after much discussion on advisability of operating an Intermediate series, or a senior "A" or "B" section. The latter, at least if only a group was tentatively urged it might induce more teams to enter.

Teams from Mariside, Stayner, Hamilton, Preston, Guelph and Ottawa appear certain, while Owen Sound, Durham, Mount Forest and Orangeville signified their intention of entering.

It was also decided to affiliate for one year with the Ontario branch of the Women's Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada.

HOMER TOWNSEND REINSTATED IN HASTINGS LOOP

Suspended Two Years Ago Now Eligible to Play

ORGANIZE LEAGUE

Four Teams Expected to Face Barrier This Season

Stirling, Dec. 6 (Special)—After being barred from participation in senior play in the Central Hastings Senior League for the past two years, during which time he has capably directed play from the sidelines as an efficient coach, Homer (Ned) Townsend, brilliant defence player of Belleville and termed as the local "Eddie Horner of hockey" was reinstated in his former standing in the league at a meeting of league officials and team representatives held in Stirling on Thursday night. The suspension, which was the outcome of an unfortunate affair which took place in the final play-off of 1936, when Roy Brooks right winger of Marmora team was carried from the ice injured, Townsend accepted his suspension in a sportsmanlike manner and maintained his interest in league activities during the past year. The motion to terminate his suspension was made by a member of the new entry in the league, Corbyville and seconded by a prominent member of the Central formed combined team of West Hastings and Madoc and passed unanimously from anyone present. So it is that cheers and boos of other days will rock the rafters of the Stirling arena as the Townsend rushes of the league's days to the ice again.

Three Teams Organized

Three teams were organized at the meeting on Saturday night in the Stirling Council chamber and the foundation for the league is expected to be one of the best seasons in the history of this league which for the past few years has been noted for producing their brand of hockey.

Frankford Jewell Wisner presided over the meeting and in the absence of Secretary Frank Ackl, Art Duncan was appointed secretary protem. It was regretted by all present that Secretary Ackl was unable to be present. Mr. Duncan, with whom has always been a great drawing card would be unable to enter this year and after a lengthy discussion it was decided to leave Corbyville, Elon's, a team combining former players of Bethel and Elon, Frankford and possibly a city of a Stirling Junior team or a Frankford team being accepted to compete a foursome, which will provide a series of double-headers once a week as in former years. It was decided during the business part of the meeting that an emergency fund would be created by charging a small entry fee to each of the players on all contending teams. These funds only to be used in matters on which all club members have voted.

Election of Officers

As a result of the election of officers for the coming season the following officers will direct activities for 1937-38 and settle any possible difficulties which might arise; President, Mr. Jos. Wilson; Secretary-Treasurer, Art Duncan; and Managers and Coaches of each club to form the executive committee with only one having power to vote. A meeting of the executive committee will be held on Saturday, Dec. 11 at which it is expected the lists of players will be presented for sanction.

It is the belief of many local fans that a Stirling junior team will be entered directed and coached by Conley (Tory) Ackers who has for many years coached three teams to championship honors.

Alert and Courageous Argos Defeat Sarnia Imperials to Win Eastern Canada Grid Title

Score is 10-6 With Winners Securing Eight Points in Third Half

MORRIS STARS

Stirling and Beach Are Best For The Losing Squad

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 6.—(CP)—This year's football natural comes up Saturday with Toronto Argonauts pitted against Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Canadian final. For the first time since they won that title in 1935, the Bombers will play an eastern team.

It's a natural for several reasons, but principally because Lew Hayman's Argos are one of the best teams produced in the east in years. Because they are the closest rival the Bombers, the final is expected to attract a bigger crowd than any previous east-west struggle.

Alert and courageous, the Scullers captured the national championship Saturday by defeating Sarnia Imperials, defending champions, 10-6, in a sudden-death game. A crowd of 15,000 watched the battle that rain and mud could not prevent being a dazzling exhibition of ball-handling by both teams.

The ball was wet and greasy, but Argos toured it around with reckless abandon—and won that way. Imperials gained 226 yards on forward passes, staged a spectacular series of lateral-off-forward plays and otherwise ignored the playing conditions.

"Name" Players Roast

In a setting designated to obtain sale thrills, every "name" player in the contest lived up to his reputation. Bombay Bob Isbister, placekicking Anita Stokes, fleet Art West, veteran Ted Morris and the cover-leading brigade led the way for Argos, Ponderous Clarence Burton starred for Sarnia.

Argos, playing inspired by Carnera's great backfield pair, Stapleton and Bob Smirle, and Lou Beach, lifted the Imperials to within an ace of victory several times. Others were scarcely when it seemed inevitable the smashing line drives of Stirling and Beach would win for the Imperials.

But Argos struck early and with brilliant finesse. They sent Morris through a big gap in the line for 37 yards in the first period. On the next play West was on the end of an extension run that gained 32 yards and a touchdown.

A play involving a forward and two lateral passes, with Mike Hedgewick carrying the ball for a 37-yard gain, got Imperials down to the Argo 18 but Stirling missed a place kick from a difficult angle and the Scullers came back before half-time to score again.

Argos Get Placement

Doug MacIntosh, young halfback, made 20 yards on scrubbers' quinner plays and from the Sarnia 30 Aunie Stinkin kicked a field goal. The score was 8-6.

Early in the fourth period the Imperials finally succeeded after having been turned back repeatedly. This time Stirling and Beach led an offensive 60 yards and the Bomber crossed the goal line from two yards out. He kicked the extra point.

But Argos had the wind in the final quarter and Isbister punted Imperials back in their own territory and kept them there. Two of his kicks went for singles.

The best team Hayman has coached since 1933 when Ab Box, Jack Taylor and Morris were his big guns. Argos have won seven of their nine scheduled games. They were beaten by Montreal Indians in a league game but finished first in the big four standings.

The ball was wet and greasy, but Argos toured it around with reckless abandon—and won that way. Imperials gained 226 yards on forward passes, staged a spectacular series of lateral-off-forward plays and otherwise ignored the playing conditions.

DUNDAS GAINS 14 POINT LEAD

Defeat Peterboro Orfums 15-1 in First Game of Int. 'A' Finals

Peterboro, Dec. 5—(Special)—Dundas beat Peterboro here to take the second game of the O.R.F.U. intermediate championship series with a 14-point lead over Peterborough. The experience gained by five of last year's Dundas team in the Dundas squad them in good stead and contributed largely to their 15-1 win over the local Orfums. Peterborough team gained their only point in the first quarter as they held Dundas scoreless.

Early in the second stanza Gurney downed Orfums for a safety touch in the Bombers' scoring. Forward passes in succession Gurney tossed another, this time to McSheehy who galloped over for the touch. Glub converted. Fleming downed Karns behind his own line for another point to make it 8-1 at halftime. In the last half Morgan downed Loupis for a point and downed Loupis for a point and Gurney kicked him to block a kick and fall on the ball for the last touchdown. It was converted to end the scoring.

Kearns, Loucks and Crowe showed up well for the locals while Morgan, Glub and Gurney did much to keep the ball in Peterborough territory during the last half of the match.

CLEVELAND WINS 2 OVER WEEKEND

By the Canadian Press

Cleveland Barons, who had many left feet at the start of the season, stepped now and on a steady march toward the top of their division in the International-American hockey league.

Manager-Major Hill Cook had quite a time drilling the boys into a working unit, but he did it. Hardly spectacular in battling for the first few weeks, Barons really found their stride during the week and they outshone every Int.-Am. team on parade.

Nick Bruhn Canada rugby champs are shown above smothering a Sarnia line play during the first quarter of the game shortly after M'orris (37) of Argos had scored the opening touchdown. Also shown in the photograph is Palmer (55) of Argos.

Fullback Bruhn of Argos is shown above tossing away a kick as Vail (53) and Young (54) block Sarnia players in their attempt to break through the line.

Mrs. MacAllister was tall, brown rather keen glass last few years, a woman of strong character and a fine but stalwart active type. She had formerly been a nurse, but only taken over the manifold duties of editing, advertising solicitor and circulation manager of the Gazette, the weekly paper she had founded, but which had added a job printing plant, and made a success of both. In Maple Village, her word carried as much weight as the valuable citizen, she would have been, had she almost refused to stand for that honor, for she was loved by a great many, respected by all who knew her small but fearless and sometimes fiery newspaper, and prided—though never to her face, for that was not the Maple Village way—by the great amount of good she did among needy families for miles around.

She heeds nothing on a range of the shelf, Nonny fished an old pipe from his pocket. "How is Lucille, by the way? I think I wrote you I had a nice note from her." He filled the bowl of the pipe, leaning his eyes on the job in hand. "Pretty as ever, I suppose."

"Prettier," his mother said, "though there's more to Lucille than her pretty face. She's going to make some man a fine wife, Nonny."

His eyes came up laughing. "Any particular man in mind?"

Mrs. MacAllister laughed, softly. "I'll know more about that when you've been here a week or two, my son."

Nonny's face sobered. "Sorry, Mom, but I've got to be on my way Monday morning. I'm on the air from Washington Tuesday night, then on to Philadelphia for a broadcast, and back to the training camps in the South before they change my orders. I won't be back in New York again before February or March, and not get the first ball in the Yankee stadium." Then he was smiling again. "But I'll be here tomorrow and tomorrow night if Lucille's free along——"

Lucille Baldwin happened along—by invitation, though Nonny didn't know that—for dinner and stayed over next day and it took Nonny a full month to realize this was the same Lucille who had been "Nonny MacAllister's girl" through two years of high school. She modelled had not prepared him for the fact that Lucille's sometimes elusive kind of real beauty. She was quite tall and dark and superbly formed, and her black curls curved out from her cheeks curved kisses with the dimples, and her lashes were long and natural poise.

Nonny thought, "Small town girl, my eye! There's no such thing any more."

He said, somewhat reassured by the slow spread of color in her cheeks, "The last time I saw you we were making plans to go to a skating party at Martin's pond. I've never quite decided you went down to Boston to visit your Aunt Hannah and before you came back Mom had shipped me off to school."

Lucille, taking off her hat, and slipping her arm through Mrs. MacAllister's, "There's no party on tonight, I'm glad to say. I can't stand there and the chances are we'll have a grand ocean." And broke into a little ripple of laughter. "Really!" Nonny grinned. "Way, he wondered, with this unexpectedly charming girl obviously eager to go on, that this evening was a fair of high school days, was there still that aching confusion in his heart?

They went to Marty's pond that night but kept to the edges of the slope of the blazing fire, and Nonny, and Lucille good-bye shortly before eleven o'clock, Nonny with the promise to call in minutes' tomorrow, but I expect to give Mom a hand at the thing and you know how things grow out there. If I don't—let me know when you get to Boston and how I'd like to run up. If I can get away."

They ran off the paper next morning and after lunch he and his mother sat in the dusty little office and talked. The Guardian's circulation was up; Mrs. MacAllister told right man who had married a Connecticut Stewart and brought her here to Maple Village and made her happy.

Nonny said, "I told myself from the beginning it was all wrong. Sandra was Park avenue and rich and society, and I was small town New Hampshire. I guess Dad had something I missed." He sat down and filled his pipe once more. "You were one of the wealthy Greenwich Stewarts and you married a man like dickens, but he got the Indian sign on you and hauled you off."

His mother's smile was shortlived. She was looking down at the papers almost forgotten. "Ya Hr-gids in Greenwich, Nonny, and see very simply in Greenwich." she said quietly. "You were a great deal of money, but it was in the Greenwich and the men of the family controlled that. We had charge accounts, but not cash accounts, and did I ever have as much as twenty-five dollars in cash to do exactly as I pleased. I—I wasn't quite the butterfly type, you see."

Nonny grinned. "And all those years I've been thinking of you as the Greenwich Playgirl of the nineties."

"The nineties!" Mrs. MacAllister clapped her hands in mock outrage. "My dear boy, I was married in nineteen-two and I was just twenty-five, your present age." She bore the pain of remembering figure from the past and dropped it into the waste-basket. After that she was Mrs. MacAllister, her son's again.

"I've always had a secret hope you'd come back to Maple Village one day, Nonny—take over the paper and settle down here. I suppose after working on city newspapers and talking to millions of people over radio you'd just about go crazy editing a paper with a few thousand subscribers, people. But it's a mighty satisfying life, son." And then she added, quickly, "I'm not wouldn't be the life for a girl like Sandra Stewart, I'm afraid."

"Her here, Mom—" Nonny suddenly leaned forward—"don't get me wrong, but I've got to tell you. I'm through with Sandra. That little episode is closed." He shook his head. "Maybe one of these days I'm coming back—not help you run this sheet, Mom, but I'm afraid it doesn't get you anywhere. Maybe I'll come back somewhere than you think."

Then the room that afternoon Nonny stopped in to see Lucille at home and her mother seemed pleased to see him. He had a shrewd idea you, Nonny," Mrs. Baldwin said, "but — an old friend dropped in and—and they drove up to Granville. I'm awfully sorry, Nonny."

Walking down the quiet street, Nonny thought of that vague reference in one of his mother's letters to "Lucille's unfortunate engagement" and decided to get the details from his mother that night. But he didn't and the next morning he headed south and then to the coast and back to Florida in the training camps and when he saw Lucille again in March, nothing was said but that Nonny was together and on the threshold of an ancient illusion.

INSTALMENT 11

Stephen Eddy was not an exacting fiance and after a little flurry immediately following Sandra's disappearance from Park avenue, he decided a little thinking around New York would probably do her good. He had taken it for granted, of course, that she would get in touch with him the moment she was settled. But when a week had passed he could find no one who admitted having seen the flighted socialite whom Sandra was living or where she was working. David was in jail, and finally Stewart, his best bet, had had no word.

Then Jack Cramer found him in his club and proposed the cruise to Bermuda. Cramer owned the Penelope, one of those floating palaces of bright chrome and polished mahogany that fall under the all embracing classification of yachts, and during her three years afloat with Penniwore and Jack Cramer's very ultra parties.

"You know how long we'll be gone," Cramer said. "Couple of months, anyway. Possibly longer if Sandra gets the whim of plenty of time to yourselves."

Stephen had a difficult time explaining why Sandra would not be able to go, but Jack Cramer didn't you come along, anyway. There's an extra girl—Julia Markham from Kansas City. We'll just come east to spend the winter with Holly Stewart and you'll get to know her and be round for an appropriate man. You'd like her, Stephen. She's quiet and refined and plenty good looking."

Stephen said no, he couldn't very well do that, but he wasn't very convincing for he was thinking: Refined and good looking—I'll be the judge of that. Then immediately he was ashamed of himself—why shouldn't I? Why will I be so particular?"

When Jack insisted, Stephen said, "I'll give you a ring tomorrow, all right, but I'm afraid I can't make it."

Stephen had decided to go even then, for he suspected that presently Sandra would try to break their engagement and she would be immensely chagrined to discover that what was once for the goose was gravy for the gander—or something like that. Then unexpectedly he met Bryant Wilson.

SHOULD ANY OF THE FIRST SET OF TEETH BE REMOVED IN CHILDREN?

When I was a youngster very little importance was attached to the first or milk set of teeth. If one or more of these teeth were lost early it might give the youngster a "funny" appearance but nothing was thought about it as the "permanent" set would soon be making its appearance anyway. If any of these broke or back 'teeth began to ache, the youngster was taken out of school by dentist to have the teeth extracted, or the tooth or teeth might be removed by the mother herself.

To-day, your dentist does all in his power to preserve this first or milk set because he realizes that if the first set can be kept in their places as they should be, the second or permanent set can come down in the right line and there will be ample room for them —no crowding, no tooth left up in the gums unable to find its right place in the mouth, and no teeth "out of line" and thus interfering with the proper chewing surface.

On the other hand if one or more of these first or milk set of teeth begins to decay and the roots become infected, then just as infected teeth cause trouble in adults so can infected milk teeth lower the whole tone of the body's strength and resistance to ailments.

This means of course that every dentist nowadays has to use careful judgment in the way he handles infection in the milk or first set of teeth in children; that is whether he should try to save the tooth as long as possible for the sake of appearances and keeping room for the permanent set, or whether for the sake of the child's health the infected teeth should be extracted without further delay.

Thus Dr. Gerald Franklin, Montreal, in an address before the Montreal Dental Club last year stated that the tooth should be removed instead of trying to save it by treatment) under the following conditions.

1.—When X-ray shows that two-thirds of the root has been affected by infection.

2.—If pus has separated the tooth from its socket.

3.—When decay has destroyed the whole floor of the pulp chamber—inner lining of tooth on which the nerve and blood-supply lie.

4.—When the child's health is so poor that the extra strain or work on it caused by a bad tooth should not be permitted.

If your dentist wishes or does not wish to remove one of your first teeth, you will know that whatever he advises is in the best interests of your child.

Heroic Wellington Boy Scout To Be Decorated for Bravery

'Jimmy' MacDonald to be Honored at Banquet for Saving 2 Children

TO BE GIVEN MEDAL

Official recognition of the heroic rescue of two drowning children from the water of Lake Ontario last summer, by Patrol-Leader Alfred (Jimmy) MacDonald of No. 1 Troop Wellington Boy Scouts, will be made by the Provincial Boy Scout organization at a Patrol and Son banquet to be held in Wellington next week. MacDonald will be formally decorated with the Boy Scout Medal for Bravery.

Townspeople honored the heroic scout at a public demonstration held in the village earlier in the year, also those who gave him invaluable aid in effecting the rescue of the two children.

MacDonald, it will be recalled, plunged to the rescue of small Betty Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson, when she got beyond her depth near a pier running into the lake. Having rescued her, the scout again dived into the water and pulled her brother to safety, finding him lying unconscious on the sandy bottom of the lake. His subsequent efforts at resuscitation also resulted in the saving of the life of the boy but in high commendation from medical authorities who said his prompt action averted certain tragedy.

MacDonald is the second patrol-leader of his troop to win high honors for heroism. His predecessor, the late Patrol-Leader Gordon Malone, gave his life in a heroic but futile attempt to rescue a drowning man in Lake Ontario in an accident that took both lives, just two years ago. Gardner was awarded a posthumous life-saving medal. A cairn containing life-saving equipment has been erected to his memory near the scene of his splendid effort by the townspeople.

MacDonald succeeded Callow and held high the splendid reputation of his troop by performing another heroic deed just two years later. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph MacDonald.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

— Ken J. Calling

The leadership of the Yan Horne series will be a thing of the past this evening when Coach Carling-Kelly's M.C.I. Flyers meet the Kingston Collegiate Kingston City team. To date the Flyers are the only club in the loop to be undefeated, having won all and tie to their credit. Their lone victory was over the Bedecon and one of a hoky nature, so to speak. Although the Limestone City club is leading the parade with two wins, they have one loss to their credit, at the hands of the Garrison "soldiers" who by turn were defeated by Eddie Thrasher Redmen, the big competition in the Kingston loop is beginning to warm up, there only being two points difference between the top and cellar clubs. On Wednesday the Redmen can climb right up with the leaders by virtue of a victory over the Speedy Perth outfit. Manager Thomas' charges are improving as the season progresses and are one of the most feared teams in the loop today.

The standing of the clubs in the Yan Horne series this morning:

	G.	W.	L.	P.
Kingston	2	1	0	4
K.C.I.A.F.	2	1	0	2
Bedecon	2	1	1	2
Belleville	1	1	0	2
Perth	2	0	2	0

Games this week: Tonight, K. C. I. A. vs. Kingston; Wednesday, Belleville vs. Perth; Friday, K.C.A.F. vs. Garrison.

Did you know that the O.H.A. took a total of 302.19 out of Belleville during the provincial hockey playdowns last spring? The night the Police Benefit game was held the Association's cut on the gate was $94.19; the night the Kiwanis Jamboree trimmed the Flyers the O.H.A. share was $346.00 while after the Thorold at Belleville game the provincial moguls were presented with $61.00 for an even $302.19. Only two other cities in the province paid more into the O.H.A. coffers, the Toronto Real Leo Gardens and the Stratford Juniors, who were only a few dollars in excess of the Belleville figure. Comparing the difference in other centres in the complete season finals — in Point Edward the Association's cut was $172.50 while in Port Colborne it was a paltry $127.74 so don't let any person tell you that Belleville and district hockey fans don't pay their way. The above figures were taken from the financial statement of the O.H.A. for last season and submitted at the recent annual meeting.

On Wednesday night the district senior "B" group meetin will convene to draft their O.H.A. schedule. Frederick Clack, Collegiate Inspector and Kingston Garrison are booked to attend the district reports emanating from Kingston are to the effect that Queen's are not keen on a senior "B" rating. Through Charlie Hicks, Queen's hockey mentor, the University officials are protesting and you could not guess why they are kicking. They say the Belleville Redmen should be elevated to senior "B" and that Queen's team should be playing intermediate "A". Mr. Hicks certified his objections even as far as Billie Hewitt and the O.H.A. Governor "Cub" Carling-Kelly says the group will draft its schedule and if Queen's are not present they will be left out of the group altogether. "All right with me," said Cub in the group are satisfied with the grouping, and we are not going to cater to Queen's. If they want to play hockey let them attend Wednesday's meeting and take their chances with the rest of us," declared Governor Carling-Kelly over the week-end. Mr. Hicks was objected to Mr. Carling-Kelly being convener, but that only brought a laugh.

Just what do Queen's and Kingston thought think we are blessed with here on the shores of the Bay of Quinte? Last season the Redmen were fortunate enough to win the intermediate "B" championship and their efforts were elevated to an intermediate "A" classification this season. During the O.H.A. would not consider jumping the Redmen two grades in their classification but placed in one season. Last year Queen's played intermediate "A" and were barely able to keep up one notch, as was Belleville—so why all the hollerading from Kingston? Why we even understand the Kingston moguls have been granted a party into the Junior O.H.A. series, after refusing to affiliate in the junior ranks in the first instance. To elevate the Redmen into a senior "B" grouping would spell ruin to the winter pastime for the locals—it is simply out of the question and "Sandy" Purves has emphatically told his associates so.

Congratulations are in order for the Peterboro' Collegiate grabbers, winners of the Lower C.O.S.S.A. The Little City gridders trounced the Emmanuel College boys, the winners of the Toronto senior, by the score of 11 to 3 in a sodden, muddy mess at Chatsworth last Saturday. Our Albert College fowlers ran at least console themselves with the fact they were next in line in the provincial intermediate race. The Peterboro' victory was mitigated somewhat, however when the Lindsay City C.R.F.U. squad took it on the chin to the tune of 15 to 1 at the hands of the Dundas squad in the first game of the intermediate provincial finals. Should the Dundas Imperials succeed the Ramblers more often than the Argos, look off to a fighting football team and worthy champions of Eastern Canada . . . Tennis Anyone.

Les Canadiens equalled this year's record of the Boston Bruins last week-end when they tied Toronto and trounced the Black Hawks. The Canadiens have now been undefeated in six consecutive games. Incidentally both the Canadiens and the Americans are closing in on the Leafs to make the Canadian section of the N.H.L. a three-cornered affair.

During the fiscal year of 1937, British merchant ships which used the Panama Canal numbered 1,906, the largest number since 1920. They carried 7,179,196 tons of cargo and paid $6,511,155 in tolls.

"The supremacy of the law is the secret of all civilized peoples and the main principle of our Anglo-Saxon race for the last 1,000 years."—Lord Cecil.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Stocks shifted from one foot to the other in today's market and, with the exception of selected aircrafts and specialties, were unable to make much progress.

Dealings were slow from the start and prices unusually narrow near the final hour. Transfers were at the rate of about 800,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

Observations prevailing in market places since the end of the past week. In a large part a reflection of comparatively constructive news of one kind or another. The better tone developed in the face of the hopeful attitude that the slump in the U. S. would be short-lived and that security values had adjusted themselves back into a more normal position as a result of progress of time. The feeling that this time business has been overdiscounted by the trading community began to spread into hitherto pessimistic circles.

Many difficult and trying factors have yet to be overcome, however, and even the conservatives, who refused to be stampeded into a feeling of joylessness during the past few months, are among the first to admit that confidence cannot be founded on by a few great corporation reports of a statement by government officials at Washington that efforts to stop the decline in business would be undertaken.

Out of the confused mass of thinking at Washington, several facts are being considered. A realization exists that something has to be done. There is comfort in this though. It is a clear indication that taxes will be revised, although we will be given opportunity to pursue their beneficial purposes and further encouragement will be given to the business and financial community to roll up its sleeves, employ men and distribute payrolls.

It is always a good tonic for brokers, investment house officials and others suffering from a depression complex to visit the retail shopping district during the pre-Christmas Season. Here they will find a spirit of hope and joy prevailing, and where at any time. To learn the real reasons for confidence and hopefulness, a belief in the "right-ness" of things, business men can pore favorably with such a journey. We commend the idea to those who have stopped reading the declining charts and graphs.

'Canadian Market'

Report on Industry And Development Presented in New Book

Sound reason for constructive optimism with regard to future of Canadian business is provided by "The Canadian Market," a compact book of statistics compiled and interpreted by John H. Dales, under the direction of the Canadian Research Committee of the Canadian Daily Newspapers.

The record of progress during the past five years is an augury of future greatness, it is pointed out in the book. Canadian production and trade have shown phenomenal gains since the turn of the century.

Between 1900 and 1936 the new values of manufactures increased 979 per cent, hydro-electric turbine installations were increased from 338,302 to 7,943,590 h. p. or 2,249 per cent, mining production gained 640 per cent and forestry production 220 per cent.

Each phase of the development of these industries has increased the purchasing power of the nation and opened new markets for every conceivable kind of goods and services.

The growth of trade has kept pace with the development of Canada's resources until today she ranks fourth among the trading nations.

These facts become all the more remarkable when it is considered that the population of Canada has increased by only 100 per cent. In the period under review.

Every report on industry and employment indicates that Canadian progress is continuing. The number of employees already has passed the peak of 1929. Industrial production and trade values are soaring.

The book in which these facts and hundreds of others are presented should fill a long felt want for any organization dealing in the Canadian market. Facts about Canada are presented pictorially, with clear explanations of the significance of the information demonstrated.

"The Canadian Market" is sold by the Canadian Daily Newspapers Publishers' Association, Traveler Life Building, Toronto.

QUEENS OBJECT TO GROUPINGS IN THIS SECTION

University Team and Garrison Desire Reduction in Status

Applying pressure from all angles and registering strong opposition to the groupings in the O.H.A. in Eastern Ontario, a special executive committee met last night in Ontario Hockey Association has been called for this evening at the request of Kingston, Garrison and the University hockey interests. Q. R. "Sandy" Burrows, Belleville executive member of the O.H.A., was unexpectedly summoned to attend the special meeting and left for Toronto this afternoon.

The trouble to be tabled before the sub-committee originated in Kingston when Mr. Charles Hicks, chairman of the Queen's University Athletic Board, objected to Queen's being classified as a senior "B" club and is regarding the "intermediate" classed as a senior "B" club, while the two Kingston aggregations will be forced to an intermediate "A" classification, according to Messrs. Hicks, Burrows and Gilchrist. Gilchrist is the latter being the manager of the Kingston City entry. Mr. Burrows will represent the Belleville interests as well as the O.H.A. this evening.

Senator Stokes View

Today Eddie Trumble, manager of the Belleville Redmen, stated he was perfectly willing to be classified in the Senior "B" grouping, along with the Tyners and Pembroke, but with the district representatives his club would retain its intermediate "A" status and be permitted to play-off in the intermediate "A" playdowns at the termination of the regular O.H.A. schedule. The local interests feel they have received severe enough drubbings at the hands of the O.H.A. already having been demoted to intermediate "B" to an intermediate "A" category since last season.

WILLIAM LUCAS IS FOUND DEAD NEAR SULPHIDE

Believed Gun Accidentally Discharged While Aged Man Was Hunting

Found covered with snow and lying in a field north of Sulphide William Lucas, 75-year-old Sulphide resident, met accidental death to death near his home by Everett Pascoe, a neighbor, shortly before 2.00 pm. today. Mr. Lucas left on a hunting expedition last Thursday afternoon and did not return home, but no posse was organized until today, as it was thought he was visiting relatives within the district.

When found Mr. Lucas was lying face downward, his body being partially covered with fresh fallen snow. A portion of the top of his head was blown away, indicating that the hunting rifle, which he was carrying, had been discharged accidentally discharged in some unaccountable manner, resulting in his death. The gun in Mr. Lucas' rifle charged and was found lying near-by. Deceased was 75 years old.

The late Mr. Lucas was residing with his daughter, Mrs. Sullivan of Sulphide, but quite frequently visited his son, George Lucas, who resides in Hungerford township, 10 miles. He was not anxious of her father's safety when he failed to return from the hunting trip on Thursday, believing he had gone to visit his son. On Sunday, however, it was learned that the late Mr. Lucas had not visited his Hungerford relatives to that vicinity with the result a search party was organized early today and the body was subsequently found.

The body was taken in charge by Dr. M. B. Dales, Tweed, coroner, while Provincial Constable Reighard of Tweed, was dispatched to investigate the accident. An inquest will most likely be held.

Halifax Explosion Occurred Twenty Years Ago Today

Thousands Killed When T.N.T. Laden Ship Hit by Another

TERRIBLE DESTRUCTION

Ed. Note:—The following account of Halifax explosion was written by Mr. George C. Carver, Ontario Intelligencer staff reporter who arrived in Halifax from overseas the day previous to the catastrophe.

He was looking out of a window facing the harbor just as the explosion occurred and saw the great puff of smoke mushroom upwards from the boat. The building he was in, was about a mile from the scene of the accident and as he turned away from the window the concussion struck the building breaking the glass of the windows. He was struck in the back with the sharp fragments which caused severe wounds. Later these were dressed he turned his attention to the dead and the first of a series of sights of misery were needing urgent help.

Twenty years ago today at eight-thirty a.m. to be exact, a steamship lowly named Mont Blanc, in the Narrows, that strip of water that separates the city of Halifax from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, slowly approaching her in an opposite direction, the Belgian relief ship, laden with foodstuffs for the starving civilian population of Belgium hugged the Halifax side of the Narrows as she proceeded on her way to the sea.

The day was a typical winter one. Bright, cloudless, crisp, except for the cloudless sky, glistening on the snow-covered slopes of the Citadel Hill, overlooking the harbor entrance, mingled with the khaki and blue of the British soldier and sailor, as they walked to their places of business, on the Citadel flagstaff, bright colors and the cry of "Old Glory" mingled with the brilliance of Union Jacks.

All of a sudden everything changed. The city reports from the war theatre, and the world generally good that morning. People were going about their daily routine, little dreaming of the sinister tragedy that was even then in the making.

A few minutes after nine the "Mont Blanc" struck the Pier 6 warehouse of trinitrotoluol, more familiarly known as T.N.T., on the starboard side of the "Mont Blanc". Seconds later there came a deafening crash as the ship blew herself and her cargo into the explosive laden "Mont." A curl of yellowish smoke shot high into the clear morning air. Flames broke out on the deck of the relief ship.

Terrible Destruction

At six minutes after nine, a terrific explosion that figuratively rocked the world, strewed death and destruction in its wake throughout the city. The entire northern part of Halifax lay in ruins from the north in one stroke of the Orin Reaper's scythe. Fires started on every side, clouds of flying debris. Windows shattered inwards tearing flesh and inflicting horrible cuts on men, women and children. A thirty minutes after the explosion the dead was picked bodily from her moorings and hurled across the hall Dartmouth side of the harbor to Dartmouth side of the harbor.

The steering wheel of the "Mont Blanc" was found imbedded in the hull of the Belgian relief ship. Her anchor was found imbedded in the stern of the Imo, some four feet in the water line. Her bell was found and hurled a distance of four miles where it was driven into the ground by the explosion. Today it is surrounded by an iron fence, a grim reminder of the terrible disaster.

The steering wheel of the City of Halifax ferry steamer Mont Blanc had rushed to the waterfront following a fire alarm was all that was left of the vessel. Her engines and boilers were literally blown to pieces. Thirty-five men were killed outright in fact the actual number of fatalities had never been ascertained.

In the downtown streets of Halifax, the explosion literally demolished only a few buildings. Pillars were smashed in the northern outskirts as parents searched smoking ruins for the bodies of their children. The road steel was torn up for a distance of a mile, twisted almost in air in crazy patterns, twisted almost out of recognition. Rolling stock of locomotives in the yards, splintered wood and steelwork. Every pane of glass in the city for miles and miles was smashed. Communication from the outside world was cut off. Halifax was practically blocked in her hour of suffering.

Then the rescue work began, was turned into an emergency hospital. At ten o'clock that night, 1,600 injured with accommodation or two hundred patients, had over fifteen wounded citizens and children were crowded into its small space. Small children lay groaning and dying on the operative offices. The torn bodies of men and women lay on makeshift beds. Doctors were rushed and every available space.

Sadder still was the prematurely Thirty-five babies were prematurely born in this hospital between the hours of midnight and six p.m.

The staff of the hospital worked at top-speed. Everyone with knowledge of first aid was pressed into action. Doctors, nurses, orderlies and wallrusses did yeoman service in the hour of need.

Churches, the Y.M.C.A., in fact every available building turned to First Aid stations were filled with injured and dying.

Terrifying Rumours

Adding further terror came the rumor that Wellington Barracks, a veritable arsenal of huge tons of ammunition and explosives had caught fire and another explosion, more immediate, more far-stricken inhabitants gathered what few left of their household effects and started a general exodus out of the city. Hundreds of men, women and children in all stages of dress and undress joined the parade that filled the streets of the city. Cooler heads intervened and quelled the rumor, regaining some semblance of order.

Late that night a terrific snowstorm descended upon the terrible scene left in the wake of the explosion, adding to the hardships of many people who with a ray of hope left in their breasts still dug and searched in the ruins for their loved ones.

A day later, a United States ship with big Stackhouse, sailed into the harbor and took over the rule of the stricken city. Help began to pour in from other parts of the Dominion. Red Cross trains bearing supplies, doctors and nurses were rushed to the stricken area from Boston and other American points. Foodstuffs, supplies came from everywhere to ease the suffering of the city. The city was placed under martial law.

The news was flashed around the world. Immediately offers of help began to pour in from every quarter of the globe. Within a few weeks a relief fund of well over five million dollars was collected for the stricken city and a suffering population.

It is what seemed to be a miracle only a few members of the crews of the "Mont" and the "Mont Blanc" were killed.

hicles," Fabian replied.

Twenty Hours At Stretch.

Questioned concerning hours of work, Mr. Fabian said that in the case where truck drivers worked twenty hours at a stretch.

"This is the case for drivers of public commercial vehicles and for those who drive for private companies longer. One of the longest runs is from Toronto to Montreal and back."

Government regulations that state hours of work for truck drivers should not be more than ten hours per day are "being broken all the time", Fabian said.

Practically the law passed by the Ontario government to transport operations are not used in the majority of cases, he said.

Regulation of Trucks.

Fabian urged regulation of both public commercial vehicles and private trucks. He said conditions of the private haulers in the fruit industry were "very bad during the season."

"In some cases truckers are reported to have come from the Niagara Peninsula to New Liskeard without sleep. Some work day and night for $10 a week," he said. Under the sale grocery business conditions the fake advertising that was carried on with snow and apparently was caused the public a loss of time on the road, when the motor car collided with a southbound truck driven by Arthur Currie, R.R. No. 6, Belleville. Both vehicles were proceeding at a rate of speed that was a serious damage resulted. Miss Moore was hurled from the car by the force breaking causing the face laceration while the fracture was caused by the impact against the dash.

The second accident investigated by Traffic Officer Ervine happened a few hundred feet east of the city limits on Highway No. 2, when a motor car driven by Clifford Hardisty, Ave., and driven by Arthur Currie and Miss Ruby Mitchell, who were walking on the side of the road. Both were pinned between the Belleville General Hospital ambulance driven by Ervine and was attended by Dr. R. J. Branscombe, while Miss Mitchell was treated at the hospital.

LaRue stated he was proceeding easterly, when he met a west bound car. "The lights of the car blinded me momentarily," he stated, and the people walking on the side of the road until my car struck them," he added. No charges had been laid in either case at noon.

TWO INJURED IN CAR CRASHES

Miss Lora Moran, Frankford And Arthur Currie, City, Taken to Hospital

Motor vehicular traffic was slowed down considerably over the week-end with the advent of the first heavy fall of snow, that resulted in two motor accidents and ultimately brought two patients to the Belleville General Hospital, neither of them, however, seriously injured, however. Both accidents were investigated by Motorcycle Policeman Sam Ervine quite a coincidental happened only a short distance outside of the city limits.

Miss Lora Moran, Frankford, sustained a compound fracture of the nose and a deep laceration beneath the left eye, when the automobile in which she was riding, and driven by Harry Hanna, Frankford, collided with another motor car immediately north of the College St. intersection of North Front St. at midnight last night. Miss Moran was removed to the hospital where she was attended by Dr. Austin Wallace.

Mr. Hanna informed Constable Ervine he was proceeding northerly on the pavement, that was heavily with snow and apparently was caused the accident. The car of the other car, driven by Clifford Hardisty, Ave., and driven by Arthur Currie and Miss Ruby Mitchell, who were walking on the side of the road. Both were pinned between the Belleville General Hospital ambulance driven by Ervine and was attended by Dr. R. J. Branscombe, while Miss Mitchell was treated at the hospital.

LaRue stated he was proceeding easterly, when he met a west bound car. "The lights of the car blinded me momentarily," he stated, and the people walking on the side of the road until my car struck them," he added. No charges had been laid in either case at noon.

FIRST SNOWFALL BLANKETS CITY

Roads And Streets Become Slippery Requiring Cautious Driving

CHILDREN ARE HAPPY

Whirling out of the southwest shortly after noon on Sunday, the first real alert that later turned into white flakes of driven snow that blanketed the city and district in the first while mantle of the season.

Traffic officials advised to count trees, and transforming overgreens into things of beauty gave the countryside the appearance of a winter fairyland.

Increasing in density, the storm, unaccompanied by wind swept from the northern shores of Lake Ontario, in northerly direction covering highways at first with a slippery wet mass making vehicular traffic difficult and increasing winter fairyland.

QUINTE SEED GROWERS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Members of the Quinte Seed Growers' Association representing the central area comprising the district as far north as Peterborough, were present at the annual meeting held this afternoon in the Front Street office of the Dominion Government seed inspector. The meeting was presided over by Arthur Alexander Hillier, president of the association during the past year.

Routine business at the meeting of the date and location of next year's seed fair, and a resume of business done during the year will feature the late afternoon session.

SAND DISTRIBUTED

First calls for the free sand supply for the municipal roads in the city if containers are provided, and the first of the distributing of the sand and salt mixture to check the slippery street intersections and hills, was distributed today and yesterday by the department of Public works. The sand, it is pointed out, was dried from the bay for the purpose of sprinkling walks in the spring, and not intended for its use on side or private walks.

WINDOWS CLEANED WITHOUT USING WATER

Merchants of the city may install a simple and inexpensive device in removing the overnight grime from their windows this week, it was learned from Chief Hillier today. The device, the chief explained, is composed of a sponge rubber squeegee and a handle. The squeegee is moistened with a solution of ammonia and water and then rubbed over the window. The dirt is then removed with a dry cloth. The device is said to be more satisfactory than the use of water, which often freezes on the window.

SIX MEN EMPLOYED ON CATCH BASIN WALKS

Just a slight increase in man power employed was the result of the overnight snowfall which left a blanket of white from the city coated with a slippery covering of snow. This morning, six men of the department of public works started the first of the winter's work in the removal of the snow from cross walks and in front of city property. This, it was an addition, a total of about twelve men being given work this week on various outdoor activities, registering about one half from the relief list.

Ida and Feda Simkins and Sherry Jordan learned to read and write together yet, Ida being the black and white and brown haired one and Sherry the reddish one, so people most always looking for a place to reading different parts of the Sunday paper and we put Scratcher on the top step and he started to scratch the door and Feda rang the bell while me and Sherry and Sid hid in the next door vestibule, and pop opened the door and Feda said, Your dog was scratching on the door to get in, Mr. Polis.

You know very well I have no dog, and if I did I'd soon teach him not to scratch the paint off my door, take that mutt away and keep him away, pop said.

And he slam the door and pretty soon Feda came in the vestibule to hide with me and Sid while Sherry rang the bell, and pop opened the door and Sherry started to say something and pop said, Are you going to make a speech about this mangy looking beast?

He was scratching on your door, Sherry said, and pop said, Now look here and mark me well, even if you found a wood cutter working on my back gate it wouldn't move me in the least, and furthermore, even without any definite proof that my son has a hand in this, I'll make him suffer if this animal, vegetable or mineral is brought to my attention once more.

Sherry I wouldn't leave Sid Hunt take his turn, and we took a walk and left Scratcher scratch on 4 front doors and rang the front bells without any good result.

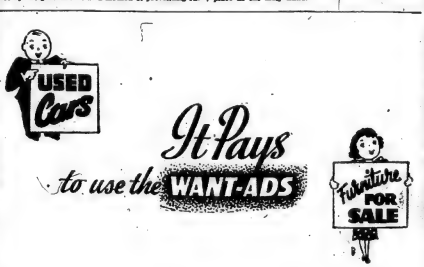
GENERAL ERICH LUDENDORFF, TO-DAY AND IN 1917

General Erich Ludendorff, stricken German world war commander is shown above as he appeared in 1917 as chief of German staff and as he looked in a recent photo.

Climbing the gangplank of the troopship, Dunera, which will take them to Egypt, are members of the 3rd battalion of the Coldstream Guards. The troops boarded the boat at Southampton.



An artist's conception of the project known as Marine Studios, the world's two largest aquaria, specially designed for use as under-water motion picture studios, is shown ABOVE. To be constructed at St. Augustine, Fla., the huge tanks will house a collection of sharks, barracuda, seals, porpoise, giant rays and other marine creatures. An unusual feature will be the arrangement of portholes all about the tanks which will permit visitors to study the inmates in the nearest imitation of their natural habitat of which man is capable.

The ancient game of chess has been "reorganized" to conform to present day German standards of militarism, and the photograph ABOVE explains the changes better than we could in a column of type. Instead of the familiar bishops, queens, rooks and pawns, the new German edition of chess, called "Tak-Tik," has figures representing infantry men, tanks, artillery batteries, bombing aeroplanes and fighting aeroplanes. The board is divided by diagonal lines, representing a road and a river and two other lines marking off red and blue territory. The whole idea is to teach German youth the rudiments of military strategy, and the two Nazi troopers shown playing the game seems to be very serious about the whole thing.

While his comrade stands guard, a British policeman is shown (ABOVE) searching an Arab for hidden arms in Palestine. The procedure was put into practice by the government as a method of preventing further outbreaks of terrorism in Palestine. Numerous Arabs have been arrested and Arab leaders outlawed because of violence and murders which have taken place in the Holy Land.

MAYOR W. D. ROBBINS RALPH C. DAY

In one of the quietest election campaigns ever experienced in Toronto, Poly candidates presented themselves to voters for election to the position of Mayor of the city. Two of the outstanding candidates shown above: Mayor W. D. Robbins, in municipal affairs for almost 30 years, is seeking re-election on his past record. Ralph C. Day, member of the board of control for 1937, and former alderman, is also appealing to the electorate to send him to the mayor's chair for 1938.

While the head of the family, Ernest Zeoli, allegedly crazed, tries to prevent their escape, his children are shown on the porch roof of their home in Boston, Mass., screaming for help to the crowd that had congregated below. Zeoli's six children—either leaped or were thrown from their second storey dwelling into nets held by firemen before police subdued the father with tear gas. John Queenan, Boston newspaper photographer who made this exclusive photo, is suffering from effects of gas inhaled while "shooting the action."

Official fear lines the tragic end of Amelia Earhart's ocean flight is impeding efforts of Miss Beatie Owen (ABOVE) to get a bureau of U.S. air commerce permit for her planned solo hop to South America cities. A former San Francican, Miss Owen flew to San Francisco from Santa Barbara, while waiting for the official okeh.

Pancheu Lama, above, the living Buddha of Tibet, is reported to have died in exile at Jyekundo in western China, according to reports which have reached Shanghai. Worshipped as a reincarnation of Buddha himself, Pancheu Lama was exiled in 1924 by the Dalai Lama, supreme temporal lord of Tibet. Following his exile the Pancheu Lama adopted western fashions and was fond of modern dances, motion pictures, radio, and expensive automobiles.

Noted speed flier and winner of the 1937 Thompson trophy race at Cleveland, Rudy Kling, ABOVE, was killed in an air crash during the opening day of Miami's tenth annual all-American air manoeuvres. Also killed in the crash was Frank Haines, 36-year-old Detroit flier. The crash occurred when the aeroplanes they were flying were caught in a down-draft of air as they turned about the first pylon at the beginning of a 5-mile race. Both aeroplanes spun out of control and struck the ground 150 yards apart almost simultaneously.

While most clergymen confine their efforts to fighting the fires of the hereafter by depriving said fires of potential fuel, the Rev. Delbert L. Kinney, of Berne, N.Y., believes in putting the damper on blazes right now. He is shown (above) in his uniform as chief of the Berne fire department. On two occasions fires interrupted his Sunday sermons, for it is the reverend smoke-eaters slogan that "sermons can wait, Fires can't."

Highest Place and Special Commendation for Ontario Intelligencer Advertisement

In a recent contest conducted by The Lockwedge Shoe Company, Limited of Perth, Ontario, for the best advertisement for the M. W. Locke Shoes, published in any newspaper in Canada, the one published in this newspaper by M. Leslie, Shoemen of Belleville, was awarded the place of highest merit. The advertisement was compared in the advertising department of the Ontario Intelligencer and put in type by our expert advertisement setters. Mr. W. Locke shoe dealers all over Canada competed, and Mr. Leslie received a letter from the sponsors of the contest from which the following paragraphs are self-explanatory:

DEAR MR. LESLIE—The Judges have completed the task of checking over all advertisements submitted in the recent advertising contest, and it is my pleasant privilege to advise you that the advertisement submitted by you was considered THE MOST OUTSTANDING OF ALL ENTRIES.

. . . . . .

I am requested to inform you that for the VERY FINE ADVERTISEMENT SUBMITTED WE SHALL BE PLEASED TO PAY THE ENTIRE COST, if you will kindly let us have your debit note to cover the cost of this space.

JAPANESE TROOPS

(Continuing from Page One)

He said, however, no question of a British protest or of demands for compensation had arisen. The spokesman added that Japanese authorities had no statement to make about the incident.

Japan's Air Force spread its wings over a broad area of the Central China front, apparently in preparation for a swift attack on Nanking.

With the fall of Kiuyung, 30 miles east of China's evacuated capital, Japanese commanders predicted capture of Nanking would be a matter of only a few days.

Fired Fuel Tanks

A Japanese spokesman said air raiders bombed and set fire to fuel tanks, airdromes and Chinese defence positions in the vicinity of Nanking.

He said Japanese planes flew deep into China's interior and destroyed four large bombers and 10 smaller planes, all allegedly of Russian manufacture, at Lanchowfu, capital of Kansu, the province bordering Tibet. The Chinese pursuit ships also were reported shot down.

Japanese naval fliers were said to have destroyed a Chinese airdrome in a bombing raid at Kungsien, near the Lunghai Railroad, China's main east-west trunk line.

The Japanese spokesman disclaimed any knowledge of Japanese air attacks on British shipping at Wuhu, Yangtze River port about 60 miles south-southwest of Nanking.

The commander of the British gunboat Ladybird and two other Britons were injured when Japanese planes raided the Wuhu waterfront yesterday.

River Steamers Hit

Two British river steamers were hit. The 3,770-ton Tuck-Wo, belonging to the Indo-China Steam Navigation Company, was set afiame and was believed to be a total loss.

Officials of the company said they understood the Tuck-Wo had between 2,000 and 3,000 Chinese refugees aboard.

The crew of the other British ship the Lichow Tatung, owned by the China Navigation Company, beached the vessel on the Yangtze shore after British naval men helped get her out of danger.

Several civilians aboard a launch belonging to the British Asiatic Petroleum (Shell) Company were reported wounded by bomb fragments. Relief some Britons were aboard was not confirmed.

Japanese said only Chinese junks carrying Chinese troops were bombed. They explained the attacks were aimed at between 30,000 and 50,000 Chinese troops said to be retreating across the river in native craft.

DOCTOR'S HANDS IMMORTALIZED IN BRONZE

Famous Italian Sculptor Comes to Canada Upon Unique Commission

HONOR RURAL DOCTOR

Whose Skill Brought Army of Suffers From all World to His Door

Dene Burelli, famous Italian sculptor whose studio is now in Chicago, has arrived in Williamsburg, Ontario, to begin work upon a commission entrusted to him.

Dr. Burelli will model the hands of Dr. M. B. Locke from life, returning to Chicago to suspend the casting of the finished bronze.

"Friends of Dr. Locke" a recently organized group of men and women in the United States and Canada, who have benefited from treatments by Dr. Locke, are making the bronze cast possible. A bronze will be given the famous medico in Ottawa and a Testimonial Book signed by the Locke patients from all parts of Canada and the United States will be presented to the doctor.

It is planned to present the bronze replica of the hands of Dr. Locke to the Dominion Government to be placed on view in some suitable public institution.

NINE ACCIDENTAL

Mrs. Elizabeth McCart, 53, was killed, Norman Hoose was critically injured and three other persons were less seriously hurt when two cars collided Sunday in North York, Toronto district. A car driven by Hoose skidded on a pavement made slippery by snow and rain and struck one driven by David McDowell, Toronto.

Nine-year-old Marion Groves died in a spectacular 135-foot fall into a stream of small trunk driven by her mother, Mrs. Ada Groves, 34, who was seriously injured when rushing to a church at Hamilton. Two young brothers of Marion also were hurt. The crash followed a light snow that made the highway slushy.

Car Leaps Curb

In other traffic accidents, Harold Koepp, 14, died at Dunbarton after being struck by a truck. Walking in a Toronto suburb, Mrs. Laura Barwick, 61, died when a car which leaped a curb after a collision with another machine. Three others were injured.

Lorne Trask, 30, was fatally injured near Burlington when two cars collided. Three others were hurt. Wilfrid Lapointe, Winchester, N. Y., was charged with manslaughter.

Ten year old Joseph St. Michel was killed in the Nominckebre River at Renfrew when the ice broke as he played with his companions. A woman on shore sought unavailingly to reach the boy with a pole and rope. Going on the ice of the Thessalon River at Sault Ste. Marie, Ralph Fullerton, 13, was drowned Saturday, when the ice gave way under his weight.

Fewer Probe Death

Police investigation of the death of 28-year-old Roy Manley was under way today at St. Catharines. Manley's body was found Saturday night beneath the Burgoyne bridge. Indications were that he had fallen 80 feet from the bridge to a concrete pavement. A widow and two children survive.

Heavy falls of wet, clinging snow were reported from many western Ontario points. At London, the fall measured 9.1-3 inches, with a half-inch of rain also officially recorded during the week end. Two inches of snow covered Kitchener; a two-inch fall also was reported from Guelph with lesser falls at other points.

The 400-foot grain carrier Brucolith ran aground on a shoal at Goderich Saturday while trying to make her winter berth during a blinding snowstorm. Loaded with 350,000 bushels of wheat, the vessel was fast on the bar until Sunday when refloated without damage.

Late Shopping is UNFAIR to SANTA CLAUS

AND it's unfair to you and the stores and the postman; the overworked miss behind the counter, the folks who sell gifts, the folks who buy 'em and the ones that get 'em!

Listen! Why PUNISH yourself this year? Why fight your way through a mob ten-deep? Why take a chance on finding the very things you want to buy gone — SOLD OUT! Why deliberately turn what can be a leisurely, pleasure-ly shopping jaunt into a SCRAMBLE? Have a heart, lady . . .

don't—don't do it again this year!

Start working on that gift list now. Begin early and you can take it slow and easy. Shop the ads in the Ontario Intelligencer for Christmas gift suggestions. Make up your mind to enjoy being Santa Claus this year, and—

Nine Present Trustees Elected to Serve Board of Education

In one of the keenest elections held in this city in many years, Jamieson Bone, business broker and resident of this city for many years, was elected mayor over Alderman Harold J. Armstrong and Alderman William Harvey. Despite the fact that the weather was generally favorable, a large percentage of the vote turned out in being only slightly less than last year. Besides electing a new mayor, the election was evidently changed the personnel of the council, electing five new members to serve with seven others who held public office. Only one alderman of last year was defeated when the votes were counted. Also for the first time, the school trustees were elected by a general vote, the public school supporters instead of by the Ward system and there was a keen race for the nine places on the Board of Education. The Separate School Board will retain one member from their Board to complete the Board of Wisdom for the year 1938, and five elected on Monday hold their seats for two years and the other four one year.

One Woman In Field

Mrs. Alice Jones was the only woman running for office, she seeking a seat on the Board of Education and was only defeated by 16 votes and it required the full poll to be received until a definite announcement could be made. Three hundred votes is as (Continued on Page Three)

Duke of Gloucester May Visit Canada in Very Near Future

Always Had Incentive to Go Back to Fine Dominion

GO TO EAST COAST

London, Dec. 7.—(CP)—The Duke of Gloucester last night told a Canada Club dinner he hoped he and the Duchess might be able in the near future to go to Canada.

He recalled a brief visit he made to the Dominion in 1926, when he suffered an accident while playing polo.

At fortnight's holiday on the east coast of Canada, he said, would give better value for the money spent than a month in many overcrowded continental resorts.

The Duke recalled that he broke his collarbone in an accident accompanied with a fine landing on Canadian soil.

"What I heard and saw during that all too brief visit has remained with me ever since....as an incentive to go back there."

Since 1926 he had followed "the vastness of the Dominion, her empty problems and her peculiar genius for surmounting them, with an interest that I know will increase as the years go by."

Reciprocity of Visits

The Duke said that Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, had mentioned the large number of Canadians who came to England last summer on pilgrimage.

"He has told us Canada would welcome a greater reciprocity of visits," the Duke continued.

"I should like to endorse this suggestion with all the power at my command."

The dinner was a brilliant gathering of Canadian and British notables—Canadians from all walks of life in London attending.

Doris Archbishop of Canterbury, referring to the Coronation ceremony, told the guests that by the statute of Westminster "the King be-

THOS. FLEMING ELECTED REEVE OF HUNTINGDON

Carries Election by 472 Over 233 For Woods

West Huntingdon (Special) The contest for the township of Huntingdon Township was won by Thos. Fleming, winning by a majority of 239 over the present Reeve, R. S. Wood.

There was not as large a voting as usual due to snow storm causing the roads to be most dangerous. The result of each poll was.

	Fleming	Woods
No. 1 Moira	96	62
No. 2 W. Huntingdon	73	74
No. 3 Tyendinaga	120	17
No. 4 White Lake	77	85
No. 5 Black Lake	76	15
Totals	472	233

There was no contest for council. There was no contest for councillors. The present Reeve, Mr. R. S. Wood has served the township as Reeve for four years. He has also served for a number of years in his time in the interests of township affairs.

Mr. Fleming is a very popular young man and is widely known over the township. He has run this year's experience as councillor.

Political 'Isms' from Abroad Not to Hazard Western World

Undersecretary S. Welles Thinks Western Hemisphere is Safe

HASTY CONCLUSIONS

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP) — The Western Hemisphere in the opinion of Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, is in no danger of succumbing to propaganda from other continents.

Welles did not refer specifically to the sources of propaganda, but said in an address last night:

"Our democratic civilization of the Americas . . . will remain unimpaired by the fantasies which suffering people in other parts of the world have devised as panaceas for their own momentary ills and by the fallacious ideas which have sprung from them."

Welles said too many persons in the United States had jumped to a hasty conclusion, "unfounded on America.

WOULD CREATE 3 MILLION JOBS

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—A two-to-ten-year plan to create 3,000,000 new jobs through the expenditure of $25,000,000,000 by private industry of the United States was proposed today by Lammot Du Pont, president of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours and Co., in an address to the National Association of Manufacturers Convention.

FATHER COUGHLIN RETURNS TO AIR

Will Deal With Social And Economic Problems

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP) — Father Charles E. Coughlin, who abandoned the radio for a time in October as consequent to differences with his Archdiocese, announced today an indirect reproof from Rome, announced plans last night to return to the air.

Previously speaking again to deal with social and economic problems such as he referred to originally as "reform" addresses, Father Coughlin said he had received a communication from Rome "which absolutely cancelled after Archbishop Edward Mooney published letter for a reference to President Roosevelt.

The priest, in a joint announcement with Leo M. Fitzpatrick, vice-president of radio station WJR at Detroit, a station which broadcasts, over a 37-station network extending from Denver to Portland, Me., and into New England, would begin shortly after Jan. 1. The network would extend as far south as Cincinnati.

Driver Worked 66 Hours For $13.5 Says Fabian

Toronto, Dec. 7—(CP)—Investigation of 76 "extreme cases" of low wages paid by some Toronto motor transport companies showed the average employee worked 68 1-3 hours week for $18.50, Arthur Roebuck, Automotive Transport Workers' counsel told the Carter Royal Commission on transport today. Average hourly wage was 24 cents.

Ontario Provincial Police last year prosecuted 1,000 truck infractions of the public commercial vehicles regulation, L. G. Fabian, assistant commissioner of the Automotive Transport section of the Canadian National Railways Police employees, testified. He advocated scales on all highways, manned all day.

Overloading Charged

Fabian, a former highways inspector with the Provincial Police, said that in Northern Ontario he had found trucks licensed to carry 8,000 to 10,000 pounds, carrying 18,000 to 23,000.

Fabian listed further wages he said were paid in the trucking companies. Pilot Transport of Meaford paid a married man $30 a week for 84 hours. This employee was a driver and clerk. Another Pilot employee received $18 working 56 hours a week.

Ninety Planes Bombard City in Intensest Raid; Kai-Shek at Nanchang

Japanese Believe Chinese Will Concentrate in Honan

FINAL STAND

Apparently Doomed Nanking Closes Gates Against Foe

Shanghai, Dec. 7—(AP)— advance columns of Japanese troops assisting Nanking's historic walls tonight.

Japanese officers who announced the attack said a spearhead of the Japanese army attempting to climb the city's massive battlements with scaling ladders—a manoeuvre pandied down through the middle ages. Gates of the apparently doomed city were closed. Chinese who started a final stand which seemed destined to fall.

Japanese and their main forces had not yet reached the city but added that they were "progressing satisfactorily and according to schedule."

One-Time Fortress

The spokesman did not say how soon he expected the fall of the one-time fortnatehead of Nationalist China.

General Chiang Kai-Shek, China's leader, had left Nanking, Chinese advices disclosed. He and Madame Chiang, head of China's air force, were said to have departed by airplane for Nanchang, capital of the interior province of Kiangsi. The government evacuated Nanking two weeks ago.

Meagre foreign dispatches trickling through from Nanking confirmed Japanese reports that Hippon's aircraft had pounded the city with bombs. These advices, however, did not mention the extent of casualties or damage.

Japanese have asserted that 90 planes raided the city in the most intensive bombardment of the war thus far.

Tokyo, Dec. 7.—(AP)—Tokyo was in a state of ecstatic frenzy today, awaiting the fall of Nanking.

Nevertheless, it was generally believed capture of Nanking would not, mean the end or fighting. Japanese thought General Chiang-Kai-Shek would concentrate his forces in Honan Province and attempt to continue fighting with some sort of aid from Soviet Russia.

R. BURTT HEADS POLL IN TRENTON

Three of 1937 Council, Ellis, Westfall And Whitley Defeated

Trenton, Dec. 7.—(Special)—Approximately 50 per cent of the Trenton voters exercised their franchise in the council election held here yesterday. The majority of the voters were drawn to the polls by the fact that there was a council meetings in 1938. Only three members of last year's council were re-elected. Franco, the Insurgent Chief, May Make Oranges Dearer

Britain Will Not Recognize Insurgent Blockade

MINE-LAYING ILLEGAL

By GEORGE HAMILTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 7.—(CP Cable)—The Spanish civil war may mean dearer oranges for Christmas.

Gen. Franco's scheme to blockade Republican Spain, General Franco has decided to check the trade in Spanish oranges.

Oranges, Franco holds, when sold abroad, provide the Spanish government with foreign exchange with which to buy munitions. Report of oranges from republican ports, therefore, is a crime which must be stopped.

Sir Henry Chilton, the British Ambassador at Hendaye on the Franco-Spanish frontier today officially informed the insurgent authorities that Great Britain cannot recognize an insurgent blockade. He also told the insurgents that mine-laying, with the sole object of intercepting commercial trade, is a breach of international law,

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Dominion Services Meteorologist

Skiing and other winter sports! If you ski, gently the snow confetion for the first time this enjoyment. When snow falls at temperatures below freezing, it is in a finely divided state, in the form of ice crystals with sharp, radiating rays or prongs. These prongs hook into the snow flakes next to them, and thus cause the friction high. After awhile these prongs evaporate and the snow flake is left thin. This process tends to make the flake more open in structure. The granules set, so that the surface for the skis, and make a perfect skiing or gliding surface.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—A distinct area of increasing intensity is moving northward across the New England States, and considerable rain has occurred in many parts of Ontario and Quebec with this storm centre south of the Maritimes and Gulf. City and District News

QUIET ELECTION STATES POLICE

"Undoubtedly the quietest municipal election day in years, that is from the viewpoint of the police department," Belleville police authorities today when reviewing police activities of yesterday. Not a single call was made to police authorities during the day or at night, that would indicate disturbances or trouble arising out of election alterations. No arrests were necessary in the city yesterday, being the cell block at the police station available for the few patients, who sought warm sleeping quarters there last night.

HILL TOO SLIPPERY FOR LARGE TRANSPORT

Plan call for help on the part of any of the heavy transports using hills at the foot of the city, and have through traffic was received by the local department of public works early this morning when a large tractor and trailer owned by a Toronto firm found the hill too slippery with ice and snow to negotiate. With the assistance of others, the heavy vehicle was able to proceed.

This winter plan of cinders will be placed at the curbs of the steeper hills of the city by the local department, and they are a distinct relief from the hazards, obviating the necessity of the property householders of the street for ashes.

CAR STRIKES BUGGY HORSE IS KILLED

Struck by a car said to have been driven by Jack Haggerty of Chapel Valley, three Edward County, a horse owned and driven by Milton Carey of Alfred was instantly killed late Friday evening.

Matthew Haggerty or Kerr, who was in the buggy were hurt. It is alleged the buggy carried no riding light.

According to reports emanating from the scene of the accident, Haggerty did not notice the horse and buggy in time to avoid the crash was impossible. Following the impact, the car was hurled into the ditch where it was severely damaged.

WHEREABOUTS OF GIRL IS SOUGHT

Provincial and local police today were asked to assist in the safe location and possible recovery of a girl, who has been missing from her home in Oshawa since last October. The information was today received by Inspector Wilson, Detective O.P.P., from Chief O. D. Friend of Oshawa. The girl, whose name was given as Patricia Faulkner, aged 16 years, stands five feet, three inches tall and weighs about 125 pounds. Last seen the girl was wearing a dark green coat and hat, tam and has a small mole on her cheek, below the left ear. She was also described as having dark eyes and of fair complexion. Any information of the whereabouts of this girl should be immediately referred to the police authorities.

MINOR ACCIDENT ON PINNACLE ST.

A minor motor accident happened at the intersection of Pinnacle and Station Streets early today when a delivery truck driven by Lorne Bleasley, 5 Donald Street, collided with a motor car driven by Mrs. Hunter, 17 J. D. O'Flynn, damaging the latter vehicle round the radiator and front fenders somewhat. Mrs. Hunter O'Flynn was proceeding northerly on Pinnacle Street and was slowing down for the Station Street intersection stop sign, when the truck, after making a righthand turn on Station Street to proceed south on Pinnacle, struck the former vehicle. No person was injured and the matter was reported by the parties implicated in Sergeant Hartman at the police station.

'OLD TIMER' STICKS BY HIS PRINCIPLES

The market saw stuck to his weather-prediction guns this morning in spite of the fact that whirlwinds were blowing to a gravelly beard.

"Stranks, this is only a flash in the pan. We must have some signs of white but I still maintain that it will be mild and generally lacking in real cold weather and snowfall.

"The other day" he added, "we moved the machine shed on the farm and there all around us were flitterwms striking their heads against the boards, trying to get under the timbers and showed no disposition to disappear after removing the wood. What more signs do you want than that."

Asked if the present snow will stay, he shook his head. "Nope, there is no frost in the ground. Crops will be generally better, and the oats will make only yardstick appearances."

ONE VENDOR ONLY ON THE MARKET

Tuesday morning shoppers looking for produce and meats on the city market today were disappointed as only one vendor braved the wintry weather to offer a small stock of fruit and vegetables, "It has not been bad so far" he stated. Maybe it is because I have no opposition today, but the fact remains I have taken in from seven to eight dollars.

PENNY BANK DEPOSITS TOTAL $10,488.47

Evidence of the thrift exercised by pupils of Belleville public schools is seen in figures released today by the Department of Education with regard to deposits at present lying in the Penny Banks of the various institutions.

Total amount on deposit in the Belleville schools at the end of October 1937 amounted to $10,-488.47 as compared with $10,001.00 of a year ago. The average deposit per pupils depositing at the various schools is as follows—King George School, 82 per cent; Queen Victoria 28 per cent; Queen Alexandra 38 per cent; Queen Mary 42 per cent.

Other interesting figures released was the amount on deposit in Ontario which amounts to $1,286,-000.00 or 66 cents per school child as against $1,273,119.38 with 467 school contributing one year ago.

Obituary

ELGIN Y. CAUGHEY

Oshoway, Dec. 7.—(CP)—Elgin Y. Caughey, 58, well-known Oshoway businessman and prominent resident of Picton died in the hospital here on Monday after an operation. Only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex Caughey, Picton, he went into the hotel business about twenty-five years ago, operating hotels in Napanee, Tweed, Belleville and before coming to Oshoway twelve years ago to reside over the British Hotel. He was a prominent mason, being a member of St. John's Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Cobourg; St. John's Chapter, Palestine Preceptory, Hugh Hope and Ramses Shrine, Toronto. He was also a member of the Canadian Hotelmen's Association. Surviving are his widow, Ann Halliday and one son, Lester, of Cobourg.

LATE WILLIAM GORDON (Tweed)

The funeral of William Gordon took place Saturday afternoon, Dec. 4th, from his late residence at Tweed and there was a large attendance of friends who came to pay their last tributes of respect. An impressive service was conducted in the home by the Rev. R. R. Nicholson, pastor of the United Church of Tweed.

Interment was made in Tweed Cemetery and the service at the graveside was conducted by the same minister.

The bearers were Messrs. A. Cranston, L. Elliott, Frank Grail, Harold Brown, T. T. Graham, and Fred Stratton.

LATE MRS. MARY E. CHISHOLM (Toronto)

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Jane Chisholm, widow of George C. Chisholm, who died suddenly at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Aikins, 38 Brandon Place, Belleville, on Friday last, took place from the Thomas C. Patterson Funeral Home, 36 Everett St. Monday afternoon. The service in the chapel and the graveside in Kinwood Cemetery was conducted by Rev. T. Hocken, pastor of the Foxboro United Church of which the late Mrs. Chisholm was a faithful member during the years she made her home at Foxboro. It was only during the last few months of her illness that Mrs. Chisholm resided with her daughter at Belleville.

The bearers were Messrs. W. Hicks, W. Hall, T. Conklin, W. Henderson, W. Lidster and W. Prentice.

The funeral was largely attended.

MRS. WILLIAM BALFOUR

Ferrandine, received word today by Mrs. G. B. Scantlebury, 30 Highland Avenue, brought news of the death of Mrs. William Balfour, née Cecilia Rooney, a former resident of this city, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Harry Lovering, Regina, Sask.

The remains of the late Mrs. Balfour were taken to Balcarit, Saskatchewan, where interment was made. The funeral took place today.

Will Need More Room Says Produce Grader

"Just gathering up the loose ends; tackling some of the correspondence with which it was impossible to deal during the past week or so," was the reply of Mr. J. D. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader of the Belleville next year is a suitable location in which to hold it. We have investigated every facility the city offers, but we will need more room, for the next one we hold will even be better than ever."

Dozens of daily papers in Canada as well as the trade journals of the dairying industry, have declined comment to the recent exhibition, which has done more to advertise Belleville than anything else of recent date it was pointed out.

FORTY DESERVING CASES PROVIDED WITH GLASSES

Kinsmen's Club Provide Underprivileged Children With Eye Glasses

MORE FUNDS NEEDED

A number of the underprivileged children of the city between the ages of nine and twelve will be the guests of the Kinsmen's Club of this city at a Christmas banquet to be held in the Queen's Hotel on Monday, December 20th, it was decided at the regular meeting and banquet of the club held in the popular Front Street hostelry last night.

The banquet will be held in a private dining room and the Christmas tree and "all the trimmin's" being in evidence. Presents will be distributed to the small guests by their hosts during the evening.

Featuring the meeting last night was the election and installation of directors from which the official who will guide the destinies of the club for the coming year will be chosen. The slate consists of Messrs. Cleo Dolphin, Cathy Lloyd, Doc Roy, William Hurst, Gardner Duff, Jeff. Maxwell Dr. Ralph Bird and Norman Carbolt, 1937 president.

A resume of the work done by the club during the year in the short sponsorship of the Kye Chinie Club, underprivileged children was given by Dr. Ralph Bird. Forty pairs of glasses have been purchased while a number of other deserving cases are now under observation. Upwards of three hundred dollars will be spent by the club during the year by the end of the year Dr. Bird said in applying for more funds with which to carry on.

A guest of the club last night, and old member who is now actively connected with Kinsmen's work in Ottawa, was Jack Norris who with Mrs. Norris spent the first few days in the city amid big friends. Mr. Norris in a brief address, told of the work being done by the Ottawa Club, and the boys there weren't any better than any old club in Belleville."

Irrepressible Cleo Colling, acting as toast-master promptly collected the usual fine for "derogatory remarks," to the amusement of the gathering.

Vocal solos by Kinsmen Jack Hubbard were up to the general entertainment.

NEW AIR RECORDS

The race to establish, from international air records, corollary of European armament race, is on. Great Britain preparing vigorously for assults on current distance and speed marks.

The Society of British Aircraft Constructors, Ltd., has made public plans to attempt capture of these records with planes of the service type.

"The Air Ministry," said the society, "is formulating the specifications of setting new land plane speed and distance records by special preparation of types of structures now in series production for the Royal Air Force."

The National Aeronautic Association in the United States announced last August that Italy had displaced the United States as chief holder of the world's speed records to the United States' 43. Great Britain held only four.

The world's greatest land plane speed in the air, set at 352 miles an hour by America's Howard Hughes, was boosted early this month at Augsburg, Germany, to 379.05 m.p.h. by a German pilot. The current non-stop distance record is held by Russia, at 6,262 miles.

Commercial aviation is linked directly with the R.A.F. in a scheme to perfect the kingdom's fighting forces.

"Likely aspirant for the position of challenger (for speed)," said the society, "is the Supermarine Spitfire single-seater fighter, officially stated to be the world's fastest military aeroplane and probably capable of speeds in the neighborhood of the present record when carrying its full military load."

As distance challenger, the Society offered the Vickers Wellesley "geodetic" bomber which is being supplied in large quantities for the R.A.F.

"Elimination of military load, installation of extra fuel tanks, and arrangement for the comfort of two pilots might provide a vehicle capable of a flight of some 7,000 miles non-stop at economical cruising speeds," the Society announced.

The route would be from Cranwell or Mildenhall aerdromes to Singapore, a great-circle distance of 6700 miles. A further flight of 4,500 miles to Sydney, Australia was suggested as the second leg of the trip.

Of further interest was a training scheme by which "100 R.A.F. pilots are to be attached to air liners of Imperial Airways and British Airways for individual cut-and-hone flights during the first stage of an important scheme to provide service pilots with experience in long flights outside the British Isles and in weather conditions that are seldom met in this country."

Bomber pilots, it was said, would be the first recruits, and all military pilots would practice flying, navigation, radio communication and weather forecasting.

Gibraltar's Guns

The guns opposite to Gibraltar are becoming rather like King Charles' head in Mr. Dick's pageant-ical. A little variety—precious little—has been introduced by calling the Spanish guns, and this night is extended to embrace the whole volume of international peace in future questioning by the House. Future bombing there is hoped to be, although recently Mr. Noel Baker drew from Hoare the assurance that the "new threat" to Gibraltar had been limited to four 13-in. howitzers, mounted in the Spanish fairgrounds after the shelling of Algeciras, that two of these had been withdrawn, and that their emplacement would not have enabled them to be used to bombard the fortress of the Rock. Assuming that these alarmed gunfires are with the 15-inch-gun battleship or two joining in the game from seaward there would soon cease to be any game worth playing. But the real secret of the funk at the prospect of being hit seems quite definitely to be the imaginative remedy of hitting back.—Truth (London).

Jack in The Hammock

From time immemorial the British navy ratings have had a plan in their hammocks when they are afloat. Every man is served with a hammock, which he turns into bedding below decks, and it is quite a sight to see hundreds of sailors lashing their network beds and hoisting them aboard ship. Sometimes for some extraordinary reason, or for no reason at all, the Admiralty never took the hammocks away from sailors on different sizes. The hammocks are still standardized, and the man who is air feet or over in his socks has a hammock 6 feet 6 inches which might be just right for a man who is about 4 foot shorter.

Now that the enlarged Hammocks are to be supplied for the men; not one can be found for the hammock. The long man will get a longer hammock. The short men were the project over the ends to be pedicured. Can any good come of it?

Dr. Johnson of dictionary fame defined a hammock as being "reclining bed slung with cords at equal distances with interstices between them." Perhaps the Admiralty is interested to know that it is the "interstices" that the men sleep in comfortably.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Prince Wales Red Tie

A story of how the Duke of Windsor as Prince of Wales was used as a guinea pig for some of America's ace advertisers in promoting the sale of a huge quantity of red silk in America was told for the first time by Judge Samuel Untermyer, well known advertising counsel, as he addressed the Friday Night Supper Club of the Advertising Affairs.

Withholding the identity of the principals in the amazing affair, Mr. Livingstone related that one of America's leading manufacturers of the throne, big United States silk manufacturers guessed wrong the anticipated demand for red silk in women's styles in the coronation year. Germans to the rescue could see nothing but a complete loss on the stock so called in certain advertising counsellors for advice, he said.

Tough Problem

"It was a tough problem but after a couple of days' study the counsellors went to the manufacturers and said they had an idea they would try," the advertising man said. "They sent a wire to the Duke of Windsor and the men went to one of the Prince of Wales' secretaries. They asked if the Prince of Wales Prince of Wales was greatly interested in the support of a certain hospital. Being told that was true, they asked the secretary if the Prince would mind if they contributed $10,000 to the hospital's endowment of the secretary in assuring the men the Prince would have 'no' objection.

A Red Tie

"The only thing the Prince has to do for that contribution is to wear a red silk tie when he appears at Ascot next week," the men informed the secretary. The story goes the secretary conferred with the Prince and the Prince agreed to fulfil the simple requirement."

The speaker related that the Prince's appearance at the most fashionable race meet of the world wearing a red silk tie was flashed by wire throughout the world within a matter of hours. A heavy demand for similar red silk ties sprang up in both Europe and America immediately, he said.

In 30 days the mills' surplus stock of red silk was gone and the silk manufacturers had to start manufacturing more red silk to make more red neckties."

The speaker told the story to illustrate a point that the man whose business is to sell goods to the public must know human nature. The men who induced the Prince to wear the red tie knew human nature through and through, he remarked.

ARMSTRONG RUNS SECOND

For Mayor—Jamieson Bones, 1685; Armstrong, 1506; Harvey, 761.

For Aldermen (in order of finish) —Thomas T. Wills, 1740; Clarence E. Thompson, 1683; Harry W. Rollins, 1572; Laurie Lewis, 1504; Jesse W. Bartlett, 1484; McLean Haig, 1414; J. Elson "Eddie" Logan, 1333; G. Clifford Bargar, 1308; Dr. John A. Marshall, 1252; Thomas Cushing, 1217; Burton F. Jennings, 1130; Andrew R. Kennedy, 1070; Raymond Carr, 1027; Ernest J. Baldree, 983; Sidney L. Howell, 965; Leonard Sammon, 866; Robert H. Martin, 856; Benjamin Safa, 842; Isaac Stephenson, 713.

The School Trustees (in order of position), were: Ernest A. Hyde, 1483; F. Russell Wotten, 1443; Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, 1396; Charles H. Hyde, 1238; H. B. Petterly, 1216; Ernest J. Baldree, 1187; Arthur Carter, 1019; Howard J. Allin, 1013; Percy McGuire, 900; Mrs. Alice Logie, 894; George H. Griffin, 894; Raymond Zufelt, 813; Rev. L. R. Wight, 771; W. J. Harrison, 721; Arthur Wesley, 347.

Belleville residents will enjoy Daylight Saving from the last Saturday in May until midnight of Labor Day by the result of the vote on the by-law on Monday. There was a considerable change of opinion from the last time the by-law was voted on when Daylight Saving was defeated by 84 votes. On Monday the majority for Daylight Saving was 1,656, the vote being for 3,079, against 1,423.

Vote is Close

The vote for the Mayoralty was exceedingly close and it was not until the last few poll returns were received was there a definite trend to one candidate. In the past few minutes came in Harold Armstrong piles up a substantial lead especially in the railway polls, Coleman and Bleecker Wards, but Jamieson Bones, the newly elected Mayor scored heavily in Sammon and Ketcheson wards. Foster Ward gave Armstrong a slight majority, while Baldwin Ward was practically an even affair. In Murray Ward, Mr. Bone had a slightly ahead. William Harvey, the third candidate for Mayor ran third in all the way and was ahead in only one poll, Bleecker 12. In the aldermen field Thomas T. Wills ran at the head of the poll and was never in danger of losing that position. Clarence Thompson was a close second and Harry Rollins, a new comer ran third all the way, Laurie Lewis, handling one of the most difficult operations of the City Council portfolio of the Department of Welfare, ran a good fourth. He was in the fight all the way for the top of the poll, polling a steady vote throughout the city.

McLean Haig, a newcomer to the council was also elected with Jesse W. Barlow the veteran of the council to fifth place, a position he had held ever since he ran for council. Eddie Logan was a good seventh and Cliff Bargar eighth. Burton Jennings increased his standing over last year, while Aldermen Kennedy and Cushing dropped down from their positions of last year. Raymond Carr, Dr. John A. Marshall are other newcomers to the Aldermanic Board and ran well in their first year. In the race for School Trustee, Col. Ernest J. Carey was always in front with Russell Wotten a close second. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne ran third place with Charles Hyde in fourth, Mr. Petterly fifth and the rest closely bunched. The election throughout was closely contested.

tribution of $4,000,000 from the Dominion and Provincial Governments, was defeated by an estimated 3 to 1 vote of ratepayers. The election returns also showed the electorate preferred Jan. 1 as the date of all future elections.

Cenbey Heads Poll

Controllers Fred J. Cenbey, who headed the poll, Fred Hamilton and William J. Wadsworth were re-elected to the Board of Control. The new member of the four-man Board will be J. D. McNish, barrister and former alderman who defeated Councillor Chas. Buck by a 254-vote majority after a nip and tuck battle.

Day headed the vote for Board of Control last year and has had years of previous experience in city council and two years on the Board of Control.

The complete Controller figures: Cenbey, 20,881; Fitzgerald, 13,782; Hamilton, 17,463; McNish, 14,462. Buck polled 14,143 votes.

Under the housing by-law, $6,-000,000 would have been expended, provided the provincial and federal governments co-operated, upon a 35% decrease in the slum clearance grant. The money was to have been expended over a period of seven years, vote for 794 of the 851 polls: For, 13,997; Against 25,378.

The last two years Buck and McNish for the fourth position on the Board of Control are seen-saw throughout the night.

Secretary of the Communist party of Canada, Buck began to publicly favor Communism in 1918 In 1931, he was sentenced to a five year penitentiary term upon conviction of being an officer of an unlawful association. He was released in 1934 and in the following year was elected in Ward Two North in the Dominion general election.

LIFE OF WRITER TOLD TO Y'S MEN

Collegiate Teacher Speaks on Life of O. Henry, Famous Author

"Short stories written by William Sidney Porter brought only $27 when I would now get all over $1000", said Horace Thomas, teacher of English at the Collegiate, when addressing the Y's Men last evening, at their weekly supper. Porter is considered one of the wittiest and most humorous writers in American history.

"Born of rather poor parentage, Porter was educated by an aunt who brought out his genius", said Mr. Thomas. Porter left Texas for his health and began writing stories of the West. Later started a paper, a weekly paper which did not prove successful and found a job as reporter. A few years after he started on the paper he was charged with embezzlement and skipped the country instead of facing the charge, for which he was innocent. He drifted around South America for a number of years before he finally came back to Texas to face the charge. He was convicted and sentenced to jail for five years but was given an easy job in the hospital of the penitentiary, where he was able to develop his talent writing short stories".

"Some of his short stories were written in prison", said Mr. Thomas.

"Upon his release he was given a job in New York, as a writer and there spent the remainder of his time writing for a New York news syndicate."

President Lorne MacDougall was in the chair and Alex Weir invited the numerous guests. The speaker was introduced to the club by Joe Ebbett and thanked by Jack Wilson.

TRANSPORT WAGE

Cases Cited

Other cases listed by Pilkian were: Gordon Strathdee Transport, Toronto, $13 for a driver for a married driver.

Walker Transport, Welland, $16 to a clerk for 55 hours.

Provincial-Ottawa Express Lines, Limited, Ottawa, $13 to a driver for a week of 51 hours; $18.50 to another employee for 71 hours.

Ottawa Transportation, $18 to a driver for 54 hours; $18 to another employee for 60 hours.

"If these hours are correct, they are inhuman," said Mr. Roebuck.

Chairman's Comments

"There is no question of that," said Mr. Justice E. R. K. Cherrier, Commission Chairman.

Pilkian said Martin Transport, Ottawa, paid a driver $18 for 58 hours and a warehouseman $12 for 51 hours. Alexander Transport, Ottawa, earned $18 for 58 hours.

"So far there has not been a single fair wage said for the operators," commented Mr. Justice Cherrier.

The cases shown are the most extreme cases," said Mr. Roebuck. "They are not supposed to be the general average." Mr. Roebuck said he would put operators who paid reasonable wages in the witness box.

HOME ACCIDENTS

deaths, 50-59 with 1,250, then 15-39 with 1,254 deaths, 5-14 with 218, one to four 443, less than one year 1,254.

Deaths from food poisoning, gas and other poisoning, fire, other burns, mechanical suffocation, drowning and heat were all more numerous in homes than elsewhere. Thirty-eight persons were drowned at home, in bath-tubs, wells and cisterns.

Stay-at-Home Sufferers

Home accidents were heaviest in the stay-at-homes age group, those of 70 and over, killing 1,250 persons, 518 men and 832 women.

Election Enquiries Give News Staff a Busy Night

Hundreds of Phone Calls Testify to Public Interest in Municipal Affairs

HUMOROUS QUESTIONS

Congratulations of victory may be ringing in the various mayoral, aldermanic and school trustee sanctums this morning but there are several of these human appendages today of that are still reverberating to the shrill exemptions of whirring telephone bells. Last night the officials of the Ontario Intelligencer received a fire department with seventy-five fire alarms ringing in at the same time.

For in spite of the fact that during the early hours a mere or less lackadaisical electorate polled their vote in a methodical manner, it by no means meant that interest in the civic elections was dead.

They may not have gone to the polls collectively but judging from the incessant ringing of telephones that started, believe it or not, shortly before seven o'clock and continued until the early hours of the morning, the seven ages of man reached, in fact, and duly indicated a steady parade to the family drug store and corner grocery telephone booths in a manner that would fascinate any booking IIka a one-man parade.

Bell and buns, buns and bell, telephones played an enshrined election symphony that crescendoed to its climax at six o'clock. Over the hot wires trickled the votes with information—sending public in inflections and variety of questions that had members of the staff in a semi-daze. Even the telephone girls of the Bell Telephone Company an appreciated staff of trained operators rendered yeoman service and magnificently in the smart manner in the success of the service given the public from this office.

Incessant Ringing of Phones

The ringing of the phone got so time to figure out what they intended to say before the ringing began. Chairman, Neither did they catch up with their breath. Some 15 to 20 must have seemed to them that the only numbers listed in the complimented staff of trained operators rendered yeoman service and magnificently in the smart manner in the success of the service given the public from this office.

Incessant Ringing of Phones

The ringing of the phone got so time to figure out what they intended to say before the ringing began. Chairman, Neither did they catch up with their breath. Some 15 to 20 must have seemed to them that the only numbers listed in the compliments of the day. Then there was scarcely a break in the incessant jangle of bells and buns.

An idea of the activities of the telephone may be derived from the fact that a member of the staff of this paper, assigned to the City Hall, was interrupted seven times by fly-free salvoes to contact his editor.

Other members of editorial family of this family journal sat at the phones in relays. Methodically they gave out the information at hand. Humor, pathos at times, sincerity, and sympathy were some of the human sensations that characterized the local inflections of the many voices that came over the line. Even sports parlance marked the speeches of many. "Make Jack," while sweet young things in gentle soprano added a touch of less musical note to the grief stricken and at times trombonic gutturals of the male of the species.

Post-information exclamations brought forth a wealth of humor at times. Some enthusiasts and supporters gave vent to their appreciation in many expressions. Armstrong's public were the same, as the news was given out that their favorite had again assumed the lead.

The quavering voices of elderly people in clear enunciation signified the interest of the seventies and eighties. Shrill voices of young Belleville announced their quotes into telephone transmitters, while Dad sat near the radio reading the sport page or listening to out-of-town election results.

"What's the Score?"

"Hiyah, what's the score now" rolled in from the city editor told that Bons had staged a third period rally to score 101 goals and overtime was in the offing, he gave vent to a loud guffaw and hung up.

"Howah the mayor's running?" rang out a raccatach fan. "Off to a good start. Have the cheer and fast with the favorites running neck and neck," came the reply.

Another apparently thinking this staff was conducting an investigating bureau demanded, "Have you got anything on the Aldermen at all?"

Yet another, after having received the information concerning the standing of the various candidates demanded, "Tell that to Joe, Dad wants it too."

One voice or elector, disgusted with the election trend gave vent to a word that is not allowed over the air. "Well, my wife's allowed to swear over the phone," he was told. "Well, she wouldn't," he growled.

However, by the majority of calls that came in, a deep interest in the outcome of the election was manifested. At midnight 20% of the telephone girls had left the city hall.

Up until eleven o'clock 1186 telephone calls were answered by the staff phone operators. This number does not include the calls that were relayed to the office of the Ontario Intelligencer, A rough estimate of the number would be in the vicinity of fifteen hundred.

ial offices last night sat an elderly gentleman. Keen interest was marked on his face as the various returns came in. He arose once and stood on his feet, his head craned toward a door where aldermanic returns were being made. As the list of successful candidates was read out he emitted a sigh of satisfaction. A smile illuminated his features. "I had hoped the best would win," he said. He was seventy-year-old Mr. J. B. Carr, farmer residing in Musclow, North Hastings, who made the long trek to the city to see his son, Raymond Carr successfully negotiate the aldermanic ladder for the first time.

"I feel as good about his victory as I did at Bancroft Fair this year, when I won seventy six prizes from 117 entries," Mr. Carr said with a glow of pride, adding that these prizes were from livestock, grain, seeds, preserves and other things grown on his own farm.

THE ELECTION

Electors will not soon forget election night of December 6th, 1937, for many reasons. The keenness of the contest between Ald. Armstrong and Ex-Ald. Bone for the mayoralty made definite results doubtful until the last two or three polls were reported giving Jamieson Bone the chief magistracy. The mayorally was a three-corner fight and in consequence there was exceptional interest in seeing how the voters would divide in their choice of candidates and how this would effect the final result. Then too the lateness of the announcement of the returns was something which will not be forgotten.

One of the real surprises of the election was the support given the Daylight Saving bylaw with a majority of over one thousand, though in other years it had met defeat. Many felt that there was a change in attitude towards this measure and confidently predicted a swing in favor of advanced time in the summer months but few would have ventured to predict so great a majority for the bylaw.

For the council keenness was whetted by reason of the fact that four of the 1937 council were not candidates, this situation opening up the way for a number of newcomers. Interest in the council and the new aspirants for honors measure up before the electors, was the general question. The present council members running were all re-elected with the exception of Alderman Bateman. Wills led the poll, Alderman Thompson was second, Ald. Lewis fourth, with Ald. Barlow fifth. Ald. Baragar was in the seventh place with Ald. Cushing, Ald. Jennings and Ald. Kennedy in tenth, eleventh and twelfth places respectively. Harry Rollins for the new men made a fine run, taking third place, McI. Haig in sixth was second of the newcomers and J. E. Lynn ran seventh. Dr. Marshall ran ninth with Raymond Carr thirteenth.

Election of the first Board of Education under general vote appealed to the electors' interest. Trustee elections have not generally quiet affairs, because they have been ward elections but with the vote general for public school supporters the interest was city-wide. In addition the creation of the new Board reduced the size of it from then eleven of the members, for the new board stands at ten instead of twenty one. Nine were elected yesterday and one remains to be appointed by the Separate School board. No doubt more time will be find a place on the new Board of Education and some of the present board were naturally defeated owing to the lesser number to be chosen.

The elections generally were of a kind to spur up civic interest. Enthusiasm for municipal affairs was manifested more than hitherto for the voters took their duties seriously, that much is clear. The number of votes cast at the various polls yesterday approached four thousand as judged by the total of votes in the mayoralty as against a total of 3,725 registered in last year's mayoralty.

The close majority which was accorded the Daylight Saving bylaw will likely establish it for years to come as the rule in Belleville during summer months.

ARMY CHANGES

Interest in the British army officer changes continues to attract attention. The shake-up in the higher command has been the subject of inquiry in the House of Commons. Young men are being named to the posts.

Why the radical move is what intrigues many. It is generally felt that the change has come as a part of the national policy built upon modern principles.

In some quarters it is being freely forecast that there will be a more rigid regime for army officers with a great deal of hard work and less entertainment and luxury, as the Timmins Daily Press puts it, that there will be more commissions from the ranks and the placing of a premium on brains and ability over private financial means.

Yesterday in Commons the Secretary of War the Rt. Hon. Leslie Hore-Belisha stated that "merit, character, and ability as well as suitability for the post will be the guiding consideration in army promotion, regardless of youth age or seniority," and that holders will be all respects be fit and able to hold their posts under conditions of actual service. Does this mean that such has not always been the case? Question after question was asked in the Commons and the Minister referred to the authorized statement made last week.

In the British army have served men who have given up everything for the service. Those who might have lived in luxury have led the life of a soldier for the nation's sake. What the nobility and others did in the Great War is well enough known for the army officers as well as men paid a price never before demanded in any war.

And the army upholds the principle that there is in every knapsack a field-marshal's baton.

But changes perhaps need not cause surprise in these days, when there is so much talk of armies in every corner of the earth.

LAKE ONTARIO IN DECEMBER

The wind is blowing from the bay,
And in the frozen grass
Ten thousand diamonds sparkle clear,
To vanish as I pass.

A seaplane, circling overhead,
Shines silvery in the sun;
And in a pathway on the marsh
I see a partridge run.

Frozen the sand, and black as death,
And dull the water's roar;
Like spilled rock-salt, the broken ice
Is strewn along the shore.

The pungent smell of burning wood
Drifts from some little home,
Lone marsh, lone beach, and past it all
The breakers marching home.

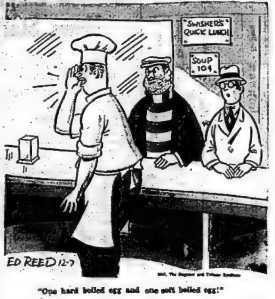
MANY READERS ARE FAMILIAR WITH THE SO CALLED "AGONY COLUMN" OF the London, England, newspapers. These comprise what is known over here as Classified or Want Ads. Almost anything may be inserted in the "Agony Columns" which have furnished many a hearty laugh. New York Times recently discovered in a London newspaper an advertisement which described a ghost which would be given a gratis home to anyone who would take it off the hands of the advertiser. The Times editor describes his find as follows:

"Every one has noticed that odd things are offered for sale in the classified columns, but a London newspaper recently offered the strangest so far on record. It is a disembodied spirit, no less, and the owner will give it away. The advertisement reads: "Haunted wardrobe.—Advertiser will be glad to deliver same to anybody interested, complete with ghost, which would also, no doubt, feel more at home if welcomed."

"Investigation revealed the advertiser as Mrs. B. Barclay, Caterton Manor, Oxfordshire. She says she bought the wardrobe, a rather ordinary piece of walnut furniture, three years ago for $50. She put it in a bedroom and thought no more about it. But—

"Just about three months ago," she says, "some friends who were staying the week-end asked me, if I could account for the strange opening and shutting of the wardrobe drawers which kept them awake all night. The noise has since continued nightly."



"And that is not all," Mrs. Barclay declares. "The figure of an elderly man in old-fashioned clothes, wearing a kind of deer-stalker cap, now walks downstairs and out of the front door every evening. I see him quite clearly in broad light and have tried to touch him, but he vanished in my fingers. I am not psychic, nor am I nervous, but this wretched ghost makes such a noise. I can get no one to stay at the house. My staff gave notice and my friends decline week-end invitations."

This seems like a wonderful opportunity for any one who has trouble with dressers drawers that stick. Mrs. Barclay of Caterton Manor offers not only a wardrobe, with drawers guaranteed to open and shut, but a full-time attendant. Perhaps the old deer-stalker could be tempted by an ocean trip to come over here and set up his trick wardrobe with the Ghostwriters Bureau which advertise in our own papers.

WAR IN SPAIN, CHINA, AND ETHIOPIA has demonstrated that there has been no attempt to eliminate the horrors of modern warfare, rather does it prove that all the efforts of the makers of war supplies and warlike nations have been devoted to piling up more horrors to inflict upon those who have had nothing to do with promoting war or carrying it on and the sacrifices exacted for the young glorifying war and distributed free from those countries which have the populace hypnotized with rosy visions of greatness, and the voice of the Man of Galilee grows fainter in those countries and would be stifled altogether if individuals high in authority had their way. Teach the blessings and wisdom of peace from the cradle, say Christian philosophers, and the next generation will look upon war with horror. Fine, but as Oliver Cromwell used to say, keep praying boys but keep your powder dry.

OFF THE RECORD

By Ed Reed

"One hard boiled egg and one soft boiled egg!"

Killers of the Bush

"Half an hour after I struck the big swamp," reflected the enthusiastic hunter, "up jumped a fine four-pronged buck. He hesitated a second and my first shot took him in the paunch. That staggered him. Then he swung in a semi-circle and when passing under a hemlock tree my second shot knocked him down. When I got over to where he fell, I was unable to find him. There was blood galore, and although I hunted about for half an hour I never located him.

"I guess he got away," was the chief query of Wrong. Catfish gets away he frequently comes back to be caught again, proving that the experience of being caught was not so severe after all, but when a wounded deer gets away, that's an entirely different story. He has received a lesson which is life forgetting death, to the constant attacks of either deer, or he falls to the fangs of a wolf.

There seems to be a carnivorous tendency, the part of the hunter, to desert of every man. At the same time, there are three distinct classes among of hunters in the woods these days. The real hunter, the naturalist and the pirate who kills for the sake of killing.

The real hunter gets his thrill out of stalking his game. He is the chap who works up-wind and watches his telltale on the hood of the sleeping moose," or "pinches a ring in the wapiti's ear." His joy is the quest, rather than the odor of fresh blood. Such a hunter rarely misses. He places his shots and leaves no "legs" to die a lingering death.

The naturalist is about as happy when he misses as when he hits. Success to him is not in bringing back a full bag, but rather in the glory of falling leaves, the acrid aroma of spruce gum, the tang of morning frost in the hardwood, the screech of the blue-jay or the belligerent chatter of the red squirrel, "lift their leafy arms in prayer," To him wild animals art to be studied, not slaughtered. Instead of corrupted, and explored rather than exploited.

The hunter-pirate is the human wolverine of the woods. He learns for the sake of killing, and destroys all that comes in his way. He has no chance and shoots indiscriminately. If he gets his game he brags about it; if he misses, he brags about the trail of blood. He is a killer, the human author of many a frontier tragedy.

He fear of wild game and the contempt of men. Laws are not necessary for the wild hunter and the naturalist, but such creatures as the hunter-pirate should be kept from the woods. Let him join the national heritage.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Sword as a Symbol

Though the sword is now decorative rather than useful, yet as an ornament and symbol of rank it is by no means out of fashion. Hundreds of swords were to be seen on Coronation Day. British army and navy officers all have swords, diplomats, politicians and various high officials wear them at Court.

Most of these swords are forged in London, England, by a firm which began in 1775 and has seven today does most of the work by hand. Long ago the Toledo blade was the best.

Swords cannot be turned out by mass production; they have to be made. To change a bar of steel into a finely tempered blade needs a skilled craftsman. Machinery has shortened some of the processes but an eighteenth-century swordsmith would recognize each detail of method.

The swords are made by craftsmen who have for generations been engaged in swordmaking. One man begins the task of changing a short, rusty bar of fine cast steel into a long, flexible blade. Another man, Another working with an emery wheel, takes large grindstone and, by industry, grinds the raw blade and passes it on to be polished.

Other craftsmen are decorated by a craftsman who works with pencil and chisel, and by electrolysis and acids and micropipes transferring testimonial crests to cold steel.

Then London comes the many famous swords. For example, Queen Victoria's sword was presented by one for the new King of Egypt and an executioner's sword for China. The ceremonial sword for a $50,000 State sword ordered by an Indian Prince was made for Edward VII.

Most of the $4,000 worth of bayonets, swords and fencing foils, imported into Canada the last year, according to the External Trade Branch of the Department of Trade and Statistics, came from the United Kingdom.—Ottawa Journal.

Country Correspondent

On Saturday the Statesman staff and country correspondents were guests of the publishers in what we hope will be an annual conference for discussion and social purposes. We greatly enjoyed renewing acquaintances with many we had met before and it was our pleasure to meet for the first time. The editor is proud of and grateful for the ability and loyalty of our local staff of rural correspondents. They maintain one of the most valuable and interesting departments in the paper. They are respected and looked up to as leaders in their respective communities.

The column of the rural correspondent is eagerly read by the people within their neighborhood as well as those who have moved elsewhere, and the record of happenings which appears in print as a result of his efforts help to make the lives interesting of those concerned. In fulfilling his duties as correspondent he is reporter, columnist and historian. He records for elders many of his items may sound trivial, but they are really important to those concerned. For the social trivial of items one has to refer to the society ages of the daily press where whole columns are sometimes devoted to long lists of the guests who were present at some function. In country papers such insignificant happenings a rural correspondent being painted is a matter of importance.

The work of the correspondent is ofttimes unappreciated, his labors usually gratuitous, yet he profits indirectly by the experience which he gains in writing up the interesting facts about his neighbors, local institutions and the community at large as a correspondent. The work calls forth his ability to write, and to be accurate and fair in that he may develop an efficiency that will compensate him for his labors. Many newspaper publishers first became interested in newspaper work through serving as rural correspondents.

We have referred to the correspondents as "he." In the majority of cases the correspondent is usually "she." But whether "he" or "she" they are doing worthwhile work maintaining an intimacy of reader interest in the rural press which has no counterpart in the big city metropolitan journal.

The correspondent in your particular neighborhood is putting your district on the map and keeping it there. His or her success will depend to a large degree upon the encouragement and co-operation received from the folk of your area. We appeal to our readers to show their appreciation of their district correspondent by giving them in every instance the assistance heretofore and their hearty co-operation. —Canadian Statesman.

Yesterday's nominations in Timmins saw a practice common to all such occasions.

People were nominated who never had been approached and others allowed themselves to be nominated knowing full well they had no intention of standing for election.

Judging by the past, apparently little "mutual nomination cliques" have been formed and the public left out of the picture.

Which suggests that the most effective means of halting this silly practice would be to make all nominations fee of $1.

$1 would be high enough to stop some of the idiots presently nominated.

$2 might put civic nominations on a still more exclusive plane.

On second thought, maybe $5 would be a better sum and there it refuted to the nominee qualifies.—Timmins Press.

Manners of Mikado

A lady just arrived in Hong Kong travelled down from Manchuria. The conference of officers on the train was, to employ her own words, "contemptuously unmannerly in the extreme." Passengers who had actually booked their seats in the dining saloon were deliberately turned out to make way for Japanese officers who had decided to board the train only a few minutes before starting-time. The Rev. and Mrs. Hugh Hong Kong declared that, not satisfied with the discomfiture inflicted upon others, the ladies invacate their booked seats, the Japanese commandeered them, and should have the entire compartment to themselves, and everybody had to find room as best they could. It came to the matter of service on the train, the same contemptuous way which is within the Japanese sphere of influence, no attempt was made to attend to until the multifarious wants of the Japanese officers had been satisfied. At the stations these officers appeared to take delight in disregarding everybody and exploiting, and it was a particularly bad look-out for any person in charge of luggage or local who dared to even suggest that one piece might be considered when in Rome.—Hong Kong Press.

SAILORS' SAFETY

The Canadian Sailors Union has taken cognizance of the apparent lack of interest Canadians, and merely by expressing regret for the death of members of her crew, but they are taking definite steps for the adoption of more safety devices on Canadian vessels.

The Union points out that the Calgadoc lacked many safety equipment and says she should never have been allowed to operate in the Gulf of St. Lawrence in the month of January.

It does not follow that wireless would have saved the Calgadoc as there is no knowledge of the circumstances under which she went down. It is quite possible that she was blown over suddenly and by that help could not have arrived even had the summons been heard. Nevertheless, the need for it is fantastic are great.

More important, perhaps, than the installation of wireless is the provision of such things as are required by statute. Such as the guarantee that the vessels themselves are seaworthy, lifeboats and otherwise for such conditions as are likely to arise and which they should or may travel. A good, strong, seaworthy hull and a lookout who is on the job at all periods are more important than wireless, although there is no denying that the latter is valuable in an emergency.

Neither is the Sailors Union to be criticised; rather it is to be commended for its efforts in demanding the highest possible safety for those men who operate the vessels of the country's mercantile commerce.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

LAKE ONTARIO IN DECEMBER

The wind is blowing from the bay,
And in the frozen grass
Ten thousand diamonds sparkle clear,
To vanish as I pass.

A seaplane, circling overhead,
Shines silvery in the sun;
And in a gull's nest on the marsh
I see a redbridge run.

Frozen the sand, and black as death,
And dull the water's roar;
Like spilled rock-salt, the broken ice
Is strewn along the shore.

The pungent smell of burning wood
Drifts from some little home,
Lone marsh, lone beach, and past it all
The breakers marching home.

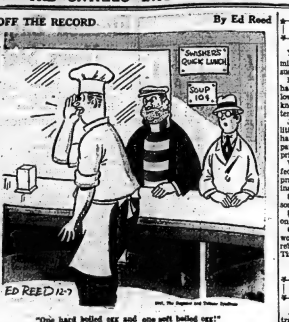
MANY READERS ARE FAMILIAR WITH THE SO CALLED "AGONY COLumns" of the London, England, newspapers. These comprise what is known over here as Classified or Want Advt. Almost anything may be found in the "Agony Columns" which have furnished many heartstr laugh. The New York Times recently discovered in a London newspaper an advertisement which described a ghost which would be given away free to anyone who would take it off the hands of the advertiser. The Times editor describes his find as follows:

"Every one has noticed that odd things are offered for sale in the classified columns, but a London newspaper recently offered the strangest so far on record. It is a disembodied spirit, no less, and the owner will give it away. The advertisement reads: "Haunted wardrobe—advertiser will be glad to deliver same to anybody needing complete with ghost, which would also, no doubt, feel more at home if welcomed."

"Investigation revealed the advertiser as Mrs. R. Barclay, Laverton Manor, Oakesham. She says she bought the wardrobe, a rather ordinary piece of walnut furniture, three years ago for $50. She put it in a guest room and thought no more about it.

"Just about three months ago," she says, "some friends who were staying the week-end asked me if I could account for the strange opening and shutting of the wardrobe doors which kept them awake all night. The noise has since continued nightly."

"And that is not all," Mrs. Barclay declares. "The figure of an elderly man in a dark-blue suit, with a small kind of deer-stalker cap, now walks downstairs and out of the front door every evening. I see him myself by the electric light and have tried to touch him, but he vanished in my hand. I am not psychic, nor am I nervous, but this wretched ghost makes such a noise. I can get no one to stay at the manor. My staff gave notice and my friends decline week-end invitations."



This seems like a wonderful opportunity for any one who has trouble with dresser drawers that stick. Mrs. Barclay of Casterton Manor offers not only a wardrobe, with drawers guaranteed to open and shut, but a full-time attendant. Perhaps the old deer-stalker could be tempted by an ocean trip. It would cover here and set up his brick wardrobe with the Ghostwriters Bureau which advertise in our own papers.

WAR IN SPAIN, CHINA, AND ETHIOPIA has demonstrated that there has been no attempt to eliminate the horrors of modern warfare, rather does it prove that all the efforts of the makers of war supplies and the scientists have been devoted to piling up more horrors to inflict upon those who have had nothing to do with promoting war or carrying it on. Books are being printed for the young glorifying war and distributed free in those countries which have the populace hypnotized with rosy visions of greatness, and the voice of The Man of Galilee grows fainter in those countries and would be stifled altogether if individuals high in authority had their way. Teach the blessings and wisdom of peace from the cradle, say Christian philosophers, and the next generation will look upon war with horror. Fine, but as Oliver Cromwell used to say, keep praying boys but keep your powder dry.

The naturalist is about as happy when he misses as when he hits. Success to him is not in having back a full bag, but rather in the glory of falling leaves, the weird aroma of spruce gum, the tang of morning frost in the harvwood, the screech of pine-jay or the benediction of cliffedral trees with "with their spears in perpyer." To him wild animals art to be studied not stampeded, cultivated instead of corrupted, and explored rather than exploited.

The timber-wolf is the human wolverine of the woods. He leaves the sake of killing, and destroys more than he eats. He is the prowler in modern hunting. He kills in season and out of season and he kills more than the limit. He takes a chance and shoots indiscriminately. If he gets his game he brags about it; if he misses, he brags about the trail of blood. He is a killer, the human author of many a frontier tragedy. He earns the fear of wild things and the contempt of men. He has the raw hide scary for the real hunter and the naturalist, but the real creatures of the hunter-pirate should be kept from the woods. A lady just arrived in Hong Kong travelled down from Manchuria. The conduct of officers on the train was, to employ her own words, "contemptuous and contemptible in the extreme." Passengers who had actually booked seats and were occupying them were dispossessed at once to make room for Japanese officers who had decided to board the train at the last moment for a starting-time. In one case this happened to Hong Kong citizens, but not satisfied with the discomfiture occasioned by forcing two ladies to change their seats, the said officers chose officers demanded that they have the entire compartment given to themselves, and everybody had to make way for them. When it came to the turn of servants and those trains which traversed countries where the "man-for-a" does not sphere of influence, no one could possibly be stricter than the Japanese multifarious wants of the Japanese officers had been satisfied. At the Manchurian Bridge Japanese officials take delight in disregarding every rule and regulation, and it is particularly bad look-out for any person other than a Japanese passport. Indeed, it is said to suggest that one does as the Romans do when in Rome.—Hong Kong Press.

SAILORS' SAFETY

The Canadian Sailors Union has taken cognizance of the apparent loss of the steamer Calgadoc, not only because of the mystery and death of members of her crew, but also in calling again the attention of the public of more safety devices on Canadian ships.

The Union points out that the Calgadoc lacked wireless equipment and says she should have been required to operate in the Gulf of St. Lawrence at this time of the year.

It does not follow that wireless would have saved the steamer, but there is no knowledge of the circumstances under which she went down. Had wireless been aboard she may have been overcome so suddenly that no distress signal was sent, or even had the summons been heard, for distances in that part of the Atlantic are great.

More important, perhaps, than the installation of wireless is the provision of such things as seaworthy life boats and life rafts, the assurance that the vessels themselves are suitable by construction and age for the work. Overloading as are likely to arise in the regions of the Gulf and River in the fall, when strong seaworthy hull and a good strong that will not make it perilous for the passengers and crews, although there is no denying that the latter is often the case in emergency.

Neither is the Sailors Union to be criticised; rather it is to be commended, for its action in demanding the highest standards of safety for men who operate the vessels of Canada's wealthy inland commerce.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

That is an understatement, for on the night mentioned, we are told that they "got" 15,000 men, women and children. The Herald-Tribune reports:

The crowd reacted to its highest pitch of excitement for the finale of the two Canadian girls. Their pair skating fairly began with the effervescence of youth and the spirit of rollicking which they put into their skating, scratched a hearty noisy response which resembled a yodel. Margaret Simpson and Jean Simpson jassies spun and jumped and turned effortlessly through their routine with great zest. They did it as if it was a lark, and last night's turnout will echo in their ears for a long time."

Rural Rewards

Only those who have walked between the handles of a plow, holding a strong and well-trained team of horses, turning a straight and even furrow through soil of a heavy clay land, can understand that there might be glory and joy in that kind of work. That, and similar kinds of work, must be the source of satisfaction that Wordsworth had in mind for the economic disabilities which he suffers under the rule of a commercial age. At any rate, the question as to whether or not his economic rewards are satisfying to seek and find those abiding satisfactions which are found in the character of his work and of his surroundings, is one that might be thought all the ages the peculiar privileges of those who work under living and growing things, above the fruitful soil, and underneath the open sky.—Ontario Milk Producer.

Public Men's Families

Premier Angus MacDonald of Nova Scotia, Hon. H. C. Nixon, Hon. Earl Rowe and Hon. Dr. Manion have three. Families of four are listed for Premier Hepburn, Premier Henry and Hon. W. E. Foster, the Speaker of the Senate. Hon. H. H. Stevens and Hon. L. J. Simpson boast five. Some of the new Ontario Cabinet Ministers exceed the average materially, for Hon. M. M. MacBride has six children and the Hon. Peter Heenan seven.

Sir Edward Beatty, president of the C.P.R., has one child, a daughter. President Hungerford of the Canadian National Railways has no children. Among those classified strictly as financiers, the record appears to be held by Sir Herbert Holt with three times, has two sons and three daughters.

Senator J. H. Gundy of Toronto, five children; Sir John Aird, two sons and one daughter; A. D. Phipps of the Imperial Bank, has three sons and one daughter; Jackson Dodds, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, two sons and two daughters.

ELECTION VICTORS GIVEN RECEPTION NEAR MIDNIGHT

Jamieson Bone, Mayor-elect Thanks Electors For Support

MAYOR CHAIRMAN

Returns Slow in Coming in Due to Large Number on Ballots

It was a tame audience, one almost as tame as the vote observed during the day, that assisted the appearance of the newly elected 1938 council in the auditorium of the city hall last evening, after the final ballots had been counted. It was an audience which but half filled the hall, though waited for hours for the appearance of the elected and defeated candidates, displaying its impatience only during the later hours of from eleven o'clock on by pedestal stamping, whistles and catcalling from the rear of the hall.

Outside in the corridors of the city hall, it was but a duplicate of the scene witnessed in the building on any municipal election night. Again corridors of hall were packed and filled with a haunted mass of perspiring humanity. In the office of the city clerk, where returns were officially recorded, as in past years, standing room, even breathing room, was at a premium; inside the committee chamber, old and new members of councils past and present took their comparative ease around the table, pipes of peace and cigars eagerly awaiting and awaiting absent as it was, to be served and doctored. Into the nervous tension of the room there was injected that badinage and perstiflage so characteristic of the night. Cigarettes were lighted, puffed briefly and briefly and then extinguished. Wall drawing pipes were lighted and relighted until burned matches reached tidy piles on the committee table. Beers, half smoked and smouldering, were forgotten as pencils and pipes were brought in use. Mental arithmetic became an important factor. Through the nervous gatherings of the new candidates moved the older ones, more solid of their ground and the results that were yet to come.

Crowd Impatient

At eleven-thirty as the last of the results were received in the office of the city clerk, the long patience of the waiting electors in the auditorium broke, broke, broke finally.

"Results—we want results. Bring on the candidates", became a chant which was sung lustily and without tune as the cry was taken up, "Let's go", was added as a chorus to what was instantaneously with a variety of other cheers for action of a similar nature.

As chairman of the final act in the election night proceedings, Mayor R. D. Arnott, finally led the elected and defeated candidates to the rostrum of the auditorium, acting and doing duty as they greeted the appearance of the popular young mayor and his followers.

Taking the chair of the late Mayor Arnott then officially announced that, according to the returns received, Mr. Jamieson Bone had been elected Mayor for the year 1938, defeating Alderman Thomas Armstrong and Alderman Wm. Harvey.

A mixed medley of cheering, applause and a few catcalls greeted the introduction of Mayor-elect Bone as the official congratulations were tendered Mayor Arnott.

"I wish to announce that your choice has been duly elected", stated the Mayor above the applause.

"This will probably be my last public appearance before you as Mayor of the City of Belleville, and I wish to take this opportunity of thanking every one of you for the splendid support that has been given me during the past year. Your co-operation has made my work easier, and I wish to say that again thank you on behalf of your past year's city council. At this time I can only extend my public appreciation for the untiring effort your council has displayed in the betterment of your interests and for the splendid help they have given me all through personally".

Splendid Council to Work With

"Your last year's council was perhaps one of the best you have ever had and it has been a splendid one to work with," continued Mayor Arnott.

"To the incoming council I can only say that if I can pass on any of the experience I have gained through my past three years as alderman and Mayor, then I am only too pleased to do so.

"I ask that the citizens give the same co-operation to the new council they have given the old [illegible] and the same support and sympathy. The road will be rocky at spots for them, and they will make mistakes—we all do—but don't knock, boost. Help them along.

"As mayor of the city, yet, I wish to extend the season's greetings and give you my sincere wishes for a happy and prosperous Christmas and New Year."

Mayor-elect Jamieson Bone, received with considerable applause, declared that all evening long he had carried two small pads of paper, one in each pocket—one for "ins" and one marked "outs."

"Only at the last moment was I sure, that I had been elected by at least a reasonable majority," he added.

"It's a bit late for speech making, so all I can say is that I wish the people of Belleville a Merry Christmas and a happy New Year. All I can do right now is to assure that I will try my best to carry on as mayor, win, me to carry on during this coming year."

Candidates Shake Hands

Alderman Harold Armstrong, defeated mayoralty candidate, greeted with the heaviest applause of the evening, upon his introduction turned from the centre of the platform and shook hands warmly with Mayor-elect Jamieson Bone.

"First I want to congratulate the Mayor-elect, and wish him all success during his term of occupation of office," commented Alderman Armstrong.

"You'll be in for Mayor next year, Harold" assured a big fireman voice in the audience. "We'll stick to you."

"For six years you have seen fit to elect me as alderman, and I take this opportunity of thanking you for the trust you have reposed in me. I am glad that I have been able to serve, and glad also that I have had the experience, an experience that will be beneficial to me for the rest of my life," continued the defeated candidate.

"To the new council-elect, and those with whom I have had the pleasure of sitting during the past year all I can say is that I don't think there has ever been a finer one (applause). "We have had our debates and difference in council, but when we have walked out of the council chambers, our debates were left behind in the building; they were not taken out with us. Good municipal government means, that all interests are brought and taken to the street.

"I don't know if I will ask you again for the honor of being Mayor ..... ("then you will we'll stick") but for the present all I can say is that I wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year," concluded Alderman Armstrong.

Ald. Harvey Heard

Alderman Wm. Harvey, also defeated candidate for Mayor assumed the listeners in to send sentimental tone that he had "received a real good friendship." "But I can take this trimming and come back and fight another day. I took it on the chin and I am not grumbling."

Alderman Harvey also took the occasion to congratulate the Mayor-elect Bone. "I want to thank all those who voted for me, and as much as those who didn't vote for me and assure them all that my interest in municipal affairs will be kept up."

Councillor T. T. Wills, heading the polls this year, whose name was also mentioned for Mayor Arnott did not appear. The Mayor, however, took the occasion to pay tribute to the work of Councillor Wills in Finance during the past year.

Ald. Jas. Wallace, also heading Alderman Willis at the head of the list this year, the electors of Belleville have shown by their appreciation for the work he has done during the past year, and the year—a good work well done," commented the chairman.

A newcomer to council, Alderman Harry Rollins, received with hearty applause, spoke briefly of his thanks from "his friends of Belleville." "I feel it a great privilege to have been elected as one of your aldermen. This election has been a close one, and by no clean lines. I have had some friends in Belleville, but I never knew I had this many", he continued.

"Now you have placed a greenhorn in a green job, but I will try to do my best and live up to the faith you have in me. I made a far better run than I thought I would, and now that I can do is wish you a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year."

Glad to be Elected

Alderman Laurie Lewis, a target for considerable jeering, mixed with hearty applause and whistling accepted the slight disturbance with the equanimity for which he has been noted.

"I am happy to receive the endorsation, of the electors once more" he acknowledged.

He entered the Interim fade in with certain misgivings. I have headed a department during the past year in which my acts have not always seen eye to eye by the electors. But I have tried to help them even though they did not know it.

"However, during the coming year I will try to give that same service I have always tried to in the past."

Alderman J. W. Barlow, in thanking the electors for the honor again accorded by re-electing him to council added he did not added votes this year. "I did not go out and ask for a vote. I just added to serve you again and I hope I can continue as I have in the past working in the best interests of the city. If I can help anyone in any manner during this coming year just ask me," pledged Alderman Barlow in voicing the compliments of the coming season.

Willing to Serve

Alderman-elect MacLean Hair, declared that when he had decided to qualify for the nomination received he had been told by a friend that "the less electors of Belleville knew about it the better chance I would have.

"However, I trust I will not disappoint any of you during the coming year. I will,keep my slogan unturned in an effort to carry and merit this trust, that has been reposed. To all this time I can only take the occasion, to wish you and yours the best wishes for a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year."

Alderman-elect Wm. "Bill" Logan in thanking the electors for the "wonderful vote" received, declared his appreciation for the honor thus conferred. "During the coming year, if there is anything you want that is in reason, come to Lily's and try to get it for you," he promised.

Alderman Cliff Baragar, also expressed his thanks at being returned to office and for the faith that had been shown to him.

"Publicly I wish to express the appreciation I feel and councillors feel for the splendid and fair manner Mayor Arnott has carried on the affairs of council during the past year," he added.

Electors Thanked

Dr. Jack Marshall, alderman-elect declared he had nothing of the sportings of council to which he had been elected. "But I'll promise you this, that by this time next year I'll know all about it. And thanks for the chance of being able now to find out."

Alderman Burton Jennings stated, that he had felt renewed faith in being re-elected. "Never has been my motto in the past and it will continue to be. You have stepped me a little higher this year and I can only thank you and extend my hope of continuing this confidence."

Alderman Andy Kennedy, who also received heavy applause declared "I sure appreciate this honor of being returned to office. The odds were against me, but I have been re-elected. I will do my best during the coming term as I have in 1937, and all I can do. I will only be too pleased to do it."

Alderman-elect Raymond Carr, expressed himself as being "very happy over the result of the day's election. I hope I can live up to the people, who have elected me. And will promise that I'll try. I wish you at this time every success during the coming year and a very happy coming New Year."

Supporters Thanked

Alderman Baldree, defeated this year, took the occasion to thank his supporters.

"I have no greater pleasure than knowing, that the man, who defeated me is a real man—Raymond Carr, I tried to do the best I could during the year, and I am thankful to retain my interest in the affairs of Belleville and district."

Leonard Foxard, also defeated candidate declared his supporters "took quite enough to do." and would take this occasion to congratulate all who did get in for office and who will run the affairs of the city during the coming year."

Robert Martin, also defeated, congratulated electors of Belleville with their choice of council for the coming year. "I know they will do a good job, the interests are the real ones would have done had we been elected and able to serve you", he added, wishing his hearers sincere compliments of the coming season.

Ald.-elect Austin Sale in congratulating the Mayor and council-elect, also expressed his appreciation of the faith in which he had supported him. "Elections, after, all are like a horse race. And even those of us who did not succeed in getting into office will be able to help Belleville and do our best for us any-how."

Not Discouraged

Isaac Stephenson, defeated candidate expressed himself as not being discouraged over the result of the election. To aspire to the position of civic office, it is well worth while, and there is just the chance, that I may come again to you next year".

Dr. J. Kinnear, elected school trustee, promised in the briefest of addresses just to "do my utmost for the youth of Belleville again this coming year, and to take the keenest interest and act to the best of my ability in your interests".

Reg. Moncrieff, elected trustee, promised that he would do the same as he had done in the past "do all I can to be of service in you".

Jack Aitin, trustee, in thanking electors for the support given him took the occasion to extend the "very cordialmeinie of the season" to his listeners and those of the city.

The meeting closer with the singing of the National Anthem, led by Mayor R. D. Arnott.

Transport Driving In the Mountains

Ed. Note:

A Belleville resident, Mr. Arthur Jones writes in quoting by stages to Florida, kindly offered, before he left, to write of his experiences of transcontinental motor journeys along. Mr. Jones has taken a trailer with him and is thus enabled to travel as he pleases and make prolonged visits to places of interest. The first of his letters follows:

Washington, D.C.—From Buffalo, N.Y., to Philadelphia, Pa., is approximately 400 miles and almost from Buffalo to Harrisburg, Pa., great transports go over a series of hills and mountains (the Appalachian Range) and of course down the other side. I interviewed a driver at a hill village called Chambersburg. This took place at a large service station with rooms and eating place. A place where these drivers stop to eat and sleep if they wish. Transports are at the fast long haul run on 10 huge wheels. They are busy hauling new automobiles from Buffalo to Philadelphia, Pa., for the local market. The cars are from the great auto city of Detroit, Mich., and come to Buffalo by boat when the transports load them up. Five new cars being a capacity load but generally only a load only of four. I had supper with six or seven of these drivers and found them a fine lot of men, average age 27 years, stout and thick chested and obviously in splendid health. I got this health opinion especially from their faces. A huge plate dinner was placed in front of each which soon disappeared accompanied by pleasant conversation. These men have to serve an apprenticeship by working up from small trucks, Mr. Glenn Parker informed me, and has had a big city nerves. The 400 mile trip is run in about 18 hours with 6 or 8 hours sleep. They are paid 6c per mile and average 40 miles per hour. Now let me tell you about how they drive up and down these long winding hills. On the steep hills they are slowed down but when the brake is reached and they hear down they certainly go to town, s-h-i-f-t-i-n-g gears by hand, stopped on a level plateau for a lunch in the mountains and also down a long (1 1-2 miles), steep grade with a 12 turn at the end. They apparently did not shock me to make this turn and so they made it their hind tires slipped across the pavement to the right, (if the turn was to the left). How they have the nerve to make the down grade U turns at such speed is beyond my understanding. They take it for granted the road is clear ahead. Or course the transports are equipped with powerful air brakes controlled from the driving wheel. I might add I found these transport cars kept down these long steep slopes and make the turn safely.

Clark Gable and Carole Lombard make love—and what love!—in "The Man of Her Own" at the Capitol commencing Wednesday.

BRITISH-BELGIAN ROMANCE REPORT

King Leopold III Makes Unexpected Visit to Britain

London, Dec. 6 (AP)—Britain wondered today whether a British-Belgian Royal romance was being unfolded.

Unexpected, private visits of Belgium's King Leopold III, Queen-Mother Elizabeth and Prince Charles to the king's home at Sandringham—the most persons puzzled and guessing.

There were official denials of rumors the Belgian king's visit to the Duke of Portland's Welbeck Abbey estate indicated a romantic attachment for the Duke's 21-year-old granddaughter, Lady Anne Cavendish-Bentinck.

Baron Capelle, the king's secretary, described the rumors as "childish fairy tales". The Comti De Grunne, Chamberlain to the Queen Mother, declared when he was asked if the widower king had come to choose a bride: "No! No! No! I can not tell you anything. We denied those rumors before we left Brussels."

Visit Planned Some Time.

The Baron explained that Queen Elizabeth had planned for some time to visit the Duke and Duchess of Portland, and that the king, "having several days free", had decided to accompany her. The Duke was a friend of the late King Albert of Belgium.

He commented on Prince Charles' unheralded arriving in London yesterday by saying he was "persuaded the trip was unconnected with his sister's and brother-in-law's." He made persons puzzled and guessing.

He commented on Prince Charles' unheralded arriving in London yesterday by saying he was "persuaded the trip was unconnected with his sister's and brother-in-law's." He added that "Charles is a frequent visitor to England, where he has a number of friends."

The name of Prince Charles was linked with that of Lady Anne in 1933 in reports that they were engaged. Lady Anne is a granddaughter of Titchfield, denied the reports.

The 36-year-old king's name several times has been connected with various European princesses since the death of Queen Astrid in an automobile accident two years ago. On each occasion the reports were denied.

SNOWFALL COMES AT RIGHT TIME

"Perfect conditions", it was unanimously agreed by the local agricultural office, and farmers of the district generally, viewing the first winter's downfall which descended over the section under ideal conditions. The snow fell previous to any heavy surface frosts which might have caused damage to fall wheat growing above ground, and before the land had become hardened by ice, thus ensuring a perfect protective covering. It was pointed out.

Entertains at Birthday Party

A very pleasant event took place recently at the home of Miss Margaret McAvoy, Chalmers Street, when she entertained at a birthday party in honor of her cousin, Miss Mary A. Cain of Stirling.

The table which was tastefully arranged was centered with a pretty birthday cake and candles. After doing justice to the good things provided, a very appropriate address was read by Miss Helen Foley.

Although completely taken by surprise Mrs. Cain replied in a few well chosen words, thanking every one for their kindness and inviting them to visit her in her home in Stirling.

During the evening Mrs. Cain was presented with an end table lamp.

The remainder of the evening was taken up in cards, old-time songs and old-time remembrance. All went home after the evening had been well spent and wishing Mrs. Cain many happy returns of the day.

Education Worth All It Costs for Good Accomplished

Service Club Activities and Usefulness was the subject discussed at Belleville Rotary Club at the regular meeting Monday in Hotel Quinte, the speaker of the occasion being Mr. F. C. MacLaurin, Principal of Belleville Collegiate and President of Belleville Kiwanis and Governor of the Kiwanis District. Mr. MacLaurin gave a very fine exposition of the function of service clubs, their strength and their weakness, service club education and education in general. Service clubs can only function satisfactorily if the right leaders are in office supported by willing followers. He deprecated destructive criticism of men in high places who were giving their lives and talents to service and doing their very best to make the world better. Let us help with kindly sympathy instead of finding fault, said the speaker. Education was worth all the time paid for it, being the most important thing in the world. Education was either for good or evil and the best possible in education was necessary to promote that which is good in the world and combat the evil.

Mr. MacLaurin gave a very earnest, thoughtful and inspiring address which was very much appreciated. He was introduced by Past President Bert Bernekie and Rotary appreciation was ably voiced by Past President Bert Boyce and seconded by Past Douglas Charlie Spalding acted as song leader, Leo Biggs at the piano.

Can Any Boy or Girl Learn To Play Band Instrument?

(By J. Andrew Wigston).

Dr. MEWTH FRANCO GOLDMAN, one of the most experienced and distinguished band leaders of America, whose famous band was daily heard at the Toronto Exhibition a few years ago, writes:—Of late much attention has been directed toward the future of the young generation, they have been called irresponsible—heedless of tradition and convention—careless and heartless, and almost everything under the sun. Calamity howlers say crime is on the increase, juvenile decency is becoming a pastime, jails are being filled with the youths, and they ask, What are we coming to? But all of which I should like to say that if we are mindful of the need of music in the training of our youth, we need not have such grave fears as to the future of our country.

"Fathers, Mothers, Teachers, can give their boys and girls no greater gift for the morrow, than a knowledge of, and an appreciation of music, the ability to sing and perform music, for the greatest joy comes in making your own, no matter how crude it may be, so, every child should be given the opportunity to learn some band instrument.

"A boys' band offers all the lively elements of interest as does baseball, soccer, hockey, it is team work that counts in both cases and the contest idea often as keen rivalry as do two opposing ball teams. A boy has a superabundance of energy which should be directed into proper channels, and THE BOY WHO LEARNS TO PLAY IN A BAND AT OUTSET FOR THIS OVERFLOWING VITALITY, HE soon comes under ordered law, develops concentration, alertness, perception, and team-work is the result.

In the above terse paragraphs Dr. Goldman briefly expresses what the band will do for either boy or girl, for girls are as much interested and eminently successful in the band as the boy.

The two questions often asked as we talk of the school band are, how much will any boy or girl learn by a band instrument? and "How long does it take to learn to play?"

For the benefit of parents who are desirous of their children learning an art, that will not only put the person who can play, ahead of his fellows in any body of men, but, may in many instances be a big factor in enabling them to earn salaries two or three times what they could earn in the ordinary vocations of life.

Some people claim that only those with a gift for music" can learn to play a cornet, clarinet, trombone, etc., but I will assert, without fear of contradiction, that any normal person can learn to make music. If they will apply themselves properly and consistently in his studies I believe that music is studiously learned—it being a task one requires no more talent to become proficient on an instrument, than it does on any other subject—I believe that hour for hour, and year for year, any normal youth will progress as fast and no faster than any other child of like nature—I very positively believe that the old idea "that one must have music in him to learn" is the most fallacious deception connected with the art of music. I believe that the so-called "talent" is acquired by 99 per cent hard work and the other 1 per cent by work also.

But I know that such pupils will learn to play a tune sooner than do some others, and, is this not true of subjects they are learning in school? One may learn to play a little very easily, the next one has a better ear, and the next one better execution, while still another will have a better ear for playing in tune, or better time and rhythm, or better breath control, or better co-ordination between mind and fingers.

Therefore while one may get just the one gift, another has some other point, but, at the end of three years, we will find a greater quality of ability, providing of course, that all have faithful study and practice. I am prepared to grant this, that the attention which comes from interest will produce far better results, than from attention that has to be coaxed.

We admit "the desire to learn" is the coveted need, but, how many children possess it? we ask you. How many children would continue to want to go to school after the novelty had worn off if they were not compelled to do so. Beautiful school-like teachers—nice companionship—excellent playgrounds all free—would you not think they would long for school.

The city of Belleville has become music conscious of band conception and with the advent of band and orchestral instruments being taught to children in the public schools, between the ages of eight to fourteen, who will within a period of eight to ten weeks be able to play simple tunes on their instruments, in an elementary way at least, playing in combination and in harmony, melodies that every body knows, new interest in music and the joy and pleasure that it will bring to parents and friends, in the fact that it is being rendered by their own young children, make Belleville again, doubly interested in what music will do to protect and interest them in something that will be of distinct advantage after they leave school.

Dried Fruits Help Housewife to Make Her Winter Meals More Appetizing

Prune Pudding with Custard Pudding

The dried fruits are always a help in the winter time. They are economical and healthful. Also many delicious dishes can be made with them, and they are excellent when served, partnered to toast, and served with crackers, bread and butter or cookies. I tried a pattern the other day which I hope that you have used before, I imagine. It consisted of prunes, apricots and peaches, and was very good, we thought. Be careful in taking the prune pudding out of the oven not to let it stir. Then see I was told of the tragedy of a hostess taking the guests' favorite prune pudding out of the oven and dropping it on the floor.

Today's Recipes

PRUNE PUDDING — Three-fourths cup sugar, one-half cup water, and lemon, one cup prune pulp, two egg whites, one cup coffee cream. Boil sugar and water together until it spins a thread. Add lemon juice and prune pulp, cool and place in refrigerator until it freezes around the edge. Remove from refrigerator and add beaten egg whites and cream. Beat it for just a little while. It makes much difference. Stir once. Freeze in about three hours.

PRUNE PUDDING—Boil prunes until soft, remove pits and cut into two or three pieces, or force through a sieve. To one cup prunes add sugar and the whites of three eggs well beaten, stir thoroughly into prunes, and bake in casserole in moderate oven for about five minutes. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

The leopard has changed his spots for trimming. Until now it sports fur heaped has climbed into the dress class. Revers and cuffs of leopard distinguish a jacket of a dark-green velvet dinner ensemble. The shoulder made long slim dress has its belt buckle of the fur.

An odd silhouce is pink and silver, and it is appearing once more. A charming evening frock is of silver lame, the long, slim sheath covered by long tiers of heavy fringe in paler pink.

Arrows point the way to smartness in a bag, bell and glove set. Of black anticlope, the leather is set off by appliqued arrows of gold tidskin.

Bands play quite a big role this season, especially glittery bands. A little afternoon frock of black crepe has bands of black sequins across its bodice. The same model comes in dark blue with iridescent blue sequins. Other frocks have bands of sequins at neck and hem.

A revival of things Victorian has brought with is a demand for long-sleeved nightdies. Shops are showing nightgowns of very thin but very fine flannel with much hand-work such as tucking and embroidery.

Hard to beat is the combination of black velvet with white touches. A lovely evening frock is of black velvet with heart-shaped bodice and a huge cascade of pinkish white rhinestones trailing from the side of the waist, down the skirt. Very narrow shoulder straps.

Fresh flowers shipped long distances in refrigerator can can be "treated" with ice—the ice cooling keeps them from getting colder than approximately freezing point.

Teacher vs. Laborer

Informal studies at McGill University indicate that a professor carrying out a normal day's duties at the university expends as much energy as a laborer during a heavy day's work.

One veteran professor reports that while lecturing before a large class and being exhausting by reason of years of experience in lecturing.

Another professor reports that a comparatively short address before an outside group required several hours of intense mental over-occupation before deliverance of this lecture. The strain is such that he sleeps fitfully for several nights after the address.

A public speaking instructor estimates that one and one-half hours' instruction of a class robs him of as much energy as the equivalent amount of time spent in a hard competitive sport in the gymnasium.

The majority of professors of long standing at McGill are men of strong physique. Many of them served in rigorous posts in the army in the capacity of officers or athletes. One is a former champion.

"The ideal of science is not happiness at all, but health; only we must add that health is a principal condition of happiness."—Dean Inge.

Can They Wed and Be Happy?

By VIRGINIA LEE

FREELAND and his girl friend have been going together for three years. They are very fond of each other and are now talking about marriage.

However, they are of different religions, but they never have discussed their faiths. Freeland says he "couldn't very well think of giving her up," so they decided to write to me for my advice.

•Possibly you have seen my recent answer to another couple who had the same problem, Puzzled. You are wise to realize that while you do not seem to have been bothered by this difference in religion in the three years you have been going together, it will make a difference when you are living together.

If you are sure you cannot give each other up, you'll have to work it out. Are your religions so different, and are you each at attached to your own faith that neither can give it up for the other? If either or you could change your religion, that would settle the issue. But if you don't have to go over to the other side wholeheartedly and not later regret the step and be disagreeable about it.

If neither can do this, you will have to decide which is easier—to marry as you are, after talking the whole thing over very thoroughly, and deciding what you will do and how you will raise the children, etc., or to break your friendship. Better be thinking about that now, when maybe there are children to be affected.

This problem has been worked out by many people very satisfactorily, although it is much wiser for a young man to marry a girl of his own religion. And let me emphasize the point that you never will be happy married to her, unless you can continue all your lives to be broadminded and charitable toward each other.

PEGGY is so much in love with a boy who told her "doesn't love anyone," that she feels "that death is all that will make me forget him. ....I have been with others, but it only brings back memories of how much better I would be if I were with him.... What shall I do?

I'm sorry for your suffering, Peggy, but what can you do with a man who simply doesn't care for you as you do for him? You can't MAKE him care, and you'll be unhappy. In fact, if he knows how sad and mournful you are he probably will avoid you altogether. So nothing makes a man quite so uncomfortable as a weeping woman—and especially if he knows he caused her grief.

You'd best have to persist in going out with other boys, even if at first you don't enjoy yourself. And have faith that time will take away your grief.

—Style Wilmoter

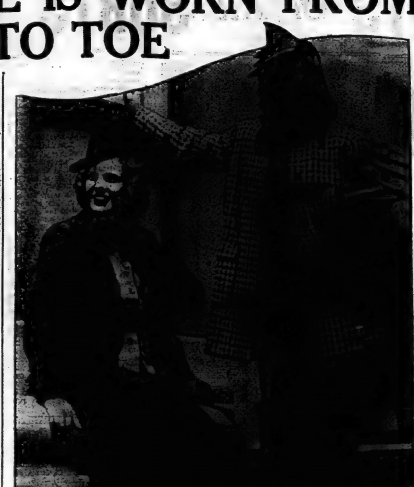
SUEDE IS WORN FROM TOP TO TOE

Leather Costume One of Newer Style Trends

By LISSETTE

THE SHORT COAT now is a year round favorite. These coats are not so cumbersome as long wraps and winters often are not too cold so that they are practical to wear most of the year. If something warmer seem to be needed, a bit of extra underwear—snuggles, for instance—are added while out of doors, and taken off in the warm house, school or office.



The two costumes shown are excellent choices for the co-ed or high school girl. The hip-length coat, left, is of harvest rust lasco-suede, and it has back fullness and side slit pockets. The large front buttons match the skirt that contrasts with the overblouse. The high hat matches the jacket in rust suede.

Checked Ziprer Coat

The model on the right wears a smart two-piece wool suit with a ziprer coat in checked wool, which also is made in horsehide. Her hat is a peaked, brimmed model of Egyptian clay suede, and her high front buckle shoes are also of suede.

Suede for the whole costume is a development of the last few years. You now can dress in suede from head to foot from morning to evening—surely an interesting development. There are chamois dresses, lambskin coats, wool and suede garments, suede suits, suede boleros, and, of course, many suede accessories.

And as to colors, there are many —33, according to one manufacturer.

Poems That Live

COME BACK, COME BACK

Come back, come back, across the flying foam,
We hear faint far-off voices call us home.

Come back, come back; and whither back or why?
To fan quenched hopes, forsaken schemes to try;
Walk the old fields; pace the familiar street;
Dream with the dead, with the birds compete.

Come back, come back.

Come back; come back; and whither for what?
To finger idly some old Gordian knot,
Unsullied to sunder, and too weak to untie,
And with much toil attain to half-belief.

Come back, come back.

Come back, come back!
Back flies the foam; the hoisted flag streams back!
The long smoke waves on the homeward track.
Back fly with winds the things which the winds obey.
The strong ship follows its appointed way.

—James Russell Lowell.

Trailer for dollies to be drawn by tricycle.

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

EVERYONE'S talking to the long, low trail in trailers. Even the dollies are doing it, as witness these dolls who are costly ensconced in a play trailer that hitches on behind the little miss' tricycle.

Of course there are also new doll buggies for which dollies can ride. And cradles, beds, bathinettes, etc., galore.

There are modernistic toy houses for the small girl to play with this year. They have geometric lines and broad expanses of glass. There is miniature furniture which includes over-stuffed parlor sets and all the period and modern styles. Every type of building, from skyscraper to bungalow and tourists' camps give the parent a wide scope from which to choose this type of toy for boy or girl.

There are also many paint brushes and paint boxes for the budding artist. Paint brushes with each alphabet, cloves, cinnamon, one whole nutmeg, ground, or its equivalent (a good teaspoon); one-half cup black molasses, two teaspoons soda. Bake in very slow oven in bread tins. You can also add candied pineapple and cherries to this recipe. They make it that much better.

Gwen: If your face is round and full, blend your rouge in toward your nose. This will reduce the width of your face by making your cheeks look closer together.

Gift for Man

An extremely handy gift to the college man or the traveler, one who's space for toilet accessories is limited, is a combination toilet kit and military brush. The top of the brush is really a pigskin case; containing shaving cream, razor, toothpaste and brush. A slipper around the outer edge of the case holds the contents firmly in place when not in use.

Why Many Wives Do Not Drive

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D. Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

SOME dominating husbands assume their wives to be back-seat drivers. Many a wife and mother must stay at home or go away by bus or trolley car, or wait till her husband comes for her.

Of course, a few husbands, like a few fathers, are unfit to handle a car, but usually the husband, being badly biased, is a very poor judge of the matter.

Long have I been interested in the psychology of the husband who won't let his wife learn to drive a car, acting toward her as if she were ten or twelve. He will insist that she is just too nervous. Why she would kill the whole family and "rack the car! And then the damage she might do to others!

Generally his conscious motives are above reproach. But, often, underneath, lurk very curious unconscious motives. If she were to drive the car he might be inconvenienced occasionally; she might want to use the car at the same time he would want to use it elsewhere. For, as it also does, driving a sense of superiority and self-exaltation is felt that only he can be entrusted with the car, or that only he possesses poise enough to be safe at the wheel. And when his wife shoots or screams warning as he drives, she considers him the more sure that she should not drive. He may, perhaps, indeed, set convincing her that she never should attempt to drive.

Weak for Flattery

But most wives who are very nervous when the husband drives would surpass in poise, once they really learned how to drive calmly.

Now I do not desire to make wives and mothers who don't drive feel hungry. I want first to help them see that it is not from deliberate meanness the husband may have kept them from driving, therefore that they should be tolerant toward his frailties. Secondly, I hope a few offending husbands might read this. For good family relationship, the mother should learn to drive the car and should have a reasonable share in its use.

To mothers who would like to learn to drive: Let me recommend that you employ some competent stranger to teach you to drive with his or her car. Then some morning, while your husband finishes his breakfast, nonchalantly run his car out of the garage for him. Later, when the car is available, go somewhere alone in it. But be very sure that the first demonstration of your driving which your husband sees is successful. And good luck.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

R. P.: "In a case of various veins and varicose ulcers, what benefit to be derived from immersing the feet in hot and cold water alternately? Do you advise elastic stockings? Is there any cure for various veins, and ulcers?"

Answer: The treatment of conditions as here described will not cure varicose veins or ulcers, but may give a certain measure of relief. Elastic stockings are merely temporary and palliative. The injection method is very successful, and is calculated to cure nearly all cases. I would strongly recommend it for anybody, especially if an ulcer is present, because it tends to get worse with time unless the veins are obliterated.

Lucille Ball

MISS LUCILLE BALL, young screen player, selected this black dinner dress she is wearing.

The dress is made of crisp, heavy taffeta and features large puffed sleeves and a full circular skirt. French blue velvet ribbon encircles her waist and forms three flat bows from neck to waistline. The bows are centered by square rhinestone buckles.

When the Russian Ballet visits American cities for its annual engagement there always is a great deal of interest in its members—how they look what they wear, etc. This year when they entertained from their boat many of the girls were wearing Gamayum jewelry. Gamayum was originally a mythical Oriental figure who was taken to Constantinople during the reign of the first King Constantine.

Russian students carried the myth to Russia, and the peasant folk adopted Gamayum as their own. Legend has it that one who wears the likeness of Gamayum will find a mate of her own specifications quickly. The jewelry the Russian Ballet wore was made of catalin, a synthetic substance, and represents this figure in the form of a symbolic Russian eagle with the head and beaks of a woman—all done in bright typical Russian color.

Is Gland Responsible For Life?

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M. D.

IT MIGHT pay anybody who thinks of the manifold activities of any human body, that a central correlating force is necessary. A body is much like a highly organized modern city—the people moving through the streets on their various tasks can be represented by the blood cells; the telephone wires resemble the nerve fibrils which carry communication to and from every cell; the body has a water supply which cleanses the organs and carries away waste products. Elevators, streets, ? need not enter the simile any further. As a matter of fact, I am a little stumped to think of anything that represents the heart in a modern city.

But, at any rate, we know that the kidneys are the actual spot where excretion takes place, and we know that they control it by their internal mechanism, just as the sanitary and sewerage engineer of the city controls the water supply and the disposal of waste. But what controls the whole thing? Who is the mayor and the common council?

Glands Responsible

Modern research seems to point to the fact that the thyroid gland is probably more responsible than anything else. Unless it is the pituitary gland. Thyroid and pituitary together, let us say. But it is worth while to study the functions of the thyroid.

This small bit of tissue carries with it the most enormous potentialities for anybody's life. It secretes the chemical into the blood stream which controls weight and growth, appetite, emotion, muscular action and a number of other things. We have learned about this partly by isolating the chemical and injecting it into animal bodies and testing the physiologic changes that occur, but principally we have learned about it because when the thyroid is subject to disease, and in some cases the secretion is increased and in some cases it is decreased.

When it is increased cases of thyrotoxicosis, sometimes accompanied by goiter, and a number of effects can be noted. For instance, the question of weight which was first studied in New York in 1892 by Friedrich Muller. He said that there was a paradoxical relation in the face of increased food, that he concluded from this that there must be an increased rate of tissue breakdown in thyroid intoxication. A case in point is a patient who stayed in bed for over two months, day and night, and burned about 4,000 calories a day. These were carefully weighed. This is enough to nourish a football player or a lumberjack at the hardest kind of work, and yet in the end of this period, in which she expended no energy at all, she weighed 113 pounds exactly what she weighed at the beginning.

This is what a terrible fire we are fighting.

TILTED HATS MAKE HAIR CARE NECESSARY FOR SMART EFFECT

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty" SMARTLY arranged hair, it seems to me, has never been so important a factor in a milady's ensemble as it is today. Many of our latest millinery styles depend for their effectiveness almost entirely on the condition and arrangement of the hair. All the girls from the longcoated Mrs. Plentilocks of the Park avenue penthouse to the lowly Mrs. Zilch of the East Side tenement, have started filling their bonnets at those rakish angles that leave the tresses as much in evidence.

If the exposed tresses be not smartly styled, even the last word in Paris models will look like nothing. But even more important, the hair must be clean and healthy and there's nothing like a good, old-fashioned brushing to give the hair that necessary gloss and pliable foundation for fashion's natural oil evenly over the hair. And it really helps to bring out the full richness of an attractive wave.

Personally, I believe that every woman should give her hair a good brisk brushing each day. For a brush when properly used, is one of the greatest of hair beautifiers. It removes all dirt, foreign particles and dried cuticle from the hair. It stimulates the circulation in the scalp, thus giving nourishment to the hair follicles. And it polishes the hair, making it glossy and lustrous.

It is a good plan when administering your regular brushing treatments to the hair, to keep a dry, lintless towel on hand. And after every few strokes the brush should be wiped upon the towel, in order to cleanse the bristles. This eliminates the possibility that the dirt removed from the hair by the brush will be placed back in the hair again during subsequent brush strokes.

The sort of brush that is used for brushing treatments is really a most important factor, for none but the right sort should ever be employed. The bristles should not be too sharp or stiff, for if they are they may irritate the scalp. And on the other hand the bristles should not be too soft, else they may prove ineffective and fail to benefit the hair.

The best type of hair brush, as a rule, is the kind with long, flexible, blunt-tipped bristles that are deeply serrated for penetration. Procure such a brush, use it properly and give your hair treatment with it each and every day.

Flyers Completely Dominate Play as They Sweep to 6-0 Victory Over Kingston Team

Flyers Introduce Couple of New Players to Fans

Displaying dazzling speed the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" returned to their former hockey status, that took them to two first class seasons, and blanked the Kingston City entry 6 to 0 in a scheduled Ten Pin Memorial series game at Kingston last night. The victory elevated the "Flyers" into undisputed control of first place in the league standing, the Flyers replacing the Kingston City entry by virtue of their one-sided triumph.

Coach Carling-Kelly's charges were in rare form, as the Airmen massed, passed and skated the homesters into oblivion with a smash-dazzle form of attack that, scoring two goals in each of the three periods played, the "Flyers" played combination hockey throughout the tussle. The visitors' two scores were shared between Don Cowley and the McCeery twins, Eric and Keith, the latter being a brace, while Eric McCeely flashed the red light in three combinations and brother Ernie once.

Gibson turned in his customary goaltending exhibition, being afforded sterling defence by Jamieson, Lalonde and Piggott, the former two proving strong. Coach Carling-Kelly shifted his front lines somewhat, using Halward at centre with Cowley and Eric McNeely, while LeCrise and Baldwin alternated on left wing with the second line formed by Lecomple and Eric McNeely. The shift proved most satisfactory to the Air Force heads as the squad played a rapid-passing game and applied dazzling speed and close checking at every stage of the game. Lecompte, Cowley and McNeely carried the brunt of results of practice as they returned to form to play splendid games, while LeCrise, a new-comer to the Air Force ranks, proved unobtrusive. Trainer Jack Hayman of Kingston last night, as his services were called upon to make phenomenal stops. Gordon Gallery, Dixon and Hall were the other Kingston stalwarts.

Cowley Opens Scoring

Cowley opened the scoring early in the initial frame on a pass from Ernie McNeely, while Eric McNeely sank number two on a pass from Lecompte. Cowley and Eric McNeely scored in the second and the McNeely twins tallied the two goals in the final stanza. In the second period Don Cowley was hurled to an outbreak of fisticuffs, that saw both players draw sworn over-ten penalties, and they proved spirited for the first 40 minutes, however.

The victory elevates the R.C.A.F. into first place in the league standing, a position they will be called upon to defend on Friday night versus their common rivals, the Kingston Garrison.

The lineups:

R.C.A.F. "Flyers": Goal Gibson; defence Lalonde, Jamieson; centre Halward; wings W. N. McNeely, Cowley; subs J. E. McNeely, Lecomple, LeCrise, Baldwin and Haggerty.

Kingston: Goal Gowsell; defence Nicholson, Roberts; centre Gore; wings Gordon and Boyd; subs Dolson, Stonam and Gallery.

Referees: Wm. Stein and Wm. Watts, both of Kingston.

Summary

1st period:
R.C.A.F.: Cowley (Ern McNeely) 6.10
R.C.A.F.: Eric McNeely (Lecomple) 11.35
Penalties: Ern McNeely, Jamieson.
2nd. period:
R.C.A.F.: Cowley (Ern McNeely) 7.50
R.C.A.F.: Eric McNeely 14.55
Penalties: Cowley and Cowley (2 minutes).

ALABAMA'S TEAM HAS FINE RECORD

From 1933 to 1937 Crimson Tide Has Won Forty Games

New York, Dec. 7.—(CP)—Figured solely on the won and lost records, the United States No. 1 College Football team for the last five-year stretch is Alabama's crimson tide, prospective rival for California in the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena on New Year's Day.

An Associated Press survey of the records for the seasons of 1933-37 inclusive, today revealed Frank Thomas' Tuscaloosa Terrors at the head of the parade of more than 100 of the country's leading college outfits.

During that time, Alabama has piled up 40 victories against only four defeats and three ties for a winning percentage of .899 with the disregarded, Fritz Hanson, Tulane eleven undefeated through the last two seasons—13 games without a setback and with only one tie.

But Alabama maintains only a slight edge over its closest rivals, Minnesota's Gophers. Beaten twice this year, Minnesota nevertheless has lost only three games in five years while winning 33 and tying football fans to get their money's

FRITZ HANSON MAN TO WATCH

Winnipeg Bombers Depend on Fleet Backfield Player

Toronto, Dec. 7.—(CP)—Coach Lew Hayman of Toronto Argonauts, who thinks it quite all right for football fans to get their money's worth in excitement, laid plans today to deprive the paying customers of seeing Fritz Hanson Spirit Winnipeg Blue Bombers to the Canadian grid title here Saturday.

There seems little doubt in the minds of most observers Argos will have to stop Hanson to win the title. Thus it simmers down to whether the great Toronto tackling brigade, that stopped the stars of Hamilton Tigers and the Detroit Wolverines and Sarnia Imperials in the Eastern final, can do something no team in the west was able to do effectively—bottle up Flying Fritzie.

The Blue Bombers, who made their last appearance in the east a well-remembered one when they whipped Hamilton Tigers two years ago for the title, are far from a one-man team. But the mighty Hanson, 150 pounds of Winged Mercury packed in a five foot seven frame, scored 33 of his team's 100 points in 12 games this season.

So it's Hanson that Argonauts will be out to stop and Hayman is entrusting this thankless duty to a trio of the finest tacklers in the east—Wes Cutler, Bill Heyres and Ted Morris. Hayman figures if Hanson can be stopped the rest will take care of itself.

"Cale" Carling-Kelly's R.C.A.F. "Flyers" registered their sole post-season of first place in the Van-Horne series last night by virtue of a 6-0 defeat of the Kingston City entry. The Airmen have won two and tied one in three starts, being the only team in the loop yet undefeated. One of the oddities of the league is the fact that only two shut-outs have been registered in the Kingston pre-season loop, and both cases of whitewash were applied to the Kingston City entry. The Garrison trounced Kingston 3-0 while last night the Flyers applied it 6-0. Incidentally Eddie Thomas' Redmen can elevate themselves right into the thick of the league race by taking the speedy Perth Crescents into camp on Wednesday night.

Coach Carling-Kelly changed his lines around as an experimental move last night and the trial proved most satisfactory. Halward was taken off the left wing of the Lecompte line and placed at centre between Eric McNeely and Don Cowley, while a newcomer from Ottawa, a Mr. Lamel LeCrise patrolled the left boards with Baldwin on the second line. Don Cowley, the McNeely twins and Lecompte were up to their old tricks last night and displayed some really clever passing and dazzling speed, "its rumored.

Napanee Players Eligible To Belleville Teams While Original Groupings Upheld

Sub Committee Meeting of O.H.A. Last Night Makes Decision

BURROWS ATTENDS

Queens-Garrison Proposals on Group Changes Rejected

Upholding to the letter their previous rulings pertaining to groupings and the eligibility of players within the Belleville area, the Ontario Hockey Association sub-committee granted permission to Belleville for the use of all players within the town of Napanee and westward, while no changes were made in the personnel of O.H.A. groups No. 1 and 2. R. H. "Sandy" Burrows, O.H.A. executive member informed the Ontario Intelligencer by telegraph from Napanee today.

The wire read as follows: "Groups stand as they are stop Belleville granted Napanee players".

Last night's special meeting of the sub-committee of the Ontario Hockey Association was called to settle several disputes, one chief objection being registered by Queens University and Kingston Collegiate Institute mentors relative to possible changes in the present grouping classification. The latter section interests requesting that Belleville be classed as a senior "B" club, while both Queens University and the Garrison asked to be lowered to an intermediate "A" rating. The Kingston suggestions were refused.

Original Groupings

The original groupings of Peterborough, the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", Queens University and Kingston Garrison included in Group No. 2 with a senior "B" rating and Cecil Hastings and Lennox Counties, to prove that Belleville was much closer to Napanee than was Kingston, via the old York Road.

The decision handed down means that in the future all O.H.A. hockey material in Napanee, who are desirous of playing hockey in the Association, is a series, which is not represented by Napanee, will be available for Belleville hockey in the future. The final decision handed down by the O.H.A. last night gives the Redmen the services of Roy "Pink" Wilson, Fred Bentley and Ken Murphy, the latter two being members of the champion Napanee Players Eligible

The controversy between Kingston and Belleville hockey interests arose over the question of Napanee players, both Belleville and Kingston mentors contending that the municipality was the closest to Napanee by a well travelled road". Manager Eddie Thomas provided affidavits from County civic engineers of Hastings and Lennox Counties, to prove that Belleville was much closer to Napanee than was Kingston, via the old York Road.

The decision handed down means that in the future all O.H.A. hockey material in Napanee, who are desirous of playing hockey in the Association, is a series, which is not represented by Napanee, will be available for Belleville hockey in the future. The final decision handed down by the O.H.A. last night gives the Redmen the services of Roy "Pink" Wilson, Fred Bentley and Ken Murphy, the latter two being members of the champion two goals in the initial period and were never headed. St. Louis is playing centre ice on the "Monarch" second line and given honorable mention in the St. Catharines Standard following the game. Incidentally very flilling tributes were paid the late Jimmie Whyte by all categories of sport in the Niagara Peninsula, where he will be sadly missed. Jimmie Whyte's memory will linger long in the minds of sport followers of this sector, as a gentleman and a sportsman.

The mail brings Wes McKnight's 1937-38-edition of "Who's Who in the Pacific Coast Hockey League". The booklet has a world of hockey material and will doubtless prove popular among the sporting fraternity. It is published through the sportsmanlike of the St. Lawrence Starch Company. Incidentally, and while on the subject of the N.H.L., there is to be an N.H.L. special train out for Belleville later this month. Watch the press for particulars.

Now that Belleville has fallen into line with the other cities throughout the province and we have a ray of light saving for a change, how about getting to work on a senior baseball team and let's return to the O.G.B.L. in a blaze of glory. Incidentally the daylight saving act actuality we will be able to witness full-length softball games next season without wrangling over darkness, as has been the case during late years. Apparently the sporting element of the community saw their erring ways and handed whooper yesterday to assure Belleville its proper city status throughout the summer months. There'll be ample time for fishing, ball, golf and what have you next summer days.

Notre Dame annually loses a number of outstanding grid stars, because the system at Notre Dame brings football players up by gradual stride and sophomores, juniors are not pushed forward when there is senior material available. Graduation will take eight first-strikers, five men from the second string and seven from the third, each season.

The O.H.A. sub-committee upheld the Belleville interests in every point last night, thanks to the good work of "Sandy" Burrows. The Redmen remain as an intermediate "A" unit, and also have the use of the Napanee players in the future. From all corners it was merely a case of the Kingston interests going somewhat over the O.H.A. There is no doubt but Napanee is closer to Belleville and secondly there was no rhyme or reason why Queens or Garrison should be considered intermediate "A" clubs and Belleville elevated to a senior "B" rating. The Redmen were hoisted up one notch, from intermediate "B" to "A", so why should they not have been hoisted Queens? Incidentally had the Garrison been placed in the senior groups they would have established a precedent and numerous other groups would have immediately demanded new groupings and the fat would have been in the fire. Now these questions have been settled Skipper Eddie Thomas can commence to mould together his Redmen once again.

Bryant didn't say much, but it was enough to let Stephen know he not only knew what was going on living and working but had been seeing her fairly regularly. At the first opportunity Stephen said, "Glad you've seen you, Bryant. Rim in on the consultation." Bryant turned off and called Jack Cramer and asked him what he should bring along in the way of clothes.

Bryant Wilson had a gift. It was the ability to fit into any and all surroundings with the appearance of complete comfort. He came in the apartment and looked so happily settled that Sandra hailed, to her mind him that it was time to be going wherever the evening's entertainment called.

Frankie liked Bryant and it turned out in the end that Frankie was one of the very few persons who understood him.

"I don't want to run Bryant down, Frankie," Sandra said after listening to a lengthy defense of that young man, "but aside from whispered stories, there was one or two little adventures in the public record—such as the time the newsreels strip artist hauled him into court."

"This town," said Frankie, "is full of females who make a good living out of that sort of thing. Maybe Bryant Wilson is all that cheap chick said he was, but I wouldn't take her word for it if she had picture to prove it—and I don't believe it. I can tell you a lot about a man after five minutes' conversation and this boy Wilson gets a fair rating from me. I've an idea he'd make a fair husband, too."

Sandra laughed. One of her most remembered scratches of gossip about Bryant was his proposal that he was not "the marrying kind." And yet she knew that during the past six weeks there had been something in Bryant's attitude toward her that bespoke more than a casual interest. But not getting him, she told herself, was a slow worker—one of these times he'll get around to that particular.

Not only was she grateful to Bryant for his part in her self-imposed task to get a job on The Flash, but she had been chafing more than she knew from her self-imposed laziness and Bryant promised at least a month's work. Time to plan her places. And so, in the beginning, she had been glad to maintain the status quo. Bryant was the past, but being so sure she knew him, she had waited through the succeeding weeks for the moment when Bryant's presence of being in love would be forced upon her. Something that might force an end to their friendship.

But that moment had not come and now that Bryant was back in Kearney and David's harrowing experience was a thing of the past—though Sandra decided not to send him back to college until the second term—and here they were returning from the opera when Bryant said from his chin corner of the cab, "I'm going to get married, Sandra." Just that and no more, but watching her face with a half smile.

"Good!" Sandra repeated the word, thinking: "He'd drop dead if I took him seriously."

"Well, why don't you?...We get along."

"Getting along isn't enough, Bryant. Anyway, why spoil things? You have a lovely friendship."

"You think I'm not?" He laughed deep in his throat. "Which is one of the numbered scratches of gossip about Bryant was his proposal that he was not "the marrying kind." And yet she knew that during the past six weeks there had been something in Bryant's attitude toward her that bespoke more than a casual interest. But not getting him, she told herself, was a slow worker—one of these times he'll get around to that particular.

"Getting along isn't enough, Bryant. Anyway, why spoil things? You have a lovely friendship."

"You think I'm not?" He laughed deep in his throat. "Which is one reason, Sandra. Marriage is a dive in the dark but practically every one takes a chance sooner or later. There may be something in it."

He slid his arm across her shoulders, pulled her to his side and kissed her. Sandra thought: The time has come, the walrus said..." and rested in his arms, waiting, dreading the necessity of having to tell him that little party was over. But Bryant did not kiss her. Instead He retreated to his own corner, grinning at her.

After a little he said, "The first warm day we get I'll like to take you Whitefish out for a trial run. You know, the little cruiser I was telling you about? She's ready to go into the water at New London. We'll hop over to Block Island or somewhere and come back down the Sound under the moonlight. And maybe—" He shrugged, left it there.

Sandra interrupted a comical scene in the apartment—Matt Saxby walking the floor and Phyllis, curled up on a window seat, watching with mingled amusement and curiosity.

"Well, Matt—?" Sandra said, smiling.

Before Matt could speak, Fannie said, "You'd better put a leash on a slow worker—one of these times he'll get around to that particular."

Not only was she grateful to Bryant for his part in her self-imposed task to get a job on The Flash, but she had been chafing more than she knew from her self-imposed laziness and Bryant promised at least a month's work. Time to plan her places. And so, in the beginning, she had been glad to maintain the status quo. Bryant was the past, but being so sure she knew him, she had waited through the succeeding weeks for the moment when Bryant's presence of being in love would be forced upon her. Something that might force an end to their friendship.

But that moment had not come and now that Bryant was back in Kearney and David's harrowing experience was a thing of the past—though Sandra decided not to send him back to college until the second term—and here they were returning from the opera when Bryant said from his chin corner of the cab, "I'm going to get married, Sandra." Just that and no more, but watching her face with a half smile.

"Good!" Sandra repeated the word, thinking: "He'd drop dead if I took him seriously."

"Well, why don't...We get along."

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Leading stocks moved in narrow limits in dull market territory today.

There were mild rallying flurries, but these were brief and, near the final hour, declines running to a point or more predominated.

Transfers were about 800,000 shares.

A few aircrafts, including Douglas, Boeing and United, pushed forward.

About 35,000 to 40,000 ounces of gold are exported through Bombay, India, each week.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal, Dec. 7—Buying of Christmas turkeys by individuals throughout Canada will start later this week, as first cars arrive from west, with bulk of buying during the place next week, wholesalers stock-up for retail distribution later to the retail trade. Asking prices on "A" grade birds remain 35 to 36c per lb., spreads which are 1c to 2c above a year ago. Prices ruled very firmly generally and supplied steady receipts were 294 cases of eggs, three boxes of butter and 300 boxes of cheese, excluding truck arrivals.

At the Canadian Commodity Exchange 189 boxes of Quebec grass regraded butter sold as 30 2-4c, and 100 boxes sold at 30 1-2c. Closing butter prices were 30 to 30 1-4c for Quebec fresh, 32 score. Butter futures closed steady and unchanged at 30 1-4 to 30 1-2c for December, 30 3-4 to 30 3-4c for January and 30 1-2c to 31c for February. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 31c for solids and 31 1-2c for prints.

Graded shipments of eggs were 78 for A-large, 76 for A-medium, 26c for A-pullets, with original grades out of storage at 24 to 25c for large, 23 1-2c to 24c for medium, and 21 to 22c for C.

Blizzard Sweeping Over Western Canada

Winnipeg, Dec. 7—(CP)—Blizzards swept the prairie provinces yesterday with heavy snowfall in Southern Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Roads filled in South Saskatchewan. Four inches of snow was general in Southern Manitoba, but bus schedules were not delayed. A 40-mile n. and in Edmonton blotted out the sun.

Winnipeg reported the day's low temperature of 16 below zero. The morning rose as high as 24 in Saskatoon, 28 above in Regina and 26 above in Edmonton and Calgary.

Board Room Gossip

MARKET COMMENT

The stock markets have been able to get some encouragement from the economic developments recently taking place at Washington and a moderate amount of favourable response has followed. A firm tone was displayed locally at the week-end reflecting a stronger Wall Street, although trading at the latter centre was quiet.

The Federal Reserve Bank of the U.S. has announced a further easing on marginal trading restrictions in an effort to overcome thin and hesitant markets, and this development, apart from the obvious effort to aid the members of the exchange, is a sign that Washington has "thus the wind up" with respect to the market and business slump and is determined that the S.E.C., and the Federal Reserve to take action. Consideration also is the intimation that the budget matters at Washington left room to spend a $600,000,000 slash in expenditures. A balanced budget is one of the principal measures officially urged by U. S. bankers.

With administration efforts evident to remove the strangulation hampering business generally an early end to the recession, there may be said to exist the basis for optimism as any factors for a reversal in the trend of security levels. Canada's market and business decline, however moderate it has been (particularly in the sphere of secondary industry) in reflection of U.S. conditions, will apparently await a more definite direction on Wall Street before any long-distance prophecy can be made with a degree of accuracy.

ABITIBI

There is not much new on the affairs of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company at the moment. From one quarter it is learned that all differences between the two groups are about to be settled but the Bonbright-Montreal Light, Heat and Power group is that no more should be made until the judgment is given regarding another suit brought to be sold under the Judiciary Act or not.

Financial World

Current developments suggest that the time is approaching when a more aggressive attitude toward security purchases will be warranted, but nothing has appeared that definitely does need for haste in abandoning previously advised protective investment policies. Broadened bull market has centred chiefly on statistics showing continued business declines, and a further factor which remains to be digested is the batch of final quarter earnings reports which in many cases, it should be clear, will make considerably less than pleasant political policy still is one of adherence to caution with commitments confined to issues which are being held for income.

MINE OPTIONS

Gillies Lake Porcupine has advised the Toronto stock exchange that the Dec. 3 payment covering underwriting on 50,000 shares and the 1-3 cents a share under agreement Nov. 3 has been received, bringing total listed shares to 199,900 shares. This payment completes obligations arising under the standing option on 500,000 shares with first block of 100,000 shares at 20 cents payable by Jan. 3, 1938.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 7.—(CP)— Calves 200; prices steady to $1 after first opening on the Toronto Livestock Market today. Cattle trade was dull with only a few hundred sold by early afternoon. Cows eased 25c and medium and good steers 50 cents lower. Lambs and sheep held steady with no bids or sales made by mid-session.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were:—Cattle 250; Calves 300; Hogs 1,500; Sheep and Lambs 200.

Top butcher cows sold at $3.75 with common downward at $2.50. A few weighty steers brought $6 to $7.50. Butcher cattle traded from $3 to $5.50. Good butcher bulls moved at $3.50 to $4. Medium fed calves sold at $8.50 with good at $8. Stockers went at $3.50 to $4.75.

Choice veal calves were priced at $9.50 to $10 with common lightly downward to $4.50. A few heavies ranged from $4 to $6.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.25.

Good lambs were $7.75 off cars and $7.50 off trucks. Bucks and heavies brought $5.50 to $6.75 with a few culls $5 to $6. Sheep ranged from $3 to $4.50 cwt.

FOUR KINGSTON TEAMS DROP OUT OF THE O. H. A.

Kingston Interests Oppose Decision Handed Down by Association

TELEGRAM CONFIRMS

In a special telegraph message to the Ontario Intelligencer this afternoon from Wm. J. Walsh, sports editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard, it was announced that all four Kingston clubs affiliated with the Ontario Hockey Association had withdrawn from the Association in protest to last night's decision handed down by the sub-committee of the O.H.A. regarding the disposition of Nesparco players and the refusal of the Queen's rink owner, the Trenton team or any de-

The Kingston interests recently objected to the O.H.A. relative to the groupings of C.O.H.A. group No. 1 and 2. Queen's University and Kingston Garrison requesting an interlocking O.H.A. schedule with the Kingston, Kingston Hockey Club, Kingston, Garrison and R.M.C. Hockey Club, which was refused by the Association today.

Moneta

Activity which characterized trading in Moneta shares last week is based on estimates of high grade ore bodies known to be contained in the mine has 300 tons of proved ore per vertical foot with a grade of $26.10. Next level now being developed, 700 feet with a grade of $21.82 across thirty feet. Present development is for about December 31 in a mill of 150 tons per day initial capacity.

Mr. and Mrs. Japan

It is one of those fine, crisp morning, for instance. The temperature veil of mist has rolled away as the first rays of the morning sun gild the diamond-crusted spiring the tree tops and house roofs. Against the cold atmosphere the outer circle of great Tokio, and the time is between five and six. Here and there the silence of the morning is broken by the sound of sliding shoji being pushed back, and thin white pillars of smoke begin to rise here and there, perpendicularly, writes Tomiitiro Nakamio in "Japan in Pictures" (Tokio).

Somewhere soon one has already switched on a radio and the commencing notes of the physical exercise instructor is heard. A father and son, both clad in white cotton shirts and shorts, start practicing the morning exercises in front of the piano mute, their comical actions contrasting sharply with the more serious gravity on their faces.

Let us peep into the sacred precincts of their home. It is a two-storeyed house of five rooms with a wooden roof as high as a man's head and a small garden as neat as a tea tray.

The "living-room" or living room has already been dusted and swept, the sun-cupboard, an electric toaster and a low table are all the furniture in this air-tight room. Beside the table a cushion is laid for the head of the master, who will shortly squat down there, kneel double under him, and solemnly partake of first cup of green tea.

In the saucepan bean soup is boiling, to which seasoned vegetables, fish and other delicacies have been added, and the aroma, age-old yet always refreshing, of the morning meal, is in the air, never without bean soup, besides which there may be eggs, a few shreds of toasted seaweed and pickles.

x x x

Let us suppose for the sake of illustration, that the family consists of a man of middle age with three children and a young maid of 18 years of age, the children are all of school age. The father, who is thirty-five years old, married at the age of twenty-five and is an accountant in a factory. Gradually from a commercial factory he earns a salary of 120 yen a month (note: the yen is worth, at present rate of exchange, about 30 cents in Canadian currency), plus a bonus of two months' wages given twice a year, which all-in all makes his average income 160 yen (480) a month. For the house they rent, they had to pay a deposit of two months' rent in advance. The monthly budget will be something like the following:

Rent	30
Food	50
Education	10
Clothes	20
Sundries	20
Total	130 yen out

This is not altogether satisfactory. For instance, there are no provisions made for sickness or savings for the future. The wife is one of the maid-servant, a matter of six or eight yen, must be added to the budget for wages and sundry expenses.

The husband must have two or three suits of foreign clothes, two overcoats and a dressing gown, a few pairs of shoes, and besides a complete set of Japanese kimono due to the climate and way of living.

x x x

He works at the office from nine in the morning till five in the afternoon. He is considered a very capable clerk, yet his prospects of rising to even a department-head's position are very remote indeed. With a yearly rise in salary of only five yen, and the family budget expanding much more rapidly with the growth of the children and the mounting cost of their education, the wife's saving are hardly a most strenuous time to make both ends meet.

Left to herself, the wife would very much prefer to sit by the fireside and read the latest newspaper, but that will have to wait until evening, as there are much sains of mending, cleaning and washing to do.

Then the husband returns home. Hearing him footsteps outside the wife rushes forth to receive him in the hall and helps him to change from his foreign business suit to Japanese kimono. Then he sits down by the brazier and, standing with rice, raw fish, bowls of soup, cooked fish and other side dishes, a dinner prepared by the wife with the utmost effort of pleasing her husband's palate.

x x x

When the meal is over, the father and children engage in a discussion of all kinds of worldly and fairy topics while the mother and maid clear away. The children are ready for the next morning's breakfast: the primitive wood, the three broken only by an occasional call of the Chimes-mouth wonders horn. On Saturday, the father takes the children to the movie pictures for a special children's program, leaving the wife at home quite pleased that the children are in the capable hands of her husband. In fact, she is almost as excited as if she was going with them.

And so the life of the average middle-class salaried man goes on day after day, year in and year out.

Marmora

W. J. Pack Heads Polls at Marmora

Marmora, Dec. 7 (Special)—Due to no contest for the township this year, polling in the municipal election held in Marmora and Lake Township on Monday was not so busy as usual. However, the level interest in the election was evident. W. J. Pack for the office of reeve headed the polls, A. Tompkins again made a good showing in securing second place, G. H. Davidson, a new aspirant to a seat on the council came third and C. Kelly another old councillor completed the roll of the elected. W. Billings, T. D. Webb and O. Wilmot were the unsuccessful nominees.

John A. Bell was returned as reeve by acclamation at the nomination, the first time this level prevailed in that office. Results were compiled by five of the polls by 6 p.m., one hour after the voting closed and returns were received from poll 5 in the northern end of the township by 6.30 p.m. Results as follows:

Reeve—Poll 1 66; Poll 2 71; Poll 3 72; Poll 4 36; Poll 5 46; Poll 6 57. Total 380.

Councillors—Poll 1 60; Poll 2 52; Poll 3 55; Poll 4 30; Poll 5 35; Poll 6 54. Total 286.

Davidson—Poll 1 72; Poll 2 37; Poll 3 45; Poll 4 28; Poll 5 7; Poll 6 30. Total 219.

Kelly—Poll 1 62; Poll 2 32; Poll 3 52; Poll 4 24; Poll 5 15; Poll 6 36. Total 221.

Billings—Poll 1 56; Poll 2 45; Poll 3 36; Poll 4 21; Poll 5 2; Poll 6 30. Total 189.

ROBBERS MAKE HAUL

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP) — Robbers got $6,000 cash in two week-end raids discovered here today. The safe in the Power Groceteria was almost completely wrecked with screwdrivers and other heavy tools and $2,000 was taken. Gong Wong's fruit shop was entered and a safe with $500 cash in it stolen. The safe, smashed open, was found in a nearby laneway. —

INJURED GIRL RECOVERS LOST RING AND MONEY

Sarnia, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—Miss Carmen Gadbury, convalescing from injuries received in an auto accident three years ago, had a pleasant surprise. A diamond ring and $10 in cash, lost when she was injured, were returned to her with the explanation they had been found in a corner of the ambulance that took her to hospital.

Shannonville

Shannonville—The spacious home of Mrs. K. B. Vrsha was the scene of a progressive euchre on Wednesday evening. The party was staged under the auspices of the ladies' auxiliary of Belleville chapter No. 85, which is Mrs. Vrsha's group. There were seven tables in play with the prize-winners being:

Ladies, first, Mrs. Harry Shaw; second, Miss Ida Bird; third, Mrs. Howie. Gentlemen, first, Lorne Lester; second, Mr. Wilkinson; third, Mrs. Ross Shaw. Prizes for lone hands: Mrs. Beck, Door prize, Mrs. Wilkinson. During the evening a delicious lunch was served by the ladies assisted by members of the Chapter. Mrs. K. B. Vrsha is convenor and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald is co-convenor.

Evangelistic Meeting

An evangelistic meeting conducted by evangelist Tissel of Belleville was held in the home of Mr. George Frizzle on Monday evening. Another meeting will be held this week.

Hockey Rink

If present plans materialize Shannonville will have an open air rink this winter. Local boys are busy working at the rink at the present time and it is hoped to have the rink completed in a week's time. Last fall the rink was boarded and all that is necessary at the present time is to scrape the ice surface in order that it will be easy to flood. The rink is to be situated on the property of W. G. Dale who also furnished the lumber to board the rink. The necessary funds for lighting the rink will be furnished by Dr. M. E. Rickbridt who is the backer of the Shannonville basketball team which is an entrant in the South Hastings league. Dr. Rickbridt already has done much for the furthering of sport in this community for which the boys are truly grateful. Last winter a group of local boys played a few exhibition hockey games on foreign ice and although they did not have much luck a rick on which they might have their practice should go much for them.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Clarke of Holloway were Thursday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald.

"TAKE A FELLOW LIKE MYSELF"

"I was a service boilerman, got a decent living, and lots of fun. My wife and two kids. The kind of life insurance that will protect my family always appealed very much. But this Life Protected Policy guarantees them $250 a month for 20 years if anything should happen to me. And if I live to age 65—and I sure hope I do—I'll get a regular income for the rest of my life. And besides that, I get dividends annually, so it is a profitable saving plan.

"If you are in good health and can afford $25 cents a day, you can provide this protection for your family.

Example at 35 years of age.

IN MEMORIAM

BELCH—Of Sarah M. Elliott, wife of Geo. Belch, who died Dec. 7th, 1934.
When least expected death doth come,
No hand can hold thy power.
The call, the healthy and the strong
All perish like a flower.
And part to part with those we love,
And hold on earth so dear.
A trial is not known.
No pain nor sorrow,
Sadly missed by Husband, Sons and Daughters.

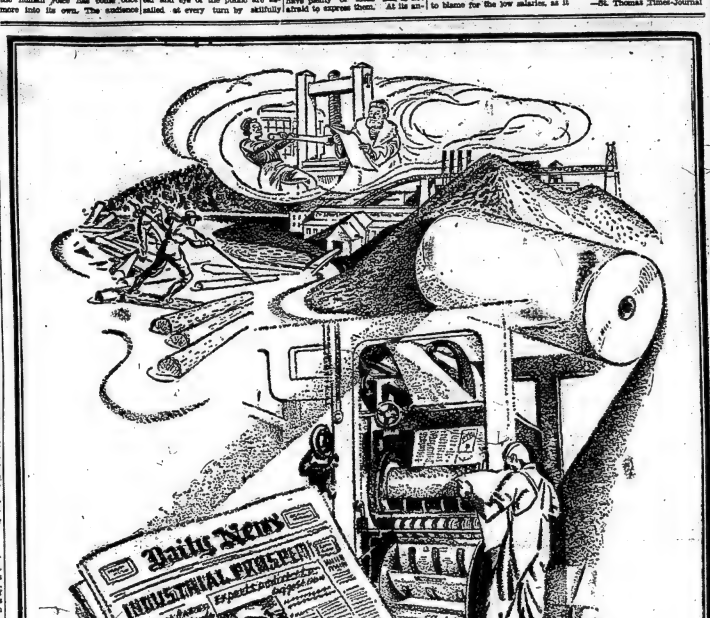
SIGHT AND SOUND



The world is full of people willing to tell other people things and trying to find new ways of screwing their attention. The earliest and most natural instrument for that purpose was the human voice. The world has travelled far since the days when Aristotle sat the hills or his ideal city-state by stipulating that it should be of such a size that all its citizens assembled in public meeting could hear the words of a single orator. It has travelled far, but it has travelled strangely enough full circle. With the invention of wireless diffusion the human voice has come once more into its own. The audience capable of hearing the words of a single orator is numbered today by tens of millions, scattered over every inhabited land in two hemispheres. It is to such audiences that King George or President Roosevelt or Herr Hitler speaks. It has been suggested, not without at least some show of reason, that it is modern invention which, by multiplying the speaker's voice as to faces an audience of hundreds of thousands and transmitting it to millions more of unseen hearers, has made dictatorship possible. Ancillary to that is the cinema, which adding sight to sound, makes the features, and almost the personality, of leading statesmen familiar to every voter. Today the ear and eye of the public are sailed at every turn by skilfully directed streams of ideas, emanating from interested or disinterested sources, based often on statements whose falsity is patent to the instructed but inflicoverable by the many. Such dissemination of ideas and facts may be the salvation or destruction of democracy, but in our own work for salvation only if behind the ideas, which are necessarily controversial, lies a solid background of established and undisputed fact. —London Spectator.

RURAL MAIL MEN

The Twentieth Century Liberal Association of Ontario seems to have plenty of ideas and is not afraid to express them. At its annual meeting in Toronto a resolution was adopted favoring increased salaries for rural mail carriers. The resolution, which called for a "living wage," declared "that without a doubt these government employees "are the most poorly paid civil servants in Canada. "It was introduced by C. Miller, of Dutton, who said that "he knew a rural mail carrier, who covered a twenty-mile route daily for $300 a year, and, besides, had to maintain his own conveyance.

This is a ridiculous salary for a government to pay an employee who in all kinds of weather has to carry out an exacting and important contact. Of course, the rural mail-carriers are primarily to blame for the low salaries, as it is the prices they quote in their tenders which fix the standard of pay. Some with other sources of income can afford to take a lower salary than others who would have to depend solely on this work for. Every government should set a good example to private industry by paying a living wage to its employees. It should fix a living mileage rate below which any tenderer would not be allowed to go. It could then call for tenders and award the contracts to the most promising applicant. But it's small potatoes with few in a hill for a government to expect its employees to work at less than a living wage.

Bulwarks of Prosperity

Scarcely less important than the dependable news service they provide every day is the contribution the Canadian daily newspapers make, as an industry, to the economic welfare and prosperity of the nation.

Apart from the work of collecting, transmitting and editing news from every corner of the world, many subsidiary trades and enterprises have been established and prospered that the personal service your daily newspaper provides could be extended and maintained.

Directly and indirectly the daily newspapers of Canada provide employment to tens of thousands of Canadian citizens in all parts of the Dominion, from logging camps and paper mills to the printing presses of your local daily newspaper.

Today, it is estimated that more than a half million Canadians are dependent for their livelihood upon the newspaper industry.

Consequently, in addition to providing an essential service to more than two million families every day, the Canadian daily newspapers make an important contribution to the economic and industrial welfare of the nation.

"Dear OLD Santa"

—here we've been married half a year and now it's Christmas and for the life of me I don't know what to get the little girl! I think she'd like a lamp for the living room—but then again she might prefer an electric cleaner. Golly, Santa, as one old married man to another can't you help me out?

Anxiously,
JOE

Dear Joe:
Well, young fellow, it shouldn't be hard to decide. Does this young lady do her own housework, or has she a maid? With someone in to make the beds and wash the dishes, I'd say buy her a lamp . . . but otherwise, well, for gosh sakes, help her out with the vacuum cleaner! But — whichever it is — buy her something personal, too! A compact, a bag, lingerie, stockings. What it is doesn't matter just so long as it's all for her and you bought it!

Sincerely,
SANTA

Frantically yours,

DEAR MARY:
Buy him a couple of ties, of course! But before you visit his favorite store, wrap up half a dozen of his pet cravats and take them along. Show them to the sales person. Don't duplicate just what he's wearing, but get something similar. And here's a big word of caution: Don't try to set a new style for him! Buy him the kind of pattern he's been wearing. Remember—you can change his brand of coffee on him, but his neckties—never!

SAYS PREFERENCE TO REMAIN DESPITE PACTS

Canada Called 'Strongest Pillar of Whole Empire' By Sir Geoffrey Clarke

Trade Problems Arising Out of Previously to U. S. Noted

PREFERENCE RESULTS

Ottawa Agreements Opened Way to Success Says Sir Hewitt Skinner

By EDWIN R. JOHNSON

London, Dec. 8 (CP)—Negotiations with the United States for a trade pact do not mean abandonment of Imperial preferences, Captain D. Wallace, parliament secretary to the Board of Trade, declared at a luncheon of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in Great Britain today.

Before gathering of many leading business figures of the Empire, Captain Wallace paid tribute to the statesmen who initiated the Ottawa agreements effected by treaties between nations that "have achieved at the expense of other good customers. It was the spirit of mutually beneficial arrangements and prophets of doom, who revealed in stump predictions, He said he believed the recent Anglo-Canadian trade treaty would result in tremendous benefits to both countries.

Sir Geoffrey Clarke, president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Great Britain, alluded to Canada as the "strongest pillar of the whole Empire," which was in a different position in respect to trade due to its close proximity to the United States.

Replying to criticism of the disproportionate balance of trade between Canada and Britain, Sir Geoffrey remarked it was a logical state of affairs considering the difference of populations.

"I think the prospects of business is perfectly fair" he declared. "We should be thankful for the enormous advantages we have got."

Sir Geoffrey said there was no sign of a slump in trade interest and that the slump-mongers would find difficulty in undermining the future, which looked particularly hopeful.

HECTIC SESSION ON ROAD SYSTEM BY THE COUNCIL

Opinion Divided as to Who Should Control County System

MOTION LAID OVER

Children's Aid Society Under Fire In Morning Session

Requests from the Lennox and Addington County Council that Hastings County Council concur in a resolution opposing the proposed question of the government taking over County Road systems in that "any change in the present County Road system that would lend to assumption authority of County Councils with respect to administration of roads as the present system is working out satisfactorily and that the present spirit of argument in a hectic session of the County Council this morning.

Arguments pro and con flavored with a slight odor of political science flew across the eastern Shire Hall as members rose to their feet to be heard. Oil was poured on the troubled argumentative waters by the motion of verbal battle, when Reeve George Jordan moved an amendment to the issue that the question be laid over until the January session.

Reappointed Keeper Favors Move

Reeve Jordan thought that if the government wanted to take over the County Roads "let them do it".

Reeve George Thompson, Rawdon:—"What about the labor situation? Under the present system every labor has benefited and will do so if the county continues to operate the road system."

Reeve Lochhead, Tyendinaga, said, "This gentlemen, is a serious question, and one that concerns every municipalities we are to press ourselves. My opinion is that the county can spend money to the best advantage and can get the work done cheaper."

Reeve Ketcheson said the government would make a "political machine out of the system if the system was taken over." Reeve Clem H. Ketcheson, Sidney, advocated control in the hands of the county.

Reeve James Moore:—"We have always received more from the municipalities where the work was being done. And we can do it cheaper. Our wages are lower, even than those of the municipalities."

Reeve Asks Question

Reeve Young asked if there is the money coming from if the government takes over the system?

Reeve Jordan replied: "I will answer that question. When municipalities do the work, the money is derived from taxation of real estate. The government will do it with funds derived from other sources. The policy of the government is to relieve municipal taxation and not increase it. The answer to the unemployment

WINTER STORMS TIE UP TRAFFIC WITH HUGE DRIFTS

Thirty Inches Snow at Fort Erie Worst in Years—Bus Marooned

NORTH ONT. ESCAPES

Comparatively Mild Temperatures Reported at Soo And North Bay

Business and other forms of activity were at a standstill at Fort Erie today as a blizzard that 30 inches of snow on the ground continued to rage.

Automobile and railway traffic in both Fort Erie and Buffalo, N.Y., were tied up by huge drifts. Buses operating between Fort Erie and Buffalo became stalled in drifts. Traffic between the border town and other Ontario centres was throttled.

The storm, part of which is centred on Ontario, was similar to storms that have hit other sections of the province since the week-end. Blizzards yesterday tied up traffic in Lambton, Middlesex and Simcoe counties and in the eastern section of the province.

Residents of Fort Erie schools was at a minimum with many pupils and school teachers unable to report because of traffic tie-ups. Many employees in the Erie Industrial plants were unable to report for work.

Emergency Crews Out.

Ploughs were clearing the Niagara Boulevard. Emergency crews of men were shovelling railway tracks clear in the border town's railway terminal. Street car traffic in Buffalo, across the Niagara River from Fort Erie, were crippled by the heavy storm.

Northern Ontario appeared to have suffered least from the storms or colder temperatures than the southern part of Ontario and the province yesterday. Vessels passing through Sault Ste. Marie reported the St. Mary's river still free of ice.

Snow was general in the Sault district, however, about four inches fell in the city. One, 150 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, reported a snowfall of 15 inches. Temperature at Sault Ste. Marie 19 degrees above zero.

North Bay and Owen Sound reported mildness. Rain and comparatively mild temperatures.

Barrie Hard Hit.

Several cases carrying children to school in Barrie became stranded today in one of the highway south of Waverley, 30 miles north of here.

The school children were being taken from farm houses bordering the road. It was not known how many children in the cars, but that they can't move until we get the blizzard under way. It is an all day job.

He said crews of men already had started clearing the road.

Kitchener experienced the first real blast of winter during the last two days leaving country and provincial highways practically blocked and some sections impassable. The temperature dipped to 17 last night, the coldest recorded here this winter.

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP)—L. G. Fabian, general representative of the Automotive Transport section, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, and six drivers of Crosbie's Transport, Simcoe, Ont., told him they had been threatened with discharge if they joined the union.

Fabian's statement was made in reply to a question by Joseph Singer, counsel for the Cherrier Royal Commission on Transport, at today's sitting. Mr. Singer questioned charges made by Frank Scott, Montreal, that there was "considerable intimidation" by transport employees joining unions.

Alleges "Intimidation"

Fabian said two weeks ago he was in Brantford to see Crosbie employees on the Simcoe company. He said they similarly refused and some sections impassable. The temperature dipped to 17 last night, the coldest recorded here this winter.

JAPANESE WARN NON-COMBATANTS TO EVACUATE CITY

'Hostilities May Engulf Nanking Any Moment' Says Spokesman

MAJOR STRUGGLE

Chinese Claim Japan Repulsed With 1,000 Casualties

Shanghai, Dec. 8 (AP)—Japanese authorities tonight warned all foreigners and Chinese non-combatants to evacuate beleaguered Nanking as quickly as possible.

"Hostilities may engulf the city any moment," they said.

Through Consul Okamoto, Japanese Consul General at Shanghai, the authorities requested representatives of foreign powers to inform their respective nationals of the impending struggle in the evacuated Chinese capital.

"The Japanese said they considered the former capital "one large fortification" and therefore could not give Chinese non-combatants any assurance of safety in the so-called refugee zone.

Thousands of Chinese, who took no active part in the defence of the city, were huddled in the refugee district.

"Persons therein should evacuate", the Japanese spokesman said. "If we engulfe the area the Japanese cannot be held responsible."

Major Struggle Imminent.

While indicating a major struggle for the former capital was imminent, the Japanese said today's reports of no major developments in that sector, about 20 miles west and slightly south of Shanghai.

Military and naval spokesmen said that the main objective of the Japanese military machine, acting in concert, is to subdue Chinese opposition in the vicinity of Kiangyin forts, about 50 miles east and down the Yangtze River from Nanking.

They said that army units were

Slams Self-Locking Door In Faces of Two Robbers; Thieves Gag 2 Women

Coniston Bank Manager Shows Presence of Mind in Danger

APARTMENT INVADED

Robbers' Anxiety About Light Switch Spoils Their Plan

Coniston, Ont., Dec. 8 (CP)—A bank manager and a waitress fooled and foiled two armed men who attempted early today to steal a $30,000 International Nickel Company payroll from the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch here. Coniston is seven miles east of Sudbury.

Surprising the branch manager, Hilton Graham, his wife and Mrs. Mrs. A. P. Addison in the Graham apartment over the bank, the two gave the bandits a few minutes after midnight, the robbers bound and gagged the women, saying "we want the payroll".

Forced to Lead Way.

They forced Graham and Addison to lead the way downstairs to the bank where the company payroll of more than $30,000 was placed in a safe nearby. Then the robbers failed to reach the bank office.

As they reached the entrance of the office, and asked where the light switch was situated. He wanted to turn out the light. He was told it was at the top of the stairs.

While the robbers turned, Graham and Addison opened the door and ran out, slamming it locked behind them. To escape, the robbers had to run upstairs, through the living-room in which the women were bound and out by a back stairs.

Had Wide Living Room.

As they hurried through the living-room, one fired a revolver shot that passed through a rear-door pane and lodged in the overcoat owned by Mr. Addison. And as they almost gained downstairs, another shot was fired. Neither shot was directed at anyone.

It was considered doubtful that the robbery would have been successful had the bank manager taken the holdup men into the bank.

J. Paul Tullio, manager of the bank's Sudbury branch and under whom the Coniston branch is administered said Graham would have been unable to open the vault.

Says He Left Set.

"There is a time lock set for the week-end," Tullio said. "The manager living on the premises is never given the combination of the vault."

Graham said: "This is a precaution adopted by the bank in the event of a holdup such as that of early today."

Clearly marked in new-fallen snow the footprints of the escaped robbers were followed for miles for several hours, the trail led to the Canadian National Railway track, to the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks.

Behind the bank, police found the sawed-off shotgun carried by one of the men with two shells in the chamber. The G.P.R. tracks they found a flashlight, 17 shotgun shells and a bottle of liquor, party

Actress Acts Eight Parts, Does Entire Play Herself

Cornelia Otis Skinner's Genius in Characterization Revealed

ACTING BRILLIANT

New York, Dec. 8 (CP)—Cornelia Otis Skinner, whose name must reveal her literary ancestry, has written a full-length drama just night with herself playing the eight parts and Doug Broadway again auge her praise.

She presented "Edna His Wife" Margaret Ayer Barnes' novel, in 11 scenes. With deft characterization and change of costume and voice, she clearly etched the drama of the small-town girl who marries the wrong man.

In the opinion of Brooks Atkinson of The Times, this sort of thing has never been done with so much talent and intelligence.

However, much as he enjoyed Miss Skinner's accomplishment, he voiced a hope that the actress, having married her medium to its logical conclusion, would now seek a place in a fully-populated play.

Arsenic Found in Pieces Of Turnip in Cows' Stomachs

Section 'Ca s Turnips Replaced After Poison Put in

INVESTIGATION GOES ON

Aurora, Ont., Dec. 8 (CP)—Police today investigated the case of poisoned cattle in a section bordering nearby Whitchurch and East Gwillimbury Township when it was learned that one farmer lost four or five cows that became poisoned.

Investigation of stomach contents of the poisoned cattle by Prof. Joseph Rogers, Provincial analyst showed arsenic caused death. Pieces of chewed turnip found near the animals contained arsenic, he said.

Police said they found two turnips in the area, in which arsenic had been placed. A section of the turnips had been cut out and then replaced after the arsenic had been inserted in the hole.

JURY RETURNS 2 TRUE BILLS

Two Recommended For Naturalization by Judge McLean

True Bills indicting James Dawson, Deseronto, on two counts of attempting to defraud, were returned by the Grand Jury at the opening of today's session of the Jury Sittings of the County Court now in session before His Honour Judge R. H. McLean in Belleville.

Dawson is charged with making false declarations as proof of loss from the result of a fire, by stating he had no other insurance in force. The charges were preferred through the Fire Marshal's department, who allege the accuseu man had two insurance policies in force without the knowledge of either company concerned. The cases are proceeding today, Mr. Charles A. Payne, K.C., as appearing for the defendant, while B. G. Donnan K.C., is representing the Crown. The Dawson case is the only criminal case on the present docket. Civil actions were postponed until later date.

Two persons appeared before His Honour Judge McLean for naturalization. They were presented before the court by Crown Attorney Ben Bush, who moved their application to the Federal authorities and recommended they receive their naturalization papers.

The two persons applying for Canadian naturalization were Mrs. Emel Behm, Maynooth widow, Mrs. Behm was born in Kreis Schwetz, Germany, and arrived at the port of Baltimore, Md., U.S.A., in 1921, coming to Canada in 1921. Mrs. Behm stated she had six children.

City and District News

REPORT RABBITS ARE SUFFERING FROM TULAREMIA

Rabbits of the district are at present suffering from tularemia (rabbit fever) and hunters should take the precautions when skinning and preparing them for cooking, according to the observation by a district naturalist who reports the unhealthy condition of several which have been shot recently as proof.

The disease, though communicable to humans following any infection which might occur through a skin abrasion or cut, is caused by a germ which the task of cooking easily destroys. Only in the raw state, may the danger be found.

Symptoms of tularemia are revealed by the slowness in action of the diseased rabbit, and the general appearance of ill health.

TO REMOVE POLES FROM PARKING LOTS

The city Public Utilities Commission and the Bell Telephone Company's local branch will work in cooperation with the city department of public works in an effort to create more parking space at the rear of downtown business houses on the west side of Front Street. Poles carrying telephone and electric wires are to be moved by the companies and placed in other locations which will give full service but the poles now employed on the project. According to plans the electric light standards will be moved in the same manner as other obstructions moved to give a wide right of way for the cars.

Shot during a during daylight robbery by a neighbor's chicken run, after it had soared aloft with a full grown hen clutched in its talons, one of the largest horned owls yet seen in this district by its possessor, J. Walter (Jim) Keller, Shoab, Church street, after being killed late yesterday afternoon.

The huge bird which resembled a small eagle in flight, measured a wing spread of five feet, six inches. Shopping anyway after he had been brought to earth with the first shot, the owl was finally despatched with a club after a feathery battle with its victors.

Colder weather and heavier snow of the north is believed responsible for driving the large birds south in greater numbers than have been previously observed. Just one week ago, a huge Snowy Owl, one of the rarest birds to be found by the Toronto Zoo was captured on the Bay of Quinte by Harold Kellar and presented the Toronto zoological garden.

PLUMBERS and TINSMITHS

Vincial government parks of Wahnapitae, Alberta, where the animals have been killed under governmental direction in an effort to keep their increasing numbers under control, have become an important item on the city's bill-of-fare during the past week or so. A heavy demand for the meat is being experienced, it is reported by local butchers who have a considerable supply on hand. The meat averages from three to four cents more per pound than prime beef.

BAY CLEAR OF ICE

High winds which pounded the Bay of Quinte today resulted in a complete break in the ice which covered the bay following the freezing weather during the latter part of last week. Only the harbor and sheltered cove provide ice for the first of the season's skaters, though the ice which has covered the surface has dampened the surface.

AIRCRAFT FIRM GETS FIXED ASSESSMENT FOR TEN YEARS

When only five dissenting votes, the by-law to fix the assessment of the Veridier Aircraft Company on lands acquired in Dessaroto has been passed by the Dessaroto Town Council, during the assessment of $4,000 for a period of ten years. The company has stated its plans to begin the construction of a modern aircraft factory and landing field immediately.

G. HANCOCK PRES. SEED GROWERS' ASSOC.

At the annual meeting of the Quinte District Seed Growers' Association held in the Seed Grain office of Wm. Mikhael, Dominion Experimental Farm, Harold, Hancock, Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. Hancock succeeds J. A. Alexander of Hillier, Prince Edward County, to the office.

This year the annual Seed Fair of the Association will be held in Belleville on March 22, 23 and 24th. The date is one week earlier than in the year in the hope of better accommodations.

Other officers elected to the 1938 slate were, Bruce Cummings, Napanee, 1st vice-president; Lorne Rickard, Bowmanville, 2nd vice-president; G. W. Runnion, Peterborough, secretary; Jas. Wilson, Bowling, treasurer and G. W. Michael, Belleville, Fair Secretary.

BROTHER AND SISTER AWARDED TROPHIES AT CAMPBELLFORD

A precedent has been established in Campbellford with the presentation of the field day prizes at the High School commencement exercises when a brother and sister have both awarded cups for leading in their respective sections on the annual sports day. Margaret Robertson was awarded the junior girls' cup and Lorne Robertson the senior boys' cup as winner of high point in their classes.

V.O.N. BUSY WITH COLD EPIDEMICS

An epidemic of colds and other winter ailments which has gripped the city during the past few days has resulted in one of the busiest periods of the year for nurses of the V.O.N. Association, it is stated. In an effort to catch up with the numerous calls for aid, a nurse on duty recently by the board to assist the two regular nurses on steady duty.

LOCAL PORT CLOSED

Customs examiners of the local port have closed their offices for the start. ation for the present year, it was reported at the office today. With the registering of the last boat last week, the end of this season's shipping has now been observed by the office.

CHRISTMAS PARCELS SUBJECT TO DUTY

"There is an opinion generally held by many that Christmas parcels from outside the country are exempt from examination by the customs of Canada," declared Lt. Col. E. A. Gean, in charge of the local customs office. "This is wrong."

"Christmas parcels are subject to duty just the same as parcels at any other time, unless such parcels are small casual gifts of small value. This has been the rule of the department, and must be observed by the various offices," it was explained.

"Hardly a ripple" of incoming mail from overseas points and of mail gifts for local residents has been noted as yet by the department.

DANCE REALIZES $87.75 FOR LUCAS FUND

Two hundred or more residents of the city and district gathered last evening at the Prince of Wales School Wharf, a benefit dance was ranged by a committee composed of Geo. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Vandusen, Jos. Dentator, Sr., and Jr., and Jack David, and Hurt Urch was held for the family of Gatfield Lucas, Stoney Lonesome resident. Where boats and passenger stons recently were completely destroyed by fire. The sum of $87.75 was realized from the dance which held in turn he presented the family.

The impromptu orchestra which donated its time for the occasion was composed of Albert Adams, Frank Howard, Arthur (Knobby) Jones, Jerry Clement and Jack Ward.

During the intermission period lunch, donated by the ladies of that section, was served by Mr. and Mrs. Vandusen and assistants.

An expression of appreciation for the help thus given was voiced by Mr. and Mrs. Lucas and the committee during the dance.

300 MORE VOTES CAST THIS YEAR THAN YEAR AGO

More Work Involved This Election Caused Slower Returns

WORK NOW COMPLETED

Ballot boxes were being stacked and their written into numbers in the city hall by City Clerk, Wilfred J. Holmes, and assistants, anything but a breathing spell for the first time since the busy municipal election period commenced at city hall some time ago.

This year's election was counted as "one of the hardest" from the point of view of the city clerk. Hardest in that many new details had been added to the annual work of preparing the city and its voters for the yearly task of electing a new council to carry on for the ensuing twelve months. This year the method of collecting returns from the various polling booths was changed up on account of the extra counting of ballots caused by the addition of many new names to the voters' list, upon which electorate of the city will have the right to cast an additional ballot of daylight saving had also to be counted.

In spite of this year's voting appeared desultory and slow during the day just ended, 300 votes more votes were cast this year than last, it was reported by the city clerk.

As yet little comment is heard regarding the election of chairmanships of this year's council. It is however, generally understood that Ald. Thos. J. Y. Wills will be reappointed to the Finance Chairmanship, while the chairmanship of the Department of Public Works, vacated by Alderman Bateman may be filled by Alderman Lewis Lewis who for the past two years has acted during the absence of the Welfare Department.

WINTER ARRIVES IN THE DISTRICT

Although Snowfall is Heavy Trunk Roads Into City Open

Winter arrived in the district in earnest today in the form of a heavy snowstorm, which turned Belleville streets into gay white, slowed traffic on highways to a crawl as the heavy, clinging flakes plastered windshields, rear deck glass and resulted in the first drifts of the season which will be reported part of the county, and caused the first report of cold, job snow shoveling for the city's temporary unemployed.

Though traffic was slowed perceptibly on the part of heavy transports and trucks, no delay in general traffic was proceeding on good schedules, according to reports of the city and the provincial police station on the north west on regular time today.

Though heavier drifting is expected this afternoon as the snowmiasma of the heavens clears, the Bancroft-Belleville road was passable and drifts were being kept down maintained. It was reported by Roger Bagley of the Bancroft-Belleville bus service who arrived in the city at noon today. The west stretch of road was reported encountered between Bannockburn and Ridorado. The Marmora Road was also reported open by ... Aesltine Bus service and traffic was proceeding with little difficulty.

Though heavier drifts in the western section of the province necessitated the use of snow plows, none were out today in the Belleville division of the Canadian National Railways, it was reported at the office of the despatcher.

Public Works Department swathed in the city for the abatement of the storm to employ the first snowshovellers of the season on the work of removing the snow from in front of city properties and on cross walks.

FREAK CALF HAS TWO HEADS AND TAILS

Rimbey, Alta., Dec. 8 (CP) — A fresh still-born calf attracted attention today at the farm of John Eddon in his district 15 miles south of Edmonton. It had two tails, each 12 inches long, and two heads at the base. The head and four legs grew out from the shoulder. It weighed 100 pounds. Farmer Holden plans to have it mounted.

KNEES WENT STIFF IN HIS SLEEP

Agony to Move Them When He Awoke

"For three years," writes this City man, "I suffered with pains across the lower part of my back. In the morning, I awoke with such stiff that I was agony to move them. Special treatment would make me feel a little better—but that was all. Then a friend recommended Kruschen, which my doctor said I might take. I began with short a coffee-spoonful first thing in the morning. To my surprise I found my rheumatic aches and pains disappearing. I kept on with Kruschen, and although I am more than middle-aged, I have great, strong limbs, can walk for miles and able to go to my office every day.—A.W.

Rheumatic conditions are often the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients assist Nature to flush the dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

SLIPPERY ROADS CAUSE OF CRASHES

Cars Involved More or Less Damaged by Impacts

Continued snow and the slippery conditions of the city streets are attributed as the cause of three motor accidents, that occurred on Belleville streets on Monday, with no personal injuries, although property damage totalling $200 was settled in all three incidents.

While proceeding south on College Street yesterday afternoon, an automobile driven by Walter Carr, Picton, skidded at the Walter Street intersection and crashed into the rear end of a car driven by Mrs. Ethel Brown easterly on Walter Street, by William R. Dempsey, Carrying Place. The entire front end of Mrs. Dempsey's car was demolished during the impact, while the front portion of Mr. Carr's auto was damaged. Mr. Carr stated to Det. Thompson, who investigated, that he saw the approaching car as he turned into the intersection, but when he applied his brakes to retard his speed, the vehicle skidded into the Brown lady's car.

Earlier in the afternoon a motor car driven by Arthur Cole, 45 West Bridge Street, collided with a truck driven by Ernest Bennett, of this city, at the Pinnacle-Bridge Street intersection. The car was proceeding east on Bridge Street, while Mr. Bennett was travelling north on Pinnacle Street. Mr. Cole applied the brakes when he saw the unskidable skidded on the icy pavement and collided with the rear of the truck. The two cars were preferred as the matter was purely accidental, police stated today.

About the same time as the former accident two cars came together in a collision on Mastet Street, when a car driven by William McCoy, Belleville, collided with a car driven by Chief Constable Clare Meagher of the Belleville police force proceeding in the same direction at the time. Damages were reported settled between the parties concerned upon the arrival of the constabulary.

After living for six weeks in a road drain, unable to move because of the brink of starvation and hopeless of ever getting out alive, as pictured here, has taken a new lease on life. He was rescued by Sheriff Ernest Lyle, who found the man more broken man how he had wandered aimlessly for nearly seven years since he shot, but failed to kill a friend who he believed had broken his wife. The man is Jim Angus Christ, Texas. The sheriff talked new life into Rogers, find him and found him a job. Rogers has started out with new hope.

RESIDENT CHASES THIEF IN PAJAMAS

Giving chase to night marauders, who entered the home of Mrs. Harry J. H. Brown, 34 Colborne St., found his silver purse and was preparing to abandon the chase while trying to capture a youth, whom he had seen leaving the premises via a milk bottle on his verandah late last night.

After retiring last evening Mr. Brown informed police authorities on board in disturbance from the rear of his home. "I got out of bed and looked out the kitchen window from where I saw a youngish looking lad approach our rear verandah, and take 30c out of our milk bottle, which had been left for the dealer. I dashed down the stairs and out the front door, clad only in my pajamas, but the thief apparently heard me coming as he ran out on Colborne St. I chased him a short distance, but it was rather cold on the feet and he got away. I saw the man's pals waiting at the corner however." Mr. Brown stated to police officers, Det. Ellis upon their investigation.

The police have issued a description of the thief by Mr. Brown, but despite the efforts of the authorities in locating the robber, after patrolling the streets in search of him, there were no evidence. Mr. Brown stating it was the fourth occasion within a week that his milk money had been pilfered.

Obituary

MISS ADELINE McFARLANE

After an illness of two weeks' duration Miss Adeline McFarlane passed away at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. Wright, 84 West Moira Street, early Monday this Wednesday morning, Dec. 8th.

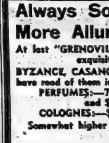
The late Miss McFarlane, who was in her 85th year, was born in Tyendinaga Township, her parents being the late John and Mary McFarlane. All her life was passed in the town in which she was born, with the exception of the past seven years during which time she made her home in Belleville. In religion she was a member of the Church of England and highly esteemed by all who knew her.

Surviving her is one sister, Mrs. Mary E. Smith, of the West.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE WILLIAM JOSS

William Joss, a respected resident of Joliet, Ill., passed away on November 29th, at the home of his son, Dr. Edward F. Joss of Dwight, Ill. He had been ill for some time.



The late William Joss, eldest son of William Joss and Agnes Cruickshank, was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, March 27, 1870. His parents settled in Corbyville, Ontario, in 1880, where he was also Miss Margaret Wall of Belleville, Ontario, predeceased him about four years ago.

Surviving him are three sons, Angus N., and Dr. Edward F. of Joliet, Ill. and Dr. Edward P. Joss of Dwight, Ill., one sister, Agnes Joss, two brothers, David and Alexander Joss all of Belleville, Ont.

The funeral was conducted by the Independent Order of Oddfellows and Rev. Mr. Olson, pastor of Willow Ave Presbyterian Church, at the Sonning Funeral Home in Joliet on Wednesday, December 1 10 Woodlawn Cemetery. Pallbearers were members of the Oddfellows.

Keep Teeth Healthy and White By Scouring Them Frequently

By HELEN FOLLETT

There are many women who scrub the kitchen sink with scouring sand once half a dozen times a day, yet swish a rush over their pearly teeth in the morning and let the minor things go at that.

Teeth should be scoured after each meal, not only to give them a high polish, but to fight bacteria, which are present and cause infections. Mouth hygiene is all important.

Unless particles of food are removed, fermentation sets up, chemicals form and germs get busy digging little holes in dentine. It is the woman who takes good care of her teeth that contributes little to the dentist's bank account. Professional services twice a year are unnecessary to catch cavities in the early stages and to have tartar removed, but it is the daily scrubber who does well by her biters. If she is good to them, they will be good to her.

Don't overlook the need of rinsing the mouth after the brushing. That is necessary for the health of the gums. If they are pale and inflamed to bleed, dip the fingers in the dentifrice, give the gums a light massage. They like that. It stimulates circulation, puts them in a glow.

A nice place for perfume is the space over the upper lip, where every movement of the arm, the fragrance essence will float in the air.

Some smarties use the atomizer on the hem of the frock. The sweet odor wafts about as they walk.

The well-groomed woman never appears powdered. She uses powder freely but applies it so cleverly that it imparts a velvety texture and doesn't give itself away.

She doesn't use eyeshadow under her chin, goes fluffing upward and, believe it or not! as it, she attends to her nose last when less powder is on the pad.

The "permanent wave" now is a common sight. Nose surfaces are naturally oily, and powder peels on. A little looks better than a lot.

Diet deficiencies are the cause of many a case of falling hair. The starfs are starving to death. Individuals who are thinky eaters, live on meat and potatoes and pastries and have little else, are bound to have trouble with their hair. Statistics.

They need calcium which is supplied by milk. They need orange juice, lettuce and carrots that contain necessary food elements and vitamins.

There has been so much curling and rolling of tresses the last few years that many fashionable women are wearing the hair smooth and straight with the merest shadow of undulation along the forward hair line.

Hair at the back is allowed to grow to shoulder length, is parted in two sections and is laid in flat bands straight across the nape line.

Administration Costs to Be Studied

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 8.—(CP)—Appointment of a special committee to investigate the cost of the administration of justice in Northumberland and Durham counties, to report at the January session, was decided at the opening of the Counties Council yesterday.

Warden R. Jones commended the efforts of Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell to keep court costs at a minimum and said there was too much expense connected with the administration of justice.

Committee meetings will occupy council's attention until the session reconvenes Wednesday.

JAPANESE WARN

ed the Yangtze River there under a curtaining naval barrage and had occupied Tungchiang on the northern shore, preparatory to a northwestward push that would parallel the Japanese advance on Nanking along the southern bank.

Japanese columns, Chinese asserted, were repulsed in attempts to storm two of Nanking's gates with 1,000 casualties.

One Japanese detachment, it was stated, was driven back from Chihli ("Unicorn") gate while another failed in an effort to pierce the city's heavy walls at Sunshine gate which leads to the Imperialist Ming palaces.

Fall to Reach Nanking.

A third column, the Chinese advices said was held up at Muilukwan and failed to reach Nanking. Some 75,000 Japanese were gathered about the city, where approximately 200,000 Chinese faced them.

While ground forces closed in on Nanking, Japanese airmen continued their bombardment of points in the Yangtze River valley. Japanese officers told of bombardments which destroyed military depots at Tungkwan, in Anhwei Province, and an attack on Kiangyin forts, where Chinese have blocked passage of Japanese naval vessels to the capital city.

Wuhu, major port above the capital was being surrounded, Japanese said. The city, where a number of foreigners remained despite war dangers, was bombarded several times.

Haifeng, in Honan Province, was said to have suffered 50 casualties in a Japanese attack from the air.

consumed. Later a fur cap, similar to that worn by one of the men, was found.

Robbers Disturb Lunch.

Graham, Addison and their wives had finished playing bridge and were having lunch when the robbers came into the room from the back stairway.

"Mr. Graham went to the door and the two men burst into the apartment," Mrs. Graham said. "They told him they wanted the payroll out of the bank.

"When he said the payroll didn't arrive until this morning, they said we know it is in the bank.

"They came into the room and upset the bridge table. Dishes flew everywhere and there was no need for it. They tied Mrs. Addison and me up with a rope and gagged us. Then they put us on the floor."

Robbers Kick Woman.

Mrs. Graham said the robbers were "very brutal with Mrs. Addison, kicking her". The wife of the Coniston United church pastor was not injured, however.

"They knew us because they told me to keep quiet or they would 'drill' my husband and 'take it out on the kid', Mrs. Graham related.

"The baby was asleep in the bedroom so they must have known us.

Two Shots Fired in Anger.

"After they threw us on the floor they ordered my husband and Mr. Addison downstairs to the bank. They said they were going to have him open the vault, but he couldn't have opened it because he did not have the combination. The teller has the combination."

Mrs. Graham said when they hurried through the room on their way out, the men "must have been angry to shoot at the door, for they fired a shot which struck Mr. Addison's overcoat on the couch. They fired again as they left by the back stairs."

LURKING DANGERS

Those who read yesterday's paper closely will have seen that in the home more accidents occur of a fatal nature than anywhere else, and that industrial fatalities occupy the lowest of three categories. This has always been claimed and once again in Canada for the year 1936 this is borne out. Readers of newspapers can scarcely believe this but the bald facts stare with figures to substantiate them.

Great as the toll on highways, it yields to the home fatal accidents. Of course in accidents in the home are included many varieties while motor accidents are largely of one variety. The facts bear out the advice that extreme care is required even in the home to prevent accidents.

Many strange fatalities were reported in Tuesday's story and here are some additional ones, all from Canada for last year:

Eight boys less than one year old and four little girls rolled on their faces in bed and were suffocated; a small girl was smothered by her mother's breast at nursing time; a girl was suffocated when a cat slept on her face; 29 children under one year of age were killed sleeping with their parents; 16 were smothered in bed clothes.

One baby less than a year old was drowned, another shot; two old men starvation due to neglect; one kicked his bedclothes off on a cold night and died.

In the age-group, one to four, an insect sting killed a girl; 33 children ate pills and other drugs; two ate gopher poison, one rat poison; one was placed in boiling water when she suffered convulsions; a little boy played with matches in a hayloft; another strangled himself in buggy harness; 84 were drowned; four were starvation due to neglect; one was killed in automobile accidents; three died when horses ran away; two were kicked by horses, two killed by cows.

In the group between five and 14 farm accidents increased as boys started working. One boy was strangled when he was suspended by the neck as a horse's tail became wound around him. Drownings were up sharply.

Industrial accidents which claimed four lives in the 5-14 year group jumped to 255 in the 15-24 group; drownings increased, as did shootings; one man died of a cob bite; seven died of exposure in the bush; electrocutions rose; athletic competitions claimed 11.

Acute alcoholic poisoning appeared first in the 30-49 group, killed nine men, one woman; industrial accidents rose to 406; five drunks drowned and 10 fell while drunk; 43 were shot; 11 died of exposure to cold, including Herman Magill of Toronto at the bottom of Moose River Mine in Nova Scotia as the world waited for his rescue and that of two companions.

In the 50-69 group 94 died from falls; one had a fight with a dog; 12 died of frost bite.

Faltering footsteps and accidental burns brought death to many old men and women over 70 and heat deaths were highest in their group. Sixty-three died of accidents in which they fractured bones; 338 suffered fractures in falls down to bed, downstairs, on the street, off chairs, on ice and from high places. Twelve men stumbled and fell fatally; 40 women did the same.

In the total of fatal accidents 6,351 in number, of which 2,760 were home accidents, no less than 1,350 persons lost their lives in Canada in home accidents in the stay-at-home age group, those 70 years and over. Very strange these figures do seem. But they are proven. One would judge that with the reduced numbers of persons over seventy years, the most dangerous age would have been passed, but it is not so.

Home accidents are not so spectacular as those on the highway but the Bureau of Statistics proves they are more deadly in their results and more numerous.

With us, law is nothing unless close behind it stands a warn, living public opinion. Let that die or grow indifferent, and statutes were waste paper, lacking all executive force.—Wendell Phillips.

Of all the parts of a law, the most effectual is the vindicatory; for it is but lost labor to say "Do this or avoid that," unless we also declare, "This shall be the consequence of your non-compliance." The main strength and force of a law consists in the penalty fixed to it.—Blackstone.

Reason is the life of law; nay the common law itself is nothing but reason.—Coke.

WRITING LETTERS TO SANTA CLAUS was formerly a prevailing habit with youngsters who really believed in Santa Claus and wanted to assist the jolly old fellow in selecting the right gift for the right youngsters. Such requests were seldom modest for youngsters had been taught to believe that Santa had everything for good boys and girls and the "goodies" for them were the more gifts could be expected. Writing on this subject, Walt Mason style, A.R.K. in Peterborough Examiner submits the following:

When I was young and rather small, and when my writing was a scrawl, I'd have to think and pause; they tell me then I used to write, and work upon it day and night. It was to Santa Claus.

A selfish little jay no doubt, I'd make a list each year, and shout, I'd want to tell it was tired; when pen was grasped with-in my fist, and when I wrote this yearly list, I told what I desired.

It was a greedy thing to do, just thinking of myself all through, I wish for this and that; and writing Santa Claus a note, as though I had him by the throat, I'd make his stock look flat.

They tell me too my lists were long, and that the spelling too was wrong, I wrote like I shouldn't ought; and I am certain it is true, before my listing things were through, I'd asked an awful lot.

But when it came to Christmas time, I found not many things were mine, I started then to learn; for little people here and there, all had to have each one a share, I'd have to wait my turn.

I've never since had what I thought, at times I want an awful lot, take less I simply won't; but often do my plans seem wrecked, I never get what I expect —it's just as well I don't.

FOLKS WAKING EARLY MONDAY MORNING were surprised and delighted to see a white mantle of snow covering the ground, a reminder of many Christmas seasons of the long ago when good sleighing weather was welcomed for the Christmas season, and the merry sleighbells rang out a message of good cheer and good will to men and women of good will. Those fortunate enough to have a driving horse certainly enjoyed sitting in a low cutter warmly wrapped in buffalo robes and wearing big and cozy gauntlets which reached up to the sleeves of the coat. Add to that the spirit of the occasion and required a tight rein as he sped along the snowy roads. Romance of the rose and buggy and cutter and bob-sleigh days has left a pleasant memory down the years.

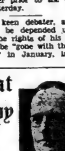
County Council Highlights Glimpsed from Press Desk

A novel petition in which a resident of Thurlow requested that the council pay legal fees to exploit a plan in which the holders of the fat lakes of the county would be made responsible to the 10c traveling public, was presented to council at the opening session yesterday afternoon. The details of the plan were not disclosed by the writer. It was referred to the publicity committee.

Don Whytock, Madoc, one of last year's auditors, again presented application for that position for the coming year.

Only three of the regulars were missing at the opening session yesterday, these being Reeve Dr. J. J. Faith, Tyendinaga, Reeve Wm. Campbell, Faraday, and Reeve W. J. Davis of Wicklow.

Public opinion changes and so do members of the county councils. A group council friendship will be terminated at the end of the December session when Reeve Robert Woods who was defeated in the municipal elections in Hunningdon Township on Monday will give up his seat to his successor, Mr. Thomas Fleming. Seated beside the veteran councillor, Reeve James Allen of Sheriff, Reeve Woods made a colorful partner to the new Tyendinaga Reeve of the northern township. Witty in debate, both inside the council chamber and in the anteroom, Reeve Woods whose supply of stories and anecdotes are a byword in council circles, will be missed by his former municipal colleagues. Reeve Woods even in defeat, "Bob" as he is familiarly termed by his fellow councillors, regarded Reeve Fleming with his usual humorous gutter prior to the opening session yesterday.



Another keen debater, and one who could be depended upon to fight for the rights of his municipality will be "gone with the electoral wind" in January, is Reeve Roads and bridges.

Harry Ketcheson of Frankford who fell by the wayside in the municipal elections held on Monday. A forceful speaker, and a council chamber "fighter" Reeve Ketcheson never let an issue die until it was either won or he was beaten in fair fight. His successor will be Mr. George N. Spencer.

The village of Bancroft will cease to be a high school district and return back to its former status as a public school district, it was revealed in a communication from the Department of Education read before council at yesterday's afternoon session. The new status will date from Dec. 31 of this year. The petition for the change in relationship to this effect was passed at the June session, and introduced by Reeve Dr. Lamb of Bancroft.

Rural Reeves apparently want no part or parcel of Daylight Saving. Communications from Reeve Wm. Burton on the invitation of the Peterborough County Council to the county council to petition legislature to pass amendments to the Municipal Acts which prohibits municipalities in Ontario from passing by-laws to change from Standard to Daylight Saving Time.

Quietly efficient and wearing the amiable smile that long ago instituted him a general favorite among members of the council, Reeve Jas. Moore of Huntingdon Township took his seat in council yesterday afternoon, the first time in many months, to finish of his twenty-sixth consecutive year as a member of the body, the first of the New Year. Reeve Moore's Committee for a number of years, Reeve Moore is respected and held esteem of a large circle of friends. His efficiency in the administration of his municipalities is well known and his advice has often been eagerly sought along lines pertaining to the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges.

OBSERVING THE PATIENT CLOSELY

One of my patients brought a friend to my office with a shoulder injury caused during a street quarrel. I took him to a nearby Xray specialist who first cured the fracture upon which enabled him to see the condition of the bones and then said:

"You were in the Air Force, you were shot down in July 19... from a height of 2000 feet, you were sent to Hospital, and remained there till September, when you went to London and Dr. Arbuthnot Lane operated on you at Hospital."

The patient looked at me and said, "Who in the man? That's true but how does he know it? I never saw him before."

The Xray specialist remarked, "It's all very simple. I could tell the date of your first operation from which he fell by the condition of the bones. Arbuthnot Lane is the man in the world who does that particular operation — Sir Arbuthnot Lane—and I happened to know that he was away off on the East-ern front in 1918 when the fight occurred and did not get back to London till the Autumn."

As he reconed this it seemed simple enough and yet I'll admit that when he first talked to the patient I was as much amazed as the patient himself.

It is this observing of the patient that counts for so much in trying to locate the cause of the patient's symptoms; the expression on his face, the way he walks or sits down, the shape of his body, all tell the observant eye of the physician something which helps him in making his diagnosis—searching for the cause of the trouble.

Thus Dr. H. A. Hare, in his book 'Diagnosis of Disease', in speaking of observing the patient, says:

"The idea with a pleated face and provided with a warm overcoat, is probably not going to raise a lump or a throat disorder; while the heavily-built calm, or phlegmatic individual, with a large head and a well-filled paunch, is much more apt to suffer from stomach, intestine, or gall bladder inflammation."

Again he says, "Also, all thin individuals will have throat or lung troubles and all heavy individuals will have stomach, intestine, or gall bladder trouble, but their particular ailment gives a tendency" to these particular ailments.

COUNTY FINANCES IN FINE CONDITION STATES WARDEN

Debenture Debt is $56,064.79 a Decrease From Last Year

MOTIONS PASSED

Will Forward Petition Again For Province to Take Over Roads

"The County of Hastings is in a healthy financial condition; the outstanding debenture debt is $56,064.79, a considerable decrease from last year, while the last payment of the 1934 highway construction debt owing the Provincial Government amounting to $60,812.56 will be paid off this year," Warden Wesley Gray, of Thurlow Township, told the members of the county council in his opening address at the first session of the 1938 session, assembling of the county fathers held in Shire Hall yesterday afternoon.

Warden Gray spoke of the fine co-operation accorded him by members of the council and the various committees during his tenure of office. "It has been a very pleasant year for me," he added, "particularly as the conditions throughout the county, Warden Gray said that 1937 had been a good year for the farmers; yields generally were better and he hoped, that next year would be a still better one as far as the farmer was concerned.

Practically the whole of this first sitting was devoted to the reading of communications received since the June session. Some animated discussion took place on a couple of proposed resolutions while other resolutions were passed without much comment.

Council Concurs

Members of Council concurred in a resolution passed by the Lennox & Addington County Council to the effect that the Provincial Government be petitioned to appoint a commission to study existing agricultural conditions and that the Dominion Government enter into trade negotiations with other nations in view of the success following the Ottawa Trade Agreements and the United States treaty, with a view of securing further markets for Canadian products. Also that the government be urged to take over the county's interests especially those in Great Britain and the United States.

Council, however took no action on the resolution to petition the legislature to pass an amendment to the Municipal Act which prohibits the council of any municipality in the province from passing a by-law changing Standard Time to Daylight Saving Time.

Ask Increased Subsidy

Unanimous concurrence was given a resolution presented by the Wellington County Council to the effect that the subsidy to the province be has doubled on suburban and county roads during the past year and no additional grants have been made towards the maintenance of these roads and that the fact that from three to six cents tax per gasoline has been levied during that time, the government be urged to grant a subsidy probably for the work on these roads.

Aftermath of a motion passed during the October session when the village of Madoc was authorized to petition the Provincial Government to take over the Madoc-Port-Hope highway, the main street known as St. Lawrence Street, upon which serves as connecting link between the Provincial highway and Highway No. 7, and the Eastern Ontario Provincial highway and the Faulker Highway, was given the council's sanction to petition the Department of Highways by the Madoc municipal authorities, asking that the matter be taken up again through the medium of Dr. Frank Croll.

Although council concurred in the motion, considerable took place regarding the inclusion of the sections of county road in the petition to the Department of Highways.

Reeve Bryan Ketcheson of Madoc stated, "He would be pleased to see the Shannonville side road in the petition."

Warden Gray: "You may be the reeve of Madoc next year, then you will be able to do something," (Laughter).

Should be Included

Chairman James Moore of the Roads and Bridges Committee stated, that the mileage asked to be included was slightly thirty-one miles. The Shannonville thirty-one approximately thirteen miles long Reeve Moore of Tyendinaga. As the county average is two hundred miles, he could see no reason why the Shannonville road should not be included.

Reeve Larkin: "This road links up the main highways in the county and has been subjected to heavy traffic. It has to be surfaced every year due to the way and tear from heavy vehicles."

Reeve George Thompson: "We have several sections of road in Rawdon Township why not include them?"

Reeve Moore thought the council would have better luck in petitioning for the Shannonville road than running between Pinkney and Madoc, Hastings and Renfrew.

Several accounts were referred to the Ways and Means Committee for payment, also for indigent hospitalization fees, and disposal of patients in the county institutions who were diagnosed as being insane.

Communications from the various governmental departments and municipal recommendations passed in the June session affecting the reduction of fees charged patients in the institution of one dollar deer tag licenses, etc., were also dealt with.

Following adjournment until this morning, Warden Gray issued an invitation to the members of council to be his guests at the annual banquet to be held in the Belvidere Hotel at eight o'clock tonight.

Lowly Weed May Be Worth Money

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 8.—Dr. J. R. Eastman, head of the Nebraska University Pharmacy Department, announced the discovery in a new antiseptic made from a weed so lowly Western Nebraska farmers do not deign to cultivate it.

The new drug is chlorencurit carvacrol, which Dr. Burt says may prove as safe and more effective treatment for such skin diseases as athlete's foot, ringworm, pustules and impetigo.

Preliminary tests in the University student health clinic, in the University of Wisconsin student health clinic and by Nebraska doctors indicate the compound is successful against many kinds of skin ailments, its discoverer said.

He explained the antiseptic is made from the nutlike fruits of the arcada pectinata which grows profusely in Western Nebraska. Farmers there have no special name for it, except mint. Dr. Burt said, but they call it "weed" because its pungent flavor is unpalatable to livestock.

He estimated the weed would be worth $38.80 a ton, the present price for carvacrol if the new antiseptic becomes an accepted remedy. A ton of the weed yields 10 pounds of oil, from which 3.86 pounds of carvacrol can be extracted.

Carvacrol, the pharmacist explained, is the liquid isomer of thymol, familiar as an ingredient of mouth washes, toothpastes, powders and lotions. As a germicide is comparatively recent.

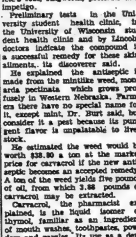
ROBB CONSULTS ARCHAEOLOGISTS



History of Stone Objects Found at Abbey Dawn is Sought

Wallace Havelock Robb, poet, naturalist and resident at Abbey Dawn near Kingston, paid a visit during the editorial room of the Ontario Intelligencer on Monday on his way to Toronto to confer with archaeologists regarding some prehistoric stone objects found at Abbey Dawn. Mr. Robb takes a great interest in old lore and the early inhabitants of the old world and the discovery of these stone objects has started his investigations in another channel, which may result in some discovery of those who roamed this district in prehistoric times.

Mr. Robb has in his home stone enigmas of which three weigh about a ton and of which there are a score more, he has also a ton lot of an Indian race prior to the time of the Iroquois, which he considers constitute a Canadian stonehenge. They are scattered over an area from 500 to 5,000 years old and of a type of stone artistry entirely unknown to the Indians of to-day. He will in addition to prehistoric stones there are several hundred stones as yet unclassified.

While in Toronto, Mr. Robb will confer with some Canadian poets in regard to the Poet festival which is to be held at Abbey Dawn in May. While in the city on Monday, Mr. Robb with his superintendent, F. Anderson visited the Ayrshire breeding establishment of F. M. Rutherford at Scarboro where he purchased four outstanding females for addition to the Ayrshire herd at Abbey Dawn. The animals are now bred, fully accredited and blood tested.

RIVAL AIR RAIDS IN SPAIN TAKE MANY CASUALTIES

Insurgent Planes Bomb Barcelona With Effect

PALMA BOMBED

Government Says Palma Seat of "Italian Resources"

Madrid, Dec. 8 (AP)—Barcelona and other inveterate co-government-held eastern coast of Spain and Palma, Balearic island air and naval base of the insurgents, rifled debris of shattered buildings today for victims of rival air raids reported to have taken hundreds of casualties.

While fifteen insurgent planes swept in from the Mediterranean yesterday to bomb Barcelona, capital of the Spanish Republic, 20 government air raiders spanned the 150 miles of water between the eastern coast and Mallorca to strike a devastating blow at the Insurgent base at Palma.

A heavy toll of dead and injured was reported from Barcelona and other coastal towns caught in the insurgent bombing.

The government airmen reported they dumped thousands of pounds of bombs on military objectives at Palma.

No Details Available.

The island city, once famous as a Mediterranean resort, was characterized in the government communique as the seat of considerable "Italian resources" in support of the insurgents.

The communique said three Insurgent planes and one government aircraft were shot down in the air battle. No details of the damage at Palma were available through government channels.

In Madrid several persons were killed by artillery fire in the populous Puente De Toledo quarter, site of one of the city's principal markets.

There were other casualties in the centre of the former Republican capital from yesterday's battering by the siege guns. The shelling of the Puente de Toledo section caused a minor panic.

The first company of the British battalion of the International Brigade was named Monday in honor of Clement R. Attlee, Opposition leader in the House of Commons, who has just completed a trip to the Madrid front.

Prof. Prince Discusses Japanese Imperialism, Chinese Nationalism

Study Club Hears of The Difficulties Facing The Two Countries

NO SOLUTION IN SIGHT

The growing interest of adults in education, manifested in Belleville by the large attendance at the night school vocational classes, was further demonstrated Thursday night at the opening meeting of the Belleville Lecture and Study Club, recently organized in co-operation with the Extension Department of Queen's University, and meeting in the Collegiate through the recognition of the Board of Education of the place in modern education of the study of current problems by adults.

The lecturer, Prof. F. C. MacLaurin, briefly explained the objects of the club emphasizing the value of group study in addition to the lectures.

Professor A. E. Prince of the History Department of Queen's University gave the opening address of the series and chose as his subject, "The Clash of Chinese Nationalism and Japanese Imperialism," outlining the recent development of the two countries, their difficulties, and the danger to the peace of the world which, the clash of their interests entailed.

Professor Prince then turned to Japan also a'country with an ancient culture, and a highly developed civilization, but until 1853 a hermit nation. Since the United States navy under Commodore Perry broke down her isolationist attitude, she has rapidly adopted the methods of the western imperialist nations and is now prepared to meet them on their own grounds.

Feels Need of Expansion

Her difficulties are many, a population of seventy million crowded into an area approximately the size of Ontario, only one sixth of which is arable, causes concentration of population to a critical degree. She has partially solved this problem by rapid industrialization, but is hampered by a scarcity of the raw materials.

The need for markets as well as sources of raw materials is vital. With the growing nationalism of China, and the boycott of Japanese goods, coupled with the increasing tariff barriers to other markets Japan sought a way out of her dilemma by the use of force first in Manchuria in 1931 and now in China proper. Japan's internal difficulties were also mentioned.

Besides this sympathetic analysis of the situation, Professor Prince outlined how the interests of Russia, Great Britain and the United States might become involved in the conflict, and how easily a spark might start a world conflagration.

Brussels Conference a Failure

The pliable failure of the Brussels Conference to halt the march of Japan, and the reluctance of the American opinion to back President Roosevelt's efforts for peace were regretted. The feasibility of an economic boycott was touched upon but in the opinion of Professor Prince an early or immediate solution of the problems of the Far East was not in sight.

Mr. MacLaurin in expressing the gratitude of the audience for the very comprehensive and interesting analysis of the situation stressed the fact that intelligent Canadians, forming public opinion may be today, can no longer neglect the considerations of such serious problems and advised the members of the club to join the groups which are to meet weekly between now and Christmas for study and discussion. A large number availed themselves of this opportunity.

FOUR COUNTRIES TRYING TO HELP

Japan is Waiting The Results of Mediation by Powers

Tokyo, Dec. 8 (AP)—A Japanese Foreign Office spokesman hinted today that four countries were attempting to mediate Chinese-Japanese hostilities.

"Japan is waiting to hear the results," he said.

Meanwhile Tokyo clung to the hope China would see for peace with the fall of her evacuated capital, Nanking. With Japanese columns assaulting Nanking, Tokyo was surprised that China was still silent on the question of peace terms.

While representatives of the war and navy offices conferred at the Foreign Office regarding the Japanese course of action when and if Nanking is taken, the spokesman said:

"The United States, England, Germany and Italy who have large interests in China may well be working toward peace.

Japan is waiting to hear the results.

"Whether such action is concerted or individual I am unin formed. However, any friendly nation's endeavor to bring China to take the initiative would be welcome."

The spokesman reiterated that all Japan desired was China's abandonment of anti-Japanism. He said Japan had no territorial designs "but if the situation changes I do not know what steps will be taken. The situation is now quite fluid. Japan's policy must be the same."

The Embassies of the nations mentioned as possible mediators did not comment on the spokesman's statements.

DR. J. C. FERGUSON WRITES SISTER

Advisor to Chinese Gov't. Was Raised in Belleville

Mrs. Alfaina J. Sherman, Church Street, Brockville, formerly of Belleville, recently received from her brother, Dr. John C. Ferguson, Nanking, China, a pamphlet entitled "Another Ten Years," an article reprinted from The Peiping Chronicle, which was contributed by Dr. Ferguson, who with his wife has resided in China for the past 50 years. Dr. Ferguson is a son of the late Rev. John Ferguson, Methodist Minister at Cannifton in the days when his sons attended Albert College here. Dr. Ferguson for many years has been an adviser of the Chinese government on many problems, more especially those in connection with education. For a special mission of the Chinese government some years ago he toured Europe to investigate commercial schools there and later served as president of Nanking University, also of Shanghai College. Other posts held by him during his half century in that country were secretary to the Chinese Ministry of Commerce, foreign adviser to the Viceroy of Nanking, and member of the committee to revise treaties by China with Japan and the United States. He is the holder of decorations from the Chinese, Japanese and French governments. In the pamphlet received by his sister in Brockville the progress of China in the past 10 years is reviewed, as well as conditions there at the present time.

Of the 12,000 drivers involved in automobile accidents last year in California, three-fourths had driven eight years or more previously without accidents.

Treat CHILDREN'S COLDS this Proved way

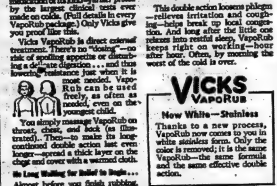
WHEN your child comes down with a cold, you can't afford to take needless risks. Use the treatment that has been doubly proved for you—Vicks VapoRub.

It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks gives you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is the direct external treatment. There's no "dosing"—no risk of spoiling appetites or disturbing digestion. Simply rub it on the throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—as the skin-warmed double action just even begun—spread a thick layer on the throat and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to Begin . . .

Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work—circulating the skin like a poultice. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose and throat.



This double action loosens phlegm —relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one is tucked into cozy sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

VICKS VAPORUB

Now White—Stainless

Thanks to a new process, VapoRub now comes out in two white stainless form. Only the color is removed; it is the same VapoRub—the same formula and the same effective double action.

You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—as the skin-warmed double action just even begun—spread a thick layer on the throat and cover with a warmed cloth.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Love, Not a Career, Way to Happier Life

Were you a tomboy?

Did you start out in life running races with your brothers, stealing rides in their bicycles and even staging rough little fights with them when nobody was looking?

Or, from the beginning were you content with the girl-child's world —happy to spend your days with your dolls and doll-houses, perhaps a kitten—wearing already with your baby hands the invisible domestic web that was forever to enclose you?

Well, the men of science have been considering over this question and they have come out with the pronouncement that the tomboy of girl is the best type of girl who has the happier life and is better adapted to the social framework.

Love, they have discovered, not competition, is what women must live by.

By competition they mean holding a job in a business world dominated by men. This is no substitute, they say, for the comfort of loving your husband and children and being loved by them. Men who find normal happiness through plying their pert in the big struggle. Women are at ease only when they have somebody to love.

The tomboy type of girl is fated to get some hard knocks in life and never to be really satisfied.

It is the little doll-mother who instinctively knows her true business in life and gets herself in training for it.

Now, common sense is a pretty good about cut.

Sometimes studious men spend years in libraries and laboratories before coming out with a piece of wisdom that you and I, simply by looking about us, could have found ago.

Of course we women need love in our lives. And we know very well that we've made that way, even those of us who once were tomboys. We should know it, even if some wise man didn't write a book or make a speech to tell us so.

And, most women who hold jobs in the competitive world understand the need of love quite as well as the girls who marry at eighteen. They take jobs because they need the money they bring, because they have to support themselves, or as often happens, help support others. But, however well their jobs may be performed, however much they may enjoy their success, they don't think of their jobs as a substitute for love. Why should they?

The trouble isn't that we women don't know what love is. We know love we do, even the simplest of us. We are made that way. The trouble isn't slow in puffing this across to us. But the difficulty is that, under the other ways of life, food and shelter and fresh air, love is the first need for the sake of the baby.

How much misery has come from that very fact?

A really wise man wouldn't limit himself to telling women that they need home and babies; that they need them even when they are doing useful work besides, even when they are capable of careers. He would show us how the world could be arranged so that every woman, idle or busy, ugly or beautiful, could reach out her hand and find what she most needs in it.

Reach to women? Why should love be love? But their hearts have long since told them. They are only too eager to!

California, Indiana burned pinon nuts in the Pueblo, Utah coloring with which they tattooed their faces.

Tested Recipes

Christmas "Carrot Pudding"

1 cup grated raw carrots
1 cup grated raw potato
1 cup seeded raisins
1 cup pitted dates chopped
1 1-2 cups ground beef suet
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 1-2 cups pastry flour, sifted with 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon nutmeg. Add nuts peels to suit taste. Mix well and steam 3 hours. Makes 2 puddings.

Excellent Christmas Cake

3-4 lb butter
2 cups brown sugar
Beat this to a cream. Then add eggs—one at a time beating the mixture five minutes after adding each egg. When all eggs have been added beat the mixture well, again.
Add—
1-2 cup sour cream
1-2 teaspoon of soda in sour cream.
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon almond flavoring
1-2 small bottle of vanilla
1-2 small bottle lemon flavoring
1 teaspoon nutmeg
2 3-4 cups pastry flour
1 lb Sultana raisins
1 lb currants
1-2 lb mixed peel sliced thin
1-2 lb chopped walnut meats
Mix fruit a little at a time into batter. Put in greased cake tins lined with two thicknesses of buttered brown paper.

Cut two thicknesses of buttered brown paper to fit over top of cake. Bake in a very, very slow oven (250 to 300 degrees F.) for 5 hours. Makes two good sized cakes.

Divinity Candy For Christmas

3 cups white sugar
1 cup corn syrup
1 cup hot water
Boil until it spins a "tak".
Beat the white of one egg stiff. Add 1 cup of nuts to candy mixture to the beaten egg white and beat well. Cook the rest of the candy mixture till it forms a soft ball in cold water. Add to the beaten mixture and beat 20 minutes. Add chopped nut meats and pour in buttered pans.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

Playing the lead in the fur show is silver fox, since it appears in capes, short coats, on coats and in evening wraps. A magnificent coat is of dark broadtail with huge cuffs of silver fox which form a muff and two wide flounces on the fur at the flaring hem.

Nothing else but an ornate belt is needed to dress up a frock. A jewel of a belt is of black velvet with embroideries in gold thread, coral and jewel colored stones making up in a bright Oriental design. The belt, which clasps in back, is very wide in front.

It does things for any dress this gilet made entirely of sequins in all sorts of fascinating flower effects. Nice with a dressy afternoon suit too.

No matter how much it glitters, it will be a success, seems to be the theme of the evening bag. So one of the best of the new bags is one made of black sequins in fish scale design, with a black and gold frame and a large rhinestone clasp.

Gold weather won't daunt the wearer of a grand new ensemble. The coat is of sable and the dress has a hood. It is lined with thin brown and white checked wool, and there is a dress of the lining fabric. A fine fashion for a dweller in northern climes.

Quite enough color can be placed on a hat to accent an all-black outfit. A little cap of black felt has five huge puffs, each one made of brightly colored ostrich, red, green, blue, flame and orange. The puffs form an enormous chou at the side.

"Two warring philosophies, the reason and serenity of Goethe and the emotional militancy of Adolf Hitler, have put the soul of the world in jeopardy." — Dr. Johan Leon Seeber, University of Illinois.

Train a Child To Depend On Self

Parent Should Teach Him Early to Make His Own Decisions

By LISA ORNEMILE

Said the mother of the groom to the father of the bride: "Doesn't my Jackie look confident tonight?" And she gave a long sigh.

Said the father of the bride: "Well, I don't see why it should distress you."

The last the shock. My Jackie grown up, on his own, independent—no more."

"Come now, he's not such a bit as all that; he's three years older than my little Ruthie. Poor little girl! She can't go to Daddy any longer for help. She'll have to nurse her own bruises now, pull her own chestnuts out of the fire, and she seems such a child still."

A well-known psychiatrist asserted in an article a short time ago that he believed, like Shakespeare, that "men have died and worse have eaten them, but, not for love". He said the real underlying cause of parents' anxieties over the world is not love, as is so often supposed, "but mama and papa's power over their own resources for children to spend, protecting shell or safe horn. They grow up, as Mama and Papa, in set ways and mode of living and intended they should, as helpless as the day they were born.

What Happens

Never having had to face real defeat, frustration, or humiliation, never having been allowed to run on his own initiative or make his own decisions in all his childhood when the black day comes at last with no mama or papa to produce a reassuring artificial mom, the child, though in his twenties by now, goes into a panic and quits via suicide.

Such is this doctor's theory. Maybe he is not always right. Maybe he runs young people do far too much for love and love alone, more to be feared than admired, perhaps. I still think you don't always have to have an already-developed quitter to commit a final suicide. Love can be very hard.

However, many young people undoubtedly would have the courage to go on if their parents had always had confidence in them, for build up a better defense; if they had been made to learn early to fight their own battles in childhood instead of always "standing" the battles to combat childish.

How hard it is to train our children to be confident, independent, non needing our help!

The better job we can do of this kind, the sooner we lose them," you say. Well, it's the only way we can. Love never lasts if love never lasts if love never lasting them completely, I think.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to have a shower for a bride-elect in my apartment. Because of the size of the apartment I do not know what kind of shower I can give the most successful. Will you please help me?

1—Can this shower be in the form of an open house? It will be a crystal shower.

2.—What should I serve? I want to serve it in the afternoon.

3—Do I entertain the guests? There will be about twenty-four guests.

G.

Since your apartment is small, and since your party is to be in the afternoon, your problem of the type of party is answered by having your shower a tea-party. This will allow you to accommodate more guests, and the tea-menu is easy to plan and to serve. Also many of the tea-menu details can be made ready beforehand.

1.—I am not sure what you mean by this question If you mean by "open house" to combine a shower for your friend with an open house for the housewarming of your apartment, this, in my judgment, divides the honors too much. Make your shower the one special event in the bride-elect. If by open house you mean inviting people for hours for your party—say four to seven o'clock—I think that this would not be a good time for the opening of the presents is the important part of a shower, and for this, all the guests must be present at the same time.

2.—Serve the customary tea-menu—ice, with perhaps coffee as an alternate, slim sandwiches, made of different kinds of breads and with various kinds of fillings; small cakes or layer cakes cut in small bars; and such accessories as salted nuts, mints, crystallized slices of orange or grapefruit, and bonbons.

3.—For a shower there needn't be any planned entertainment, except the gala details of the shower itself, the receiving of the guests, lots of conversation, the opening of the gifts, the serving of refreshments.

Bridegroom's Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Is it necessary for a groom to wear a Tuxedo with the bride he wears a veil, or is it all right for him to just wear a dark suit?

2—Does the length of the veil have anything to do with it?

3—Is a corsage worn only with a street dress or can you wear a corsage with any kind of dress?

J.

1—When a bride-to-be plans to wear a white bridal dress and bridal veil, she proclaims that her wedding is to be a formal one. If she is to wear this formal attire, naturally all details of the wedding must be planned to be consistent with this formality. And this means that the groom, best man, and ushers, as well as the bride's father, must be dressed with an appropriate formality; for the day wedding, cutaway coat, dark striped trousers, and appropriate formal accessories; for the evening wedding, tail-coat and appropriate formal accessories (or, in a semi-formal community, Tuxedo suit). We all must admit that it looks strange to see the bride dressed in her formal bridal finery . . . and the groom in business suit.

No, any length of bridal veil means formality.

3.—A corsage can be correctly worn with any kind of dress, in day-time or evening.

Thyroid's Effect On Our Bodies

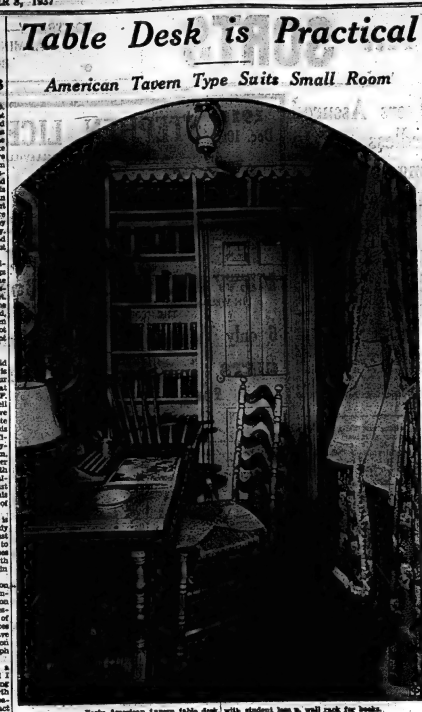
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

YESTERDAY I pointed out that in the operation of the manifold functions of the different systems of the body, there has to be some governing power, something to make the wheels go round. The digestive system converts food into a form suitable for use as energy and tissue; the heart pumps this around in the blood; the different cells take it up; the kidneys and skin throw off the waste products. But all of these different functions are beautifully correlated so that they do not get in each others way. They are not beforehand or behind time, and everything works out smoothly.

To a very large extent the business of making all these things work out as well is done by the thyroid gland. We pointed out yesterday its effect upon weight. When its secretion is excessive, the weight loss of the body is rapid, and increased intake of food, even to an excessive extent, does not result in replacement of the weight loss.

Maintains Body Temperature

Another thing that the thyroid undoubtedly helps to maintain is bodily temperature. All of our functions are carried on best at the exact level of 98.4 degrees F. Our functions do not operate well when we are chilled or when we have fever, and by many intricate processes the body maintains this exact temperature for its own efficiency. People with excessive thyroid secretion are always warm, require less heat clothing and fewer clothes than others, and those with diminished thyroid secretion are always cold. So the thyroid must have something to do with this very important general function of the body.



Its control over the muscles is notable. A large part of our body is muscle, and these muscles must maintain a certain tone in order to function vigorously. In some cases of excessive thyroid secretion, which gotten, a marked atrophy occurs in all the muscles of the body.

The control of calcium nutrition and iron nutrition apparently is influenced partially by the secretion of the thyroid, and since the presences of a proper concentration of calcium in the blood influences muscular action, this may have something to do with the effect on muscles noted in the paragraph above.

The thyroid secretion also has a definite influence on growth, and I have seen a number of interesting cases in which every other growth hormone was eliminated, by accident or design, leaving only thyroid extract alone, with marked increase in height in children who have been stationary for some time.

Table Desk is Practical

American Tavern Type Suits Small Room

Early American tavern table desk, with student lamp p, wall rack for books.

Courtesy Good Housekeeping

EVERY MEMBER of the family should have a desk for his or her own, if possible. There is a great deal of satisfaction to be gotten out of a desk—first, in having a pleasant spot for study or second, in having a place where one's papers and own affairs can be kept.

A desk should only be placed near a window where the light is good. In a small room a table type of desk is often a good choice, since the opening below gives an effect of spaciousness.

In the tiny study shown, a reproduction of an early American tavern table is used, with a wall rack above it to hold books.

A desk always is a very acceptable Christmas gift, and so are its accessories—a desk lamp, inkwell, portfolio, ash tray, and perhaps a vase, chair and typewriter, too.

Educating The Family At Meals

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department of Psychology and Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

THERE IS NO better opportunity for good education than that afforded at the meal where the family eat leisurely and parents talk concerning things of interest to the growing child, and where the child chaves freely in this conversation.

Let me state a few facts which might be presented to the family group at dinner:

Abe Lincoln did not die poor. He left an estate valued at $110,280. George Washington left over half a million—$530,000. Theodore Roosevelt was almost a millionaire. He left $611,000.

The presidents of the United States have lived, on the average, 66 years.

An airship can fly more than 400 miles an hour. The speed record was made Oct. 13, 1935, by Francesco Agello, of Italy—396 miles an hour. Some fast trains can now run 120 miles an hour.

There are about twice as many widows as widowers in the United States; more bachelors than spinsters.

Twenty per cent of all crime in this country is committed by youth not old enough to vote.

Out of every thousand persons over ten years of age, in our nation, 52 cannot read and write in any language. They are illiterate.

Nearly one-tenth of all the people of the United States are under five years of age. About one-third are under eighteen. About one-sixth are over fifty.

When the boys and girls now going to school are fifty years of age, there will be many more people fifty years of age and many fewer under eighteen than there are today. But the number of people over 65 years of age will be about the same.

Seeing Stars

The naked eye can see about 6,000 stars. With a field glass one can see about 80,000. With a good telescope, hundreds of thousands.

There are about a million public school teachers—in the United States. About five times as many women teachers as men teachers.

About 4,000,000 school children that are enrolled at school are absent every day. Nearly 6,000,000 children between five and seven teen don't go to school at all.

In 1924 about 26 times as many immigrants came to the United States as the number who came in 1934. In 1924, 706,896 came. In 1934, 30,870 came.

In all the world there are about 2,250,000,000 people.

An American cow, in 1936, produced 4,186 pounds of milk a year. In 1936, it was only 3,704 pounds per cow. The cow is getting poor.

Abe Lincoln was Dr. Lincoln; so was George Washington Dr. Washington. Harvard university gave an LL.D. to George Washington in 1776. Yale in 1781. Abe Lincoln was honored with an LL.D. by Columbia university in 1861, and by Princeton in 1864.

OLD DOLLS LATEST COLLECTORS' VOGUE

Many Fans Seek the Ancient Toys in Attics

Old dolls from a collection at Mentor, O.

BY LILIAN CAMPBELL

COLLECTORS of antiques—furniture, china, silver, pewter, etc., are many and enthusiastic, but one of the hardest bitten of antique bugs is the collector of old dolls. There are in the United States thousands of them who will travel hundreds of miles and pay hundreds of dollars for one rare old doll.

There is a sharp jealousy among these adult collectors of former playthings of children, too, and any knowledge of the whereabouts of a possible antique doll in the attic of a friend is guarded furtively lest rival collectors learn of it.

Doll fanciers have even formed clubs and held conventions. The Washington, D.C., New York City, and Boston clubs are the oldest and most prominent. Members hold meetings which usually comprise exhibition of some famous doll and discussion of its fine points.

A try-product of this rage which has grown up during the past dozen years is the business of restoring and re-dressing antique dolls. Mrs. E. H. Perry of Cleveland, a member of the Cleveland Society of Collectors, is one of the nation's most known doll restorers. Persons from many states send their choice "finds" for her to make the doll look as it did in its original state. Sometimes she has only a head, the rest of the doll having been broken or decayed, and she reconstructs the body in the period indicated by the head. For clothing she uses mostly modern materials of old design, and occasionally actually old brocades. Materials are usually velvets, crepes, taffetas, cottons, and challis.

Oldest Dolls Wooden

The oldest dolls in this country are wooden, with papier-mache head, wooden hands and feet, some covered with cloth and some with kid. Mrs. Perry has one of these which is especially old, 160 years, and worth $150.

China dolls came originally mainly from Germany, where the largest china doll factory was opened in 1800 in Nuremberg. If they are dressed these dolls cost $50 and up.

Another type of old doll are those with wax heads, made mostly in England. They have wooden hands and feet, with a head of papier-mache, wax-covered. They bring $10 and up undressed. There are also the Bisque and Parian dolls which cost $35 and up.

The fascinating French fashion dolls found in this country are about 90 years old. They have hair of goat's wool, glass eyes, and elaborate gowns. They are lady dolls and were used in France as favors and illustrations of how gowns and hats should be worn.

The first show of the Cleveland Society of Collectors was held recently in that city.

Beef Patties Cooked, Served With Bananas

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Beef Patties With Bananas
Parsley Potatoes
Canned Tomato Salad
Cocoa Bread Pudding Tea

Today's Recipes

BEEF PATTIES WITH BANANAS—Two pounds ground beef, six rashers bacon, one small onion, grated; one egg, four bananas, one lemon, salt and pepper. Season ground beef with salt, pepper and grated onion. Moisten with slightly beaten egg and shape into cakes of the desired size. Wrap with bacon slices and fasten with skewers or toothpicks. Place in a shallow pot skillet and let brown on both sides, then cook at a lowered temperature, until almost done. Add the bananas with a green tip. They are then in the cooking stage. Peel and cut the bananas lengthwise, sprinkle with lemon juice and lay in a pan with the partially cooked meat. Place in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) and bake until the bananas are tender and the meat is done.

COCOA BREAD PUDDING—One-third cup cocoa, two cups finely diced bread or sifted soft crumbs, one and one-half cups (one can) sweetened condensed milk, three cups hot water, two eggs, one tablespoon melted butter, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon vanilla. Mix cocoa with finely diced bread or sifted soft bread crumbs. Blend sweetened condensed milk and hot water; pour over bread and let stand until cool. Stir in eggs slightly beaten, melted butter, salt and vanilla. Pour into baking dish, set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 45 minutes. Serve with plain or whipped cream. Serves eight.

Poems That Live

WILD WISHES

I wish, because the sweetness of your passing
Makes all the earth a garden
where you tread,
That I might be the meanest of your roses,
To pave your path with petals
passion-red!

I wish, because the softness of your kisses
Stirs the white jasmine at your throat to flame,
That I might be the fragrance of a flower,
To stir the night breese with your dearest name!

I wish, because thy glory of your dreaming
Strews with its fields of heaven
with throbbing stars,
That I might shine the portals of your slumber,
And soar with you beyond night's golden bars!

I wish to be the day you die. Beloved,
Though all its close my foolish heart must break!
But most of all, I wish, my dearest
darling,
To be the Blessed Morning when you wake!

Girl Can't Confide In Her Mother

By VIRGINIA LEE

I HAVE received a letter from a young girl who signed herself LONESOME. It did not begin like the usual, "have read a nice young man's note. It stated that I might think it was odd for a girl her age to call herself lonesome. She has a mother whom she loves dearly, but to whom she can tell nothing about herself.

To me that is one of life's great tragedies, and it is a tragedy that is all too common. Why are not mothers and daughters better friends? Of course millions are, and yet I have known so many cases where they were miles apart, and when daughter needed advice or sympathy she turned to some outsider.

I don't know whom to feel most sorry for—daughter or mother. Daughter needs a mother's sympathetic and wise guidance. And as mother grows older how very much she needs the gay and genial, and often wise comradeship of the younger woman! She misses so much when she is not the type of woman who wins it.

Mothers too often are shocked at their children's outspoken views. But most young people who think all at all are radical. They feel that the debtors have made a pretty sad mess of things and that the social, religious and moral standards need at least reforming. Hence, mothers are often shocked. Or if that is asking too much, don't let it be known that you are shocked. Be up-to-date, know what is going on in the world. Realize that these young people learn by experience, just as you have been doing. You, too, passed through that stage of wanting to shock your elders. It passed and maybe you have grown too far in the other direction. You are hide-bound and your mind refuses to take on new ideas. That is sad, and a felt is needed to wake you up.

Try to understand your young folk and sympathize with, understand and love them, and you'll get so very much out of the association with them. You'll never be that saddest of all people—the neglected mother. Neglected because she could not grow with the world and with her children, and so lost them. Only "duty" brings them to her side.

Don't be lonesome, dear, try to get closer to your mother. Try to give her your confidence and maybe she will encourage you so that as time goes on you can do!! her big ones and you will not be lonesome any more.

WE SUGGEST— FOR BABY

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

Courtesy The Halle Bros. Co.
Wooden toys for wee tots.

THE TINY CHILD to whom we refer as the "tot" or "rumabout" likes blocks—large blocks, small blocks, round blocks, square blocks—all kinds of blocks with which to build. Little children play with these toys. Some of them are unpainted and some are painted in bright, primary colors with vegetable dyes that will not harm the child if he grows absent-minded and licks them.

The toys sometimes come in wooden wagons, like the one at the right of the picture. They must be put in in just the right order to fit—a simple and fascinating puzzle for the child. Sometimes a wooden box is used instead of the wagon, and sometimes they come in little wooden trains which the child loves to push about.

The youngster learns to use his imagination and inventiveness in building with the large graduated blocks you see piled up and hand skill with the wooden rings.

There are many different types of toys of this kind in any toy shop or toy department of a large store. They are safe for the baby to play with and make excellent choices for Christmas gifts for the baby from one year to five or six.

Irked by Referees' Decisions Boston Fans Wreck Arena As Red Wings Beat Bruins

Shove Saving Major Penalty When Winning Goal Scored

CANADIENS WIN

Defeat Maroons 5-1 And Draw up to Tie With Toronto Leafs

(By The Canadian Press)

Most hockey fans think they're getting their money's worth when they hoot a referee. Some toss pennies on the ice and think they're getting their money's worth. But in Boston the fans are different. They have to wreck the joint before they feel they are satisfied.

They almost did that last night when Detroit Red Wings defeated their Bruins 3-2 for their third victory in 11 games. Angered by decisions of officials Mickey Ion and Johnny Mitchell, fans in the top gallery of the Boston Garden ripped the seats off their chairs and hurled the slats on the ice.

Ion and Mitchell ducked wood for the last ten minutes of the game and the barrage was so thick at one point that a man had to be held up while the ice was cleared of furniture.

In all there were 13,000 angry fans in the garden, 5,000 more than the usual season crowd, that saw Canadiens defeat Maroons 5-1 in Montreal and Chicago Black Hawks whip Toronto Maple Leafs for the Canadian Division leadership.

The outbreak in Boston overshadowed the comeback of Ned Wings. World champions who have been kicked around like Rookies this season but looked like Stanley Cup holders last night.

Manager Jack Adams reunited Larry Aurie, Marty Barry and Herb Lewis as a line and they produced two goals during scoring both of them in the first period. Bill Cowley had scored after the first wing marker and he came back in the second to tie the game.

While Eddie Shore was serving a major penalty in the third period World Champions who have been kicked around like Rookies this season but looked like Stanley Cup holders last night.

Manager Jack Adams reunited Larry Aurie, Marty Barry and Herb Lewis as a line and they produced two goals during scoring both of them in the first period. Bill Cowley had scored after the first wing marker and he came back in the second to tie the game.

While Eddie Shore was serving a major penalty in the third period for high sticking Doug Young, Hec Kilrea, on as a fourth forward, combined with Aurie and Barry for the winning tally. The defeat was the first Bruins have suffered at home this season and the fact it came while Shore was off second game made the nation howl.

The big crowd at Montreal also saw a rousing battle with the players and high sticking the order strong throughout the game. All but one of the six goals were scored, while penalties were being served.

Big Babe Siebert, Gus Mancuso and Paul Haynes fired in trio of Canadien goals in the first period and George Mantha and Walter Buswell got the rest in the third. Maroons dominated the play in the second, when Lorne Oracle scored their only goal.

The new penalty shot was trotted out for inspection for the first time this season when Babe Siebert tripped Haynes in the first period. Johnny Gagnon shot from the line that replaces the goal and Siebert had no more success than most players do with free shots. He missed the net entirely.

"BABY" YACK WINS DECISION

Mog Mason, However, Made Favorable Impres'

Toronto, Dec. 8—(CP)—Like the famous sponsor, Tommy Farr, the Welsh Bantamweight, Mog Mason, offered plenty of proof today either types of British fighters than the horizontal cousin to this continent.

Mason lost a 10-round decision in his Canadian debut last night to Norman (Baby) Yack, Canadian Bantam Champion, but gave the fans lots of action with a battering attack in the last two rounds that knocked Yack all over he ring.

The Toronto boy, however, had piled up too large a point-lead in early rounds. He knocked Mason down in the first, sixth and eighth rounds. Mason refused to take a count on any of the knockdowns. Yack weighed 118 and Mason 118 1-4.

WEMBLEY LIONS IN TOP POSITION

Garnered 20 Points in Cup Play And Had Four in First Ten

London, Dec. 8 (CP)—Already a couple of laps ahead of schedules in hockey's native heath, the English brand as presented by Canadian imports has reached mid-season form.

Tight refereeing has eliminated rough play and a hard-fought 45-game preliminary London Cup tournament removed jagged play.

Sitting on top of the heap as the seven clubs entered the National League campaign were the Wembley Lions, last season's champions. They garnered 20 points in London Cup play compared with 18 points for the second place club, Harringay Racers, former London Cup holders. Lions had four men in the first ten scorers.

From the very start of the tourney fleet Albert Lemay of Winnipeg remained at the head of the list. He had the last game was played he had a total of 18 points, 9 goals and 9 assists.

Tied in third place were his two mates, Captain Ed Murphy of Ottawa and Alex Archer of Winnipeg. The former had seven goals and eight assists and Archer six goals and seven assists.

Total points for the meet: Y. M. C. A., 74; Albert College, 51.

The meet was highly successful and will be repeated at intervals throughout the winter months. Efforts by the Y.M.C.A. secretary, in the matter of inter-club swim meets are also being planned with Kingston, Trenton and Picton and possibly other clubs being invited to compete in the annual Albert College and Y.M.C.A. swim teams. The spacious Albert College pool affords an ideal setting for such events.

DR. ALEKHINE CHESS CHAMPION

Recaptures Title From Dr. Max Euwe And Meets Cuban

The Hague, Dec. 8 (CP) — Dr. Alekhine, Russian chess master living in France, today held the world's chess championship after a lapse of two years.

The former soldier and prisoner of war, born Alexander Alexandrovitch von Aljechin, defeated Dr. Max Euwe, Dutch schoolmaster, in the 35th game of their 30-game match for the title that Dr. Euwe took from Dr. Alekhine in 1935.

Victory last night placed the Russian, now a naturalized French citizen, in a position where his opponent cannot possibly catch him in the remaining five games.

Dr. Alekhine has won ten games to four Dr. Euwe's, scoring 14½ to a point score of 15½ to 9½ out of a possible 30.

Possibility was expressed Dr. Alekhine would soon meet Capt. Jose Raoul Capablanca, Cuban expert who surrendered his title to the Russian-French master at Groningen in 1927 at Buenos Aires.

Redmen and Flyers Assured Grouping Regardless as to Decision of Kingston Clubs

Kingston-Queen's Threat to Withdraw to be Ignored by O. H. A.

5 TEAMS ASSURED

Belleville And Air Force Could Drop Out of Van Horne Series

By K. J. C.

What is back of yesterday's threat of withdrawal from hockey clubs withdrawing from the Ontario Hockey Association?

Who does it affect most, surely not the remaining clubs?

Just how far do the Kingston interests think they will get trying to oppose the wishes of the O.H.A.?

And lastly, who cares?

Information emanating from Kingston indicates the most emphatic and to the effect that, if the four Kingston clubs, Queen's University, Kingston City, R.M.C. and Kingston Garrison, were not declassified and regrouped, they would withdraw from the O.H.A. and form the present groupings and team classifications, as ruled by the O.H.A. In the first instance Queen's and the Garrison were classed as senior "B" clubs along with Trenton and the R.C.A.F., while the R.M.C. and Kingston City were included in the intermediate grouping with Belleville and Gananoque.

There are two things quite mystifying to the writer, ie., where do the objections from Queen's, City club and the Royal Military College arise into the picture? They have already received an intermediate "A" rating, and according to the Limestone interests have to gain by withdrawing from the O.H.A., which last week's issue showed, that's an assured fact.

R.M.C. Not Party?

Personally we do not believe the Royal Military College hockey men have any say in the matter and that or oppose the original groupings of the O.H.A. In any manner. It also is known that the Queen's University has not definitely withdrawn from the O.H.A., but has followed the Garrison and Kingston City's will.

If the Kingston interests take such an attitude simply for avariciously obtaining two more gate attractions for others, what would the officials of the Kingston Hockey Club and social series think if the Belleville Bulls, Trenton RCAF, Peterboro and Oshawa Generals suddenly abandoned that league for similar reasons? If such a move did come to pass it would mean the ruination of the Van Horne series, and exactly what the Kingston interests seem to be threatening in their demands is the full grant of two new groupings and the reclassification of all of their four clubs in that city.

The Ontario Intelligencer learned this week that it believed it all an impossible source, that the O.H.A. will not tolerate such petty revolutionary tactics and will not heed to any further objections or opposition from the Kingston clubs. They can either "play ball" or GET OUT is the attitude it understands.

Assuming the four Kingston clubs staunchly adhere to their demands, yesterday, the writer has reasons to believe the R.M.C. interests were approached on the subject, it still leaves four clubs in the Kingston district, R.C.A.F., Belleville and Gananoque. A splendid four-teamed group of live interest and rivalry would be formed and Gananoque and two senior "B" clubs, the Flyers and Belleville, would be assured, while it is almost certain that Queen's and the R.M.C. would be right in line with such a proposal, leaving the Kingston City and Garrison as the only members of the group.

Proposition Made.

F/O. Carling-Kelly, convener for Group No. 2 of the O.H.A., today informed The Ontario Intelligencer that the Flyers were ready to go ahead with the most reasonable proposal. "I have suggested to Mr. Hewitt of the O.H.A., Peterboro, the R.C.A.F., Belleville, Queen's and Gananoque, if they desire to come in, be included in one group, playing intermediate "A" hockey," stated Mr. Carling-Kelly.

When approached upon the subject Eddie Powers, manager of the Belleville Redmen, stated he was willing to enter his team into any interlocking schedule that might be arranged. "I will play intermediate "A" hockey with any team in the east except Peterboro and the Air Force. We are somewhat stronger than Gananoque or ourselves, but I'm willing to help them form a group, providing that section retains a lower classification than the two others," agreed Mr. Powers.

All that remains is to have Gananoque agree and the Kingston interests can play in the "County League" where they belong.

The following data taken from the Kingston press today indicates the attitude being taken by these interests and speaks for itself. It reads as follows:

"The Kingston clubs object to the travelling required with such a scattered grouping and want to play in a local group with local teams.

"R.M.C., Queen's and Kingston Garrison will probably decide about dropping out of the league, which will force a revision of the groupings."

BARTON SCORES IN HIS OWN GOAL

Ramblers, However, Manage to Defeat Indians

6-2

Springfield Indians can't say they are awfully keen about the way Clint Barton of Philadelphia Ramblers plays hockey. The amazing Philly Rambler demanded too many Christmas gifts.

Barton played Santa in the second period of the clash last night between Ramblers and Indians, the only scheduled International-American Hockey League game. To the surprise of 4,000 Springfield fans he managed to stop the puck into his own net. But before the period was over Barton atoned by scoring two goals for the Indians' opponents.

Barton and Riddle Wares, who also scored two goals, accounted for a 6-4 triumph. The victory over Indians, who have beaten them twice in previous meetings, left the Ramblers with 16 points and gave them undisputed possession of Providence Reds, second place team in the league's eastern section.

AMERICAN LEAGUERS KEEP LIVELY PELLET

Chicago, Dec. 8 (AP)—American Leaguers kept on their primrose path of happy customers and home runs for 1938 while their National League cousins go back to the old attic game of peanuts, play, shorter ball and photo finish games.

A big sore at each other's willingness in the matter, the American Leaguers voted yesterday to retain the old lively ball whereas the National League, unbiased by such home run blisters as Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig and Jimmy Foxx, decided to go back to the deader home ball. From after four years of agreement on the ball, the two leagues find they have agreed to disagree.

"If you don't play on my side of the fence I'll pitch up my marbles and leave," chafed Hank about the childish attitude that is being taken by the various Kingston men's executives of hockey in their decision to defy the O.H.A. and endeavour to force the Association's hand into bowing to the demands of the Limestone City interests. No doubt the Kingston clubs would be perfectly satisfied to play around themselves and to heck with the rest of the world. If outside clubs took the attitude that Kingston clubs in the Home Memorial series as the Kingston Garrison and Kingston clubs in the O.H.A. groupings, well, there just would not be any Van Horne series, or Senior "B" or Kingston City club which attract the patronage.

Personally we believe yesterday's threat to withdraw from the O.H.A. made by the four Kingston clubs, namely, the R.M.C., Garrison and the Frontenacs, is nothing short of a big bluff. We have the Garrison and R. M. C. are not only gentlemen, but anxious to play hockey in the O.H.A. while the main trouble seems to hinge around Charlie Hicks and his Frontenac proteges. As for the Kingston City team—well there isn't much to say. Nevertheless we now that the Napanee players have been awarded to Belleville and Gananoque is in the O.H.A. We would have given our last dollar to see them in action in the ultra-long face on Wally Sinner, Jim Sutherland and Charlie Hewitt after they learned of the decisions handed down by the Kingston-Belleville and R.C.A.F. letter Monday night's meeting. It would be worth the price to have a picture we artist could have published.

When in conversation with F/O. Carling-Kelly, convener for group No. 2 last evening, he said he been in communication with Billie Hewitt of the O.H.A. "I understand Kingston City and the Garrison are dropping out, so I proposed having Peterboro, Belleville, Quebec, the R.C.A.F. and Gananoque, if the latter desires to come in, included in a new intermediate "A" group. A five teamed group would prove a real drawing attraction for all clubs concerned. I believe," stated Mr. Carling-Kelly, in the meantime a group meeting to draft a schedule has been postponed. Manager Bobby Thomas says he is perfectly satisfied to abide by the ruling handed down by the sub-committee Monday night, and who could blame him.

We feel the pitiful amount of interest appearing in the senior "B" set-up was registered for the other reason than to avoid the trips to Peterboro. Surely a few extra hours in a bus wouldn't disrupt the "standard" set too much, that is knowing some of the Garrison's hockey players of old, as we do.

To be truthful the Kingston City club has not a team to put on the ice. Their present club in the Van Horne series includes at least two Napanee players now known as Bun Gordon and Dixon. They were both with "Can" last season.

Perhaps the recent shavings of the Kingston City Van Horne series had much to do with the present situation, which at best two groups find themselves. If the O.H.A. permits one or two clubs to circle in them, well it would eventually prove disastrous to the Association as a whole.

We wonder how the Kingston hockey interests would feel if the Belleville Redmen and the R. C. A. F. "Flyers" formed the Van Horne series and told the Jack Harty Arena management to "go fly a kite"? Aside from Perth, the Flyers are the only team in the series in the Kingston province group, so we would think the Limestone City magnates would give serious consideration before they attempted to stake with isolation insofar as the Kingston clubs are concerned in the O. H. A. Senior "B" series. Not believe R.M.C. is a party to the Kingston threat, while Queen's University hockey officials were always considered to be something of a unit either, according to the O.H.A. authorities, who know. As a finish we believe the O.H.A. will not change the groupings, or rather the club classifications. We received that information from what we believe to be an unimpeachable source. If the Association started to reconstruct the two local O.H.A. groups, they'd have every group in the province clamouring for a reclassification.

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Getting back to that hockey situation, there is another angle. If the four Kingston clubs could have been included in one compact group, whereby others could go shuffle for possibly more, no doubt they would have been perfectly satisfied. In other world if the Kingston interests were afforded a group with no travelling expenses incurred it would have been perfectly dandy.

Barton and Riddle Wares, who also scored two goals, accounted for a 6-4 triumph. The victory over Indians, who have beaten them twice in previous meetings, left the Ramblers with 16 points and gave them undisputed possession of Providence Reds, second place team in the league's eastern section.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to go

The liver should furnish two pints of bile juice daily. If bile is not flowing freely, your food may just decay in the stomach. It just ferments and sours, instead of digesting. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk, and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, gentle, vegetable laxative pills known as Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Use only as directed. Get a 25c package today. Refuse substitutes.

BE A GOOD LISTENER—

"We all enjoy talking when we have an interested listener and few human beings are proof against the implied flattery of rapt attention.'

"Often even the most violent critic, the most confirmed kicker, will see the light of reason when deeply allowed to talk without interruption. It gets the poison out of his system, as it were."

"If you wanted people to shun you, to make fun of you, even to despise you, one of the very best ways to do it would be never to listen to anyone for long—to talk incessantly about yourself instead.

"We all know people like that—and avoid them like the measles."

"So, if you want to be regarded as good company and a pleasant fellow, learn how to listen. 'To be interesting, be interested.'

"Ask questions that the other man can answer and will want to answer. Give him a chance to talk about himself."

"Remember, we are all more interested in ourselves and our own needs and problems than in anything else under the sun. If I have a toothache, it means more to me than war in China or revolution in Spain."

"Think of that the next time you take part in a conversation."

HAVE YOU SMOKED A TURRET LATELY?

YOU will find that most smokers like to talk about their favourite cigarette. Turret smokers, for instance, enjoy discussing their preference for Turrets . . . the milder, cooler smoke they give, and the satisfying taste of the unique and original Turret blend. That is why you'll please your friends at Christmas if you give them Turrets in the handsome gift wrappers of 50 and 100 cigarettes.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—From a slow and lazy session, the Toronto stock market tightened up on improved buying volume in the afternoon session and the close was at the day's highest prices. All issues registered gains, some of the medium-priced golds and the base metals figured prominently in the trade at rising prices.

A thin to strong tone ruled from the opening with buying substantial in the base metals, secondary golds and western oils. Industrials lagged but the list was showing at least as many gains as losses in early afternoon.

Second Part was again the feature of the trade in the base metals on an advance to 2.90 and the leaders, Nickel, Noranda and Hudson Bay ruled higher. Eldorado was taken in volume and the price pushed above the 2.40 mark.

Macassa, Sylvanite, McIntyre, McLeod-Cockshutt and Sralorne were strong spots in the golds. Dunlop, papers and miscellaneous issues looked firm in low action and other industrials were mainly unchanged.

Foothills, Calgary - Edmonton, Unlisted and Steep Rock firm in strong issues in the junior oil group.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Dec. 6.—(CP)—Prices advanced sharply at the opening session in today's stock market as rails shared and a rally in which virtually all divisions joined.

Mixed gains marked the opening. Market advanced as buying appeared at increasing volume. Trading was about 1,500,000 shares.

Higher and actively traded were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, J. I. Case, Westinghouse Electric, Texas Corp., Allied Chemical, Johns Manville, and Eastman Kodak.

CONVICTED MAN UNABLE TO PAY FINE

Fred Woodcock, Kaladar, was committed to the reformatory jail for a period of three months in default of the payment of a fine levied in County Police Court this morning following the accused man's conviction by Magistrate Jones on a charge of the R.C.M.P. of being in possession of a still suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor. Woodcock was arrested and arraigned before Magistrate Jones by Const. Lloyd of the R.C.M.P., following his arrest recently and having found in possession of the illicit still. A fine of $100.00 and costs was imposed as provided under the Excise Act. Woodcock was unable to meet the assessment and was sentenced to serve three months in jail in default.

WINTER STORMS

damage throughout the southern United States beat a retreat today but indications were it would be brief.

Weather Bureau observers said another mass of cold air was moving toward Texas and the southwest, and that a shift to the east would cause another drop in southern temperatures by Friday.

Already five deaths from exposure have been reported, from Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Louisiana.

Bitterly night sub-freezing temperatures again enveloped a large part of the rich fruit and vegetable district of Florida, causing damage which some sources described as heavy.

Canada's Economic Achievements, Prospects Reviewed by Bankers

BANK OF MONTREAL ANNUAL MEETING

Sir Charles Gordon, President, Confident Recovery Will Continue if Canada Not Unduly Affected by International Disturbances

Jackson Dodds, in General Managers' Report, Discusses Commercial Loans, Business Trends, Public Financing and "Fountain Pen Money"

An impressive record of strength and of expanding business in keeping with the marked improvement of trade and commerce throughout the Dominion during the past year was presented at the 126th annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal.

In viewing business conditions over the wide territory served by the bank operates, the president, Sir Charles Gordon, said: "It will be seen that much improved and were a happy contrast with the conditions of but two years ago. The one really serious handicap was in those portions of the Province of Ontario where drought caused total or partial loss of the crop.

Canada, he said, had been demonstrating in the past year a remarkable resilience in powers of recuperativity.

As instances of the latter he referred to the remarkable growth of gold production and of the output of industrial metals, remarking that with the exception of iron Canada now ran the world's leading exporter of base metals. He spoke also of the rapid development of lumber, asbestos and gypsum, of newsprint and of bleached sulphite pulp, stating it was now entering industrial enterprises which enabled Canada, with an increasing capacity for recuperation.

Canada's Manufacturing Worth

Three Billions.

He further pointed out that whereas gross value of products recently regarded as a country depended almost entirely on agriculture, today agriculture provided 25 per cent. of the exports and other forms of industry the Canada manufacturing now employs 600,000 people in 20,000 establishments with a capital value of the annual value of its manufactured products amounts to more than $3,000,000,000.

Canada's foreign trade, he said, had grown by large bounds and for the calendar year would attain the huge total of over $1,600,000,000, of which some $730,000,000 would represent a favourable balance.

Biggest Trade With U.S.

He pointed out that the future of this total trade was with Great Britain and the United States, adding that due to the fact that Canada bought more largely from the United States than from Britain, the trade with the United States for the 11 months ended September 30 last was around $365,000,000 greater than the trade with Britain. It is at the same time to be noted with satisfaction that neither the government nor the business world neglected opportunities to further trade with other countries. In the past two years formal trade agreements have been concluded with ten such countries, and today Canada was one of the few countries in the world which was not subject to quotas, no exchange restrictions, and no embargoes other than those associated with the traffic in arms.

Of the remedy for world-wide evil and international strife—for he said, "lies in international economic co-operation"—Canada, he said, can be doing its full share along that line."

Henry Drake on National Revenue

He spoke of continuing loans on public works, remarking that of executive taxation as two factors retarding the business revival and the national revenue into unproductive channels. He found some hope in the greater confidence in the standing of the railway problem as emerging from the Duncan Commercial measures and regarding taxation said the position was beginning to greatly improved that Treasury officials now hoped for a balanced budget at the end of the fiscal year in March next.

"There is hope," he remarked, "that in due time the improvement will be reflected in the revenue from taxation. It certainly will be reflected in the strengthening of the public credit standing of the country."

In concluding his remarks, Sir Charles, while not attempting a forecast on the business situation, nevertheless expressed his confidence in Canada's "remarkable capacity for recuperation" which, he said, "is reflected by international disturbances. Given the full, unrestricted operation of the better times which Canadians had experienced during the past year."

Strong Financial Statement.

The balance sheet which was presented by Jackson Dodds on behalf of the general manager, Hector G. W. Spinney, as well as himself, showed that for the year ending October 31 the bank had deposits of $34,553,200 to a total of $229,126,000; deposits by the public of $192,573,000 to a total of $631,000,000; current loans and discounts in Canada of $107,000,000 to $182,500,000, and net profits by $226,-527 to a total of $3,458,238; while the bank's capital and reserves were also no less than 70.58% of liabilities to the public.

Commercial Loans Show Increase.

One of the most important features of the financial statement was the increase of more than $25,000,000 shown in current loans. Mr. Dodds stated that for the year ended September 30, the current loans of all the banks had increased by $75,500,-000. While the increase was welcome, he said it was not commensurate with the growth in the volume of business and the improvement in commodity prices.

Pointing out that the ratio of the Bank's investments to deposits was 29 per cent., Mr. Dodds said: "This is much higher than we would like to see it, but we have to have a larger proportion of our funds call loans for productive and business purposes. But it is beyond the power of a commercial bank to increase at will the total of safe loans; the initiative lies with the borrowers. A commercial bank cannot afford to have idle money on its hands beyond the amount required to meet ordinary withdrawals and for necessary purposes.

Fountain Pen Loans Stimulate Not Temporary.

In considering the various factors which had contributed to the reduced demand for banking accommodation, Mr. Dodds said that it must be recognized that many of these factors are of a permanent character.

"On the other hand," he pointed out, "there are factors which, under this research, new industries are always coming into being, resulting in increased demand for capital accounts.

"During the past 130 years the Bank of Montreal has kept abreast of the changing times and has been a leading factor in its aiding basic productive pursuits, old and new industries in addition to maintaining its essential part of providing banking accommodation for the ordinary business—in addition to maintaining capital employed, commercial loans provided by other commercial facilities and services, at a cost to clients which will compare favourably with their smallest item in operating expenses.

Bank's Assets 79.58% Liquid.

The assets of the bank, standing at $229,126,000, were the highest since 1929. Of this amount $209,-000,000 represented quickly available resources, or 79.58% of liabilities to the public, amounting to $263,000,000.

The large portion of liquid assets was made up of investments which, not exceeding market value, amount to $437,700,000. Included in this total were Dominion and provincial government securities, $344,900,000, which, in connection with $3,181,501 in 1936—an increase of $236,827.

Commenting on this item, Mr. Dodds pointed out that Dominion of Canada bonds could be sold without taking into consideration taxes paid to municipalities, governments and Canada, of the bank's net profits, or over 23 per cent. of such profits.

Deposits Higher.

Among other items, the statement presented by the general manager showed that deposits by the public had increased by $36,000,000 to $631,000,000. Commenting on this item, Mr. Dodds said: "This figure that is written and sold nowadays as the total of deposits, or as deposits', 'fountain pen money' and 'monetizing assets,' including 'capital resources' and 'cultural heritage', it is safe to say that no one has ever seriously believed to make up our total of deposits by the public, which could whatever as to how his or her deposit came into being."

Board Room Gossip

Price movement of stock on Wall Street and the Canadian exchanges continued to exhibit the same irregularity which was largely predicted for the month of December. Leading important features were in and in the absence of potent announcements from Washington there is nothing to bring the list out of its dullness. On the other hand, there are no signs that a further recession is likely to take place, and the stock market has been at times and weak spots, appears to be the order of the day.

Although the decline in steel operations was said to have halted, Bethlehem Steel's rate of capacity is reported for the current week by the American Iron and Steel Institute. The authoritative agency has announced that operations in steel have declined 4.1 points to 27.5 per cent. of capacity in the year's work. The gravity of the slump is more readily appreciated when it is pointed out that the decline for only a month ago was reported at 31.6 per cent. or 4.1 points.

"The statistically-inclined trader who reads the figures and forgets the human factor is probably unlikely to reside himself into the depths of mental depression. What should be remembered, however, is that now, with three low points behind us, there are being worked out, executives of the steel companies, the large users, such as automobile manufacturers are negotiating for future deliveries. In the automobile industry, values of steel and other issues representing the basic industries are decided for future events, not by current records alone. The place of the heavy steel parts of automobiles, the motor industry and the rolling stock of railroads, will be in the new operations over the next few months and they will bear careful watching.

There is no general depression now, according to no less an authority than Lord Keynes, Keynes, chairman of the Midland Bank, London and Cambridge economist. Lord Keynes in Great Britain when he was in Washington the other day, Sir Reginald declared that there is no reason to believe that the world has suffered at present by the luxury trades will develop into city and country post during the ward. He further revealed that, in the United States, the $3,500,000,000 of a little irregularity in British industry.

taxation question rests in building. When this is started everything else will follow. As far as our taxation is concerned if the government took over the county road system it would relieve us of a great amount of taxation and you would find a great difference in our employment situation."

Steve Davis:—"If I were sure, that the highways would assume 100 per cent. of the cost then I would be in favour of it but I want them to take it over."

Wm. Wright Faraday:—"The government has assumed 100 per cent. of the cost of the highways and they have done a good job and if they took over the county system, I believe that they would endeavour to let the government build the roads if they assume full cost, and thereby relieve the real estate taxpayer."

Mendelssohn Explains Men

Reeve Moore:—"The money must come from some place, and the government has taken it from the income tax. Last summer they installed a machine to count the cars on the highway, that took the place of a man. They call that reducing unemployment?"

Reeve Hubbell suggested the placing of a tax on the land on the cleared sections of country of the north. Those cleared lands take the old timers. Otherwise we will always have them on our hands, it would be fairer to have them pay part of the county."

Alan Bell, President of Sidney jumped to his feet and charged that a men requiring work on the highways in the township were forced to get a ticket from the township council. Mr. Bell said in work. "If the government takes over the county roads I believe the situation will become worse," he said. "Our men will not get jobs because they don't pay taxes in the county."

Reeve Lima, Marmora:—"I agree. The state situation applies to my village."

Reeve Quits Meeting

Deputy Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford:—"Our good friend the Reeve of Belleville has spoken on labor conditions. Let me say that this condition was not born yesterday and there have been millions from the earliest years."

Reeve Bowerman, Reeve of Wellington stated that "concurrence in the Duncan Commission Report would help in behalf of the enlightenment and the redemption of the world through the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven upon this earth and the annihilation of sin, misery and war."

Reeve Quin, Reeve of Wellington stated that "concurrence in the Duncan Commission Report would help in behalf of the enlightenment and the redemption of the world through the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven upon this earth and the annihilation of sin, misery and war."

When Lucy Eloped —And How

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

"This time next week, young lady," concluded George Rowland, father to Lucy, "you and your mother will be headed for Europe. Watch your step!"

Lucy regarded her irate parent apprehensively. "Please may I write to Craig while I am away, daddy?"

"You say not! If he sends you flowers when you sail, throw them overboard. No daughter of mine shall have anything to do with a son of that man Blakesley. I don't even know the young whippersnapper. Don't want to know him."

"And that's where the trouble lies!" cried poor Lucy. "If you would only consent to meet Craig, you would discover that, whatever his father may be, Craig himself is an ace."

There was nothing, however, to be gained by further argument. Either she and Craig must take matters into their own hands and run away or pressure must be brought to bear from some new source. The alternative, living each other up, was unthinkable.

At soon as a slammed door announced her father's departure, she called Craig on the telephone.

"There's no time to be lost, Craig. Father is about to have me taken to Europe. But trust I've a trick of an idea I would like to try out. You know that I have felt it was not quite loyal of me to let you take me to see your father, knowing how dad feels about him. But I am ready to throw loyalty overboard in a good cause. What is the best hour of the day to board your parent in his den?"

Evidently Craig saw her whatever data was necessary for precisely at three a slender, fur-coated girl was admitted to the inner office of John B. Blakesley and any observer could, have seen that there was a scared little look about her eyes.

After all, however, there was nothing remotely terrifying about the very genial man who rose at her entrance. It must be, thought Lucy, that only in his business dealings did he justify her father's opinion.

"So this is Rowland's daughter!" was his greeting. "My boy tells me your father opposes this match. Put my part, I consider Craig a darn lucky beggar!"

Lucy dimpled. "I've come to ask you to change your mind about that!" she said demurely.

The two of them talked an hour, while out in the office two of John B.'s prospective customers fumed their heels.

That evening George Rowland was summoned to the telephone.

"Yes—yes—"

"Well—Mr. Blakesley!

"You're absolutely opposed to what? To your son having anything to do with my daughter? You want me to—well, of all things!

"He's coming here tomorrow afternoon to call her to dope and you want me to throw him out! That's exactly what I had in mind myself! Good night!"

Furiously he turned to his daughter, who "heard it all" he shouted. "Your—your young man's father doesn't want you in his family any more than I want him in mine. Now, where's your pride?"

But Lucy avoided a direct reply. Instead, "What was the trouble between you two?" she asked. "I never knew exactly—"

"He trimmed me good and plenty in the market," said Rowland shortly, "using information that I had given him as a friend."

"How—how unlike him!" murmured Lucy thoughtfully.

"That's all you know about it," said her father, but her words were lost in the roar of a motor as Craig in his Ford Motor Co. area where the United Automobile Workers threatened a strike. It is now pamphleting in defiance of an order by Mayor John L. Corey of Dearborn.

Carey designated the area as one of congested traffic and forbade the Union activity.

Bruce Sherman Master of Lodge At Shannonville

Shannonville, Dec. 8.—The monthly meeting of the Orange Lodge was held in the Orange Hall on Monday evening with a large number in attendance. As it was the last month of the year the annual election of officers was held. At the opening of the meeting Carman Spencer was formally initiated into the lodge. According to the customary rules the officers were nominated and votes were cast by ballot.

The following were elected for the various offices:

Master, Bruce Sherman; Deputy Master, William MacFarlane; Chaplain, Rev. A. E. Pepper; Recording Secretary, Claude Clarke; Finance Secretary, F. Elmer; Treasurer, Arnold Mitchell; Marshall, Earl Whiteman; Lecturer, Ernest Pearce and Douglas Atkins; Committee, Sandy Goodfellow, Thomas Ogden, Percy Moore, Fred Jeffrey, Fred Mitchell, Arthur Clarke, G. Campbell...Percy Moore conducted the installation of officers. Retiring Master Lorne Wesser. Retiring Deputy Master, Bruce Sherman.

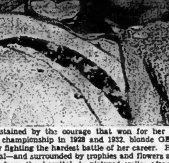
New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Detroit fans are so indignant over the trade which sent Gerald Walker to Chicago the papers have had to expand their letters-to-the editor department. Mickey Cochrane knows he stuck his chin out for he made Simmy Dykes promise he wouldn't play Walker on the Sox' first trip to Detroit... (But Dykes says he will).



Detroit Lions can't win many games... The Red Wings are sure in the dumps... Joe Louis isn't so hot anymore, but the auto city can claim all-round place in the American Panners' team... Tiger fans began to grow restless when there was talk of changing Goslin got the air... The rooted name of Navin Field to Briggs Stadium... Now they're on the loose and talking beyond... But if we know our Detroiters they'll probably be right back out there breaking attendance records next season.

So far, Otto Bluege the infielder, is the champion traveller of the big league baseball meetings... At three o'clock in the afternoon, Jersey City sent him to Los Angeles and five minutes later Los Angeles traded him to Birmingham. Old Strawster Lewis (he must be pooling 50) is moving 'em in Paris. The first major league trade of the season came from a conference between the two gentlemen pictured in the CENTRE picture. They are Mickey Cochrane, LEFT, manager of the Detroit Tigers, and Jimmy Dykes, manager of the Chicago White Sox, both former team-mates on the Philadelphia Athletics. Since becoming managers they have been trying to outsmart each other as "ivory traders". After several false starts they swung one of the biggest player-for-player deals of recent years. Cochrane agreed to let Gerald Walker, TOP RIGHT, outfielder; Marvin Owen, LOWER RIGHT, infielder, and Mike Trish, catcher, go to the White Sox in exchange for Pitcher Vernon Kennedy, TOP LEFT; Infielder Tony Piet, LOWER LEFT, and Outfielder Dale Walker. Cochrane had to bolster his pitching staff and was willing to sacrifice this hitting and defensive strength in order to get Kennedy, while Dykes was badly in need of hitting power and was only too glad to negotiate the trade.

When Lucy Eloped —And How

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

"This time next week, young lady," concluded George Rowland, father to Lucy, "you and your mother will be headed for Europe. Watch your step!"

Lucy regarded her train passenger apprehensively. "Please may I write to Craig while I am away, daddy?"

"You say not! If he sends you flowers when you sail, throw them overboard. No daughter of mine shall have anything to do with a son of that man Blakesley. I don't even know the young whippersnapper. Don't want to know him!"

"And that's where the trouble lies!" cried poor Lucy. "If you would only consent to meet Craig, you would discover that, whatever his father may be, Craig himself is an ace."

There was nothing, however, to be gained by further argument. Either she and Craig must take matters into their own hands and be run away or pressure must be brought to bear from some new source. The alternative, giving each other up, was unthinkable.

As soon as a slammed door announced her father's departure, she called Craig on the telephone.

"There is no time to be lost, Craig. Father is about to have me taken to Europe. But first, I've a bit of an idea I would like to try out. You know that I have felt it was not quite loyal of me to let you take me to see your father, knowing how dad feels about him. But I am ready to throw loyalty overboard in a good cause. What is the best hour of the day to board your parent in his den?"

Evidently Craig gave her whatever data was necessary for precisely at three a slender, fur-coated girl was admitted to the inner office of John B. Blakesley and any observer could have seen that there was a scared little look about her eyes.

After all, however, there was nothing remotely terrifying about the very genial man who rose at her entrance. It must be, thought Lucy, that only in his business dealings did he justify her father's opinion.

"So this is Rowland's daughter!" was his greeting. "My boy tells me your father opposes this match. For my part, I consider Craig a darn lucky beggar!"

Lucy dimpled. "I've come to ask you to change your mind about that!" she said demurely.

The two of them talked an hour, while out in the office two of John B's prospective customers cooled their heels.

That evening George Rowland was summoned to the telephone. He answered.

"Well—Mr. Blakesley!

"You're absolutely opposed to — what? To your son having anything to do with my daughter? You want me to—well, of all things!

"He's coming here tomorrow afternoon to ask her to elope and you want me to throw him out? That's exactly what I had in mind myself! Good night!"

Furiously he turned to his daughter. "There you are!" he shouted. "Your—your young man's father doesn't want you in his family any more than I want him in mine. Now, where's your pride?"

But Lucy avoided a direct reply. "Dad," she said, "what's the trouble between you two?" she asked. "I never knew exactly."

"Trouble enough! good and plenty in the market," said Rowland bitterly, "using language that I had given him as a friend."

"How—how did he—him?" murmured Lucy thoughtfully.

"That's all you know about it," said her father. "I did, and I was true. At least, it had been, unlike the man in bed always supplied Blakesley to be.

"Then the afternoon Lucy, wailing for Craig in the library, saw her father drive up and come up the steps. She felt she was going to be there to throw Craig out! Well, at least he would be able to see what a splendid young man he was first! But she hadn't carried things a bit too far.

"Waiting for that son of Blakesley's?" demanded her father. Then at Lucy's nod, "I'll wait, too," he said curtly, and three himself into one of the big leather chairs.

The familiar odor of Craig's sport roadster brought her heart to her throat. A second later and he was in the room, shielded from one to the other.

Rowland rose slowly, with a keen glance at Craig. "Your father tells me you are planning to elope with my daughter," he said quietly.

"Very well—I took passage for Lucy and her mother on the Skoric. I am thinking of cancelling it for a later date and letting the two of you go for a honeymoon!"

Then, drawing Lucy into his left arm and extending his right hand to Craig, "I know enough to acknowledge when I have been routed," he said. "It got under my skin when I thought your father was opposed to my girl here and I went straight round the morning to see him about it. In the course of conversation, I learned that your father had never gotten the information I sent him. He showed me proofs of his having put up in the Adirondacks, beyond even the reach of carrying, $50—I apologize and—well, bless you, my children!"

Almost with the bombshell suddenness of their departure, COL. and MRS. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH returned to the United States, leaving their two children in England where they have sought seclusion. Their arrival from Britain was unheralded and "leaked out" only after the liner on which they crossed had docked. This picture made during the voyage, shows the Colonel and his wife, who travelled under assumed names as Mr. and Mrs. Gregory, at dinner at the captain's table with Capt. James E. Roberts. The famed flying couple shunned public appearances during their trip and were whisked away to Englewood, N.J., estate of Mrs. Lindbergh's mother upon their arrival at New York.

KING LEOPOLD

LADY ANNE

PRINCE CHARLES

The arrival in England, for a visit to the Duke of Portland, of Leopold, King of the Belgians, and his mother, Queen Elizabeth, stirred rumors which were promptly denied officially of an impending romance between the young monarch and Lady Anne Cavendish Bentinck, daughter of the Marquis of Titchfield and a grand-daughter of Leopold's host. Also in England was Prince Charles, brother of King Leopold, whose name was at one time romantically linked with that of Lady Anne's. The visits were described as private. Leopold was widowed when his beautiful queen, Astrid, was killed in an automobile accident over two years ago.

Here is the man who, officials of the French Sureté Nationale maintain, is the brains behind the machine plot reportedly laid by undercover Rightist groups for a revolt to overthrow the French Republic and set up a monarchy. He is EUGENE DELONCLE, a prominent Paris banker and engineer. Police arrested him early in their raids and claim to have found evidence incriminating him as mainspring of the supposed plots.

While medical science admitted itself baffled by the deadly malady which has snatched the lives of ten infants in Chicago hospitals in less than two weeks, Nurse Mable Peterson watches tiny Sandra Trask, first of the stricken babies to exhibit signs of recovery. Sandra was released from St. Elizabeth's Hospital along with six other babies who contracted the disease and doctors believe they are out of danger. The virus believed causing the epidemic is still unidentified.

COMPLAINS OF TRANSPORT LAW ENFORCEMENT

Regulations to Enforce Hours of Labor, Vehicles Not Adequate, —Fabian

Long Hours by Transport Drivers Prove Hazard to Public Charged

POLICE OVERWORKED

Proper Types of Vehicles Generally Found on By-ways Claimed

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Efforts to enforce regulations concerning hours of labor for transport drivers and the fitness of their vehicles were condemned by Fabian Roberts, K.C., general representative of the Automotive Transport Association, and by Fred Bromelhurst of Railway Employees, said today.

Mr. Roberts was cross-examined before the Chevrier Transport Committee by Irwin Dunlop, counsel for the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario, when it the Crown had failed to adequate enforcement of regulations over a number of years.

"I can't answer yes or no to that question," said Fabian. "Prior to 1934 the situation was exceptionally bad. Since then there has been an effort to improve conditions but the staff looking after regulation enforcement is very small.

"The lack of enforcement resulted in certain drivers working more than ten hours a day?" Dunlop asked.

"Yes" said witness.

"In some cases it has been shown that they worked 20 hours a day," said Fabian when asked if the public had been endangered by overworked drivers.

Four Type in Minority

"Has the enforcement led to the public being endangered by improper equipment on the highways," Dunlop queried.

"I could not answer that," said Fabian, "but if the proper type of equipment is in the minority today," Fabian said.

LOVE WILL FIND A (RAIL) WAY

Cupid fought a losing bout this morning when sweetheart between Belleville and Kingston balked at well known Burlington Bell Telephone company official who is adamant as marrying on schedule.

Making the trip from Burlington to Belleville in the time of five hours yesterday afternoon, the official stayed in this city overnight. Early today he started for Kingston where the ceremony was scheduled to be held at eleven o'clock. Drifts between this city and Kingston delayed the car as effectively as a flood.

Not to be balked the official rented an auto in Belleville, managed to explain the situation by long distance telephone and sailed into Kingston in time to be held up until he could arrive in Kingston by train on the Canadian National Railway.

The wedding will be held this afternoon.

LAST PAYMENT ON ROAD DEBT MADE

County Council Holds Brief Morning Session Thursday

Dark clouds of a one hundred and sixty thousand dollar highway construction debt that has hung over County Council Chamber for the last three years were swept away this morning, when, amid applause, the last payment of $20,000 on the Provincial Government debt was made. This payment constitutes the final instalment of a debt incurred by county highway improvements in 1925.

Council went into committee of the whole at 10 a.m. with Reeve James Bronson in the chair, for the brief morning session today. Several accounts including those of the Martin Funeral Home, Belleville Hydro Commission, Ontario Training School for Girls and Boys, Toronto and Kingston Branches of the Children's Aid Society, House of Providence, Kingston, and others were paid.

Regarding the payment of indigent hospitalization accounts, Warden Gray advised municipalities, to study their accounts carefully and that wherever possible to make payment thus avoiding any unnecessary legal action on the part of the various hospitals.

Appointment of County Clerk Mrs Denyes and Mrs. Wesley Gray, as local representatives of the "Board of the Mothers' Allowance Commission, was made by council. Under new regulations the board will be composed of five members from the district of the council, one of which must be a woman, and three to be appointed by the government, by the municipal council.

In answer to a query of Reeve Larkin, Tyendinaga in which he asked if anything had been done with regard to certain sections of road asked by council in June session to be taken over by the government, Chairman of Roads, James Wills replied that nothing had been taken by the department as yet.

Council adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. W. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Snow flakes or snow crystals! A snow crystal is the unit of snow fall. It usually in the form of a flat microscopic plate which is less than a ten thousandth of an inch in thickness. But other forms have been found, and also long needles and long hexagonal prisms with pyramidal ends. Each is hexagonal or inequal in size. The latter is usually assembled in buttons. The growth of a snow crystal is always from a solid nucleus which is a dust particles attach themselves in an orderly manner, forming hexagonal patterns of intricate and interesting design. It is thought that the design of the crystal may be changed by passing through layers of different temperatures and concentrations of vapor; the simpler the crystal's design, the less adventuresome its life has been.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Pressure continues unusually low over James Bay, while high pressure with fair and decidedly cold weather covers the Prairie Provinces and a large part of the Western States. Snowfalls have occurred in many parts of Ontario and Quebec with strong southwest to west winds, and it has become colder in the region of the Great Lakes.

Lake Superior: Strong west to northwest winds moderating today and continuing cold today and Friday with quite a few snow flurries.

Manitoba—Fresh or strong northwest winds, mostly fair and decidedly cold today and Friday.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Fair and decidedly cold today and Friday.

Car Ploughs Through Crowd in Safety Zone

Toronto, Dec. 9 (AP)—An automobile ploughed through a crowd of nearly 100 persons waiting for a street car last night, killing one and injuring at least 16.

Frederick Hamilton, 30, an automobile factory foreman, the auto driver was arrested and Chief of Police Dennis A. Bruton said charges will be laid.

A physician and two policemen said Hamilton had been drinking.

The crowd in the street car waiting zone was made up mainly of churchgoers who had just come from a nearby tabernacle. Mrs. Theresa Schuyer, 46, was killed.

Mrs. Agnes Terry, 34, one of the injured, said:

"The car struck me and knocked my pumps and galoshes off. When it was all over I found myself right under the car between the front and back wheels."

Bay and Lake Front Blanketed by Heavy Snow

HYDRO MUST BUILD POWER RESERVES SAYS DR. T. HOGG

Must Utilize Waterpower Sites Before Resorting to Steam Power

FREE OF POLITICS

Also States Mines Must Carry Proper Share of Risk

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP) — Ontario should make every effort to utilize waterpower sites, even where locked up by combination of interprovincial streams, before resorting to steam power for generating electricity, Dr. Thomas Hogg, recently-appointed hydro-electric commissioner, told the Electric Power Commission, said last night.

Dr. Hogg, first engineer to hold the senior executive and administrative post in Ontario's hydro-electric power set up, declared that the province owned but provincially-controlled power utility was honored at a banquet arranged in his honor by nine engineering societies.

Mean, he declared, certain special purposes may take place in Ontario Commission reservations "in the not too distant future", he said, recalling that in 1928 the Commission abandoned discussion of plans for steam plants and decided to stick to hydro-electricity.

Must Build Reserves

Dr. Hogg warned that power must build ample power reserves. The vagaries of nature, wind, flood, ice and drought people must be taken because loss of power sources. He doubted the people realized the enormous consequences a power shortage would entail.

Toll of Storm Seven in N. Y. State

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—As a 53-mile-per-hour gale piled up huge drifts and buried Western New York state traffic today, upstate death toll was mounted to seven.

Seventh to die in the state's current cold wave was Arthur Bellis, 19, Hilton, killed instantly by a car near Jamestown early today while he was on his way to work. The storm apparently swung a belt of heavy snow from the edge of the path cutting a line between Crofton and Watertown, paralyzing the more southerly parts of Prince Edward County.

Residents of Wellington villages Warden Sandoe, driver of a Consolidated School bus this morning when he returned on foot to secure assistance in extricating his bus from huge snow drifts a few miles north of the village. With only a few hours sleep since Monday, residents could not believe that such a heavy fall had blocked roads a short distance away. Near Swamp College, a mile north, snow banks were piled up before farther north drifts averaging two feet in depth blocked the highway.

REBEKAHS HOLD ENJOYABLE PARTY

The Noble Grand, officers and members of Quinteva Rebekah Lodge, IH were delighted at a delightfully arranged card party in their pretty lodge room in the Odd Fellows' Temple on Tuesday evening, Dec. 7th. There were 25 tables in play. The door prize was drawn by Mrs. John Carter, and the lucky number was eighty-two second, Mrs. Shenk; gentlemen's first, Earl Hubbell; second, Mrs. Baker. The scenes concluded at 11 p.m. after which a delicious supper was served. A pleasant hour was spent in dancing to the music of Tweed's. The happy gathering dispersed at 12.30, everyone expressing the opinion that it was one of the finest card parties of this season. The committee in charge were Mrs. West, convener, Mrs. Robt. Andrews, Mrs. Phyllis Tweed, Mrs. Marjory Bell was in charge of the music.

Path of Snow Blizzard 12 Miles Wide Hereabouts

Area Extends Six Miles North And South of Bay of Quinte

FOXBORO AND MT. VIEW

Evidence of the width of the path of the heavy snowstorm that blockaded a strip of this district approximately twelve miles wide is found in the fact that no heavy fall of snow was noted in Prince Edward County, southeast of Crofton, a distance of twelve miles, and from the city. Picton is practically devoid of snow, travellers returning from the Prince Edward County town stated at noon today, while only a light fall was noted between Picton and Crofton.

Playing football on the ice-covered pond the village of Wellington but buried the district a few miles north of the blockade consumed under two feet of snow. From this point the storm apparently swung to the south-easterly direction from the edge of the path cutting a line between Crofton and Watertown, paralyzing the more southerly parts of Prince Edward County.

Residents of Wellington villages Warden Sandoe, driver of a Consolidated School bus this morning when he returned on foot to secure assistance in extricating his bus from huge snow drifts a few miles north of the village. TONGUE GASHED IN FALL OFF ROOF

Douglas Hineman of Brick Creek Also Breaks Arm

Picton, Ont, Dec. 8—(Special)—Suffering from a gash in his tongue and injuries to his left arm and side and a broken arm, Douglas Hineman, Black Creek, mail-driver, was rushed to Prince Edward County Memorial yesterday following an accident in which he landed to the ground from the roof his house.

Hineman was placing a radio aerial on the ridgeboard of the roof when his feet slipped. He rolled down the sloping incline of the roof and fell heavily eighteen feet to the ground.

Medical help was summoned and the injured man ordered to the hospital. His arm was fractured in two places.

Where is Utopia?

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Commissioner C. O. Fabian concerning regulations of motor transport in the United States.

"So now we have found the way to Utopia through regulations drafted at Washington," commented Dunlop.

"Do you know what Utopia is?"

As Fabian pondered the question, Stinger interjected:

"Perhaps it is desirable that a special board be set up to inquire into the whereabouts of Utopia."

Gales and Blizzards Pile Snow Deep Over Province

Rural Ways in Many Parts Blockaded — Niagara District Heavily Hit in Worst Storm to Visit District in years.

Crippled communications, disrupted transportation systems and mimic glaciers were left today in the wake of gales and blizzards that piled snow deeply upon city streets and rural roads in almost every section of Ontario, from Niagara to Manitoba was hardest hit in the worst series of storms to hit the provinces in years.

Gales over the Great Lakes yesterday forced vessels to seek shelter. Drifts to a height of several feet in western and eastern Ontario, where snowstorms have been blowing almost unceasingly since Sunday, and along the peninsula of Niagara, highway travel in some districts and halted it in others.

Train schedules were thrown into disorder.

Towns Isolated in Blizzard

Many towns were isolated in the blizzard that piled snow to a depth of more than 30 inches at Port Erin, 18 inches at Port Colborne and 14 inches at Walkerton. Brockville, in the east, was cut off from other towns by snow-drifted roads. Farmers in the Bruce district, in the west, were without bread. A milk shortage threatened at Port Colborne. Snow was all the lakes and shipping shelltered bays. The package freighter Scott Misener took shelter at Quebec harbor, Michipicoten Island, in Georgian Bay. The 250-foot steamer Thorpton and the Midlwestern, rode out a gale in Lake Erie, the Berrylon was aground off Colborne and the Mathewston off Port Stanley. Two vessels were in Toledo Canal.

The tanker Windsolite, more than 600 feet long, at Port Stanley, tried unsuccessfully in the teeth of the gale to reach that port. No word was felt ashore for the safety of the vessel, believed to have come up the lake and to be anchored in a sheltered bay. It was so

County Council Highlights Glimpsed from Press Desk

Another veteran councillor, Reeve and Ex-Warden James Bronson of Mayo Township announced his intention of retiring from the spotlight of municipal life when his present term expires. "This is my tenth consecutive year," he informed the council, and I think someone else should take their turn," stated Reeve Bronson.

"That is all very well," smiled another councillor, "but the last county session will see "Jim" back in the same old seat, mark my words."

In the report of Mr. W. Marvin, county council Court House Inspector read before council yesterday, mention was made of the co-operation received from the caretaker of the county. Only one showed any inclination towards loafing, the report said, and only one case occurred where extra cleaning was required by county officials and the costs charged to the taxes of the property on which removal took place.

Surprise and delight registered on the faces of councillors in session yesterday afternoon when Treasurer Haggerty quietly placed a bulky envelope on the desk in front of every member. Beautiful gold tie and cravat pins gleamed in the electric light ground before the astonished councillors. The gift from Warden Gray came as a complete surprise, and was greatly appreciated by members of the council.

Northern municipality representatives gained with some concern and apprehension at the heavy snowfall, that piled up in city streets yesterday afternoon and evening. Visions of snowfilled roads stalled automobiles and hours of work with

POLICE CHECK ON DISCARDED SMOCK LEFT BY BANDITS

Hope to Determine Ownership Leading to Identity of Masked Men

Coniston, Ont., Dec. 8 (CP)—Police today sought to determine ownership of a second overall smock found discarded near the trail believed to have been used by three bandits who attempted a midnight holdup of the Coniston branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Other articles police were checking included handkerchiefs used as masks by the men and an axe, the R. F. Addison axe they unceremoniously tied the woman in chair and bound her hands and feet to the bank-downstairs in an effort to make Mr. Graham, the manager, open the vault.

Four new revolvers, batteries, a second double-barrelled shot-gun, and a revolver were also in hands of police.

Gold Toothpicks And Fascinators, Gifts 30 Years Ago

Calgary, Dec. 9 (CP) — Time changes and so do Christmas presents, according to a newspaper file of 30 years ago.

For a gentleman a gold toothpick "for the discriminating man of fastidious nice" and for the smart girl a "fascinator" was a proper gift. A fascinator was a small woolen shawl the young lady of 1907 draped over her bobbed head on party nights.

Silk auto scarfs were popular gifts where the ladies and watch fobs, plain and fancy, for men. Fancy hat pins were also sold for ladies and 13-button gloves and kid laced boots, high and wide.

LAWSON CLIFFORD DIES

Oshawa, Ont., Dec. 8—(CP)—Lawson Clifford, 58, former Liberal member of parliament for Ontario constituency, died here Tuesday.

Born in East Whitby Township, Mr. Clifford lived all of his life in the township where he was a prominent farmer and noted breeder and exporter of Hereford cattle. He was a former President of the Canadian Hereford Association and a charter member of the Royal Winter Fair.

Snow Two Feet Deep Extends 6 Miles North; 'Front' Traffic Held Up

Heaviest Early Winter Snowstorm Follows Narrow Belt

NORTH ESCAPES

Drifting of Snow on Highway Interferes With Traffic

Belleville today was digging itself out of one of the heaviest snow storms experienced in local weather records during recent years.

The storm which even late today showed little signs of abating, had covered the city and district with a two foot fall of level measurement, paralyzed traffic on main highways and county roads during the night and today had drifted to a five and six foot depth through the north section of the county, where many smaller communities were virtually shut off from the world.

Bob-sleighs and cutters were reported in the county with which to carry milk and cream to local dairies; in the city cars were left snowbound in garages and drifts in city streets, man-high, precluded the possibility of motor operation.

Fifty Men At Work in City.

Fifty men, half of whom were taken from the relief lists of the city took up the task of digging the business section out of the heavy drifts in which deserted automobiles lay buried. The huge snowplow, four trucks with possibly more added to their number, and men were employed in the work of clearing the streets and the market square during the day. The city snow plow worked on a 24-hour shift through the night and today in an attempt to make some effort to keep the channels of traffic open.

New Year's Eve Festivity Costs Lower Than in 1936

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—New Year's Eve celebrants here who usher in 1938 will have a less expensive evening than those who rang in the second 1937 a year ago.

Working over from recession reports, theatre, hotel and night club managers are setting the scale of prices lower this season.

Even so, the price for a ticket to Times Square, $2.50 last year and $15 a plate for a key-boy evening afterward at a few prankish night spots.

FIVE BILLIONS COST OF U. S. STRIKES

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—Strikes cost the United States around $5,000,000,000, or between $160 to $175 per family, in 1937 "the worst and most costly period of labor turmoil in our history," Robert T. Weir, the chairman of National Steel Corporation's American business leaders today.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

A PLEA FOR SCHOOLBOYS

New York, Dec. 9 (CP)— The school boy who says "now for war", today received the backing of President James B. Conant of Harvard University.

Department at Bunker's College, Cambridge, Mass.

"I think the school system is over-emphasizing reading at the expense of speech," Professor Eberhardt said. "The former seems to become more difficult every day because pronunciations which were formerly correct by half are now commonly accepted. The difference between the way words are pronounced and the way they are spelled is the chief trouble," he said. Eventually, speech and spelling teachers will have to be specialists in the various means of language teaching if results are to avoid further confusion."

SPIRITED ADVERTISERS REFUSED PERMIT BY MAYOR

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 9 (AP)—Sam Chase may ride his privately sleigh or climb down chimneys to deliver Santa Claus to the streets of Omaha, carrying advertising, but not in their retired today.

The mayor denied an Omaha firm's application for a permit to use a Santa, "sandwich man," who would ride in a sleigh. The mayor said he didn't want to distribute confusion.

He asked charity organizations to keep their Santas at their Christmas kettles.

HOMING PIGEON REFUSES TO GO HOME

Glasgow, Scotland, Dec. 9 (AP)—Homing pigeon that refuses to go home will be given one more chance by the owner of the pigeon loft.

The bird, released twice by factory workers who befriended it after it was found wandering in the factory, twice flew back to the factory.

The man brought the bird to Judge Desmaran, a pigeon fancier, who said he would let it rest a few days and release it again.

OLD SLAVE HONORED

Gainsville, N.C., Dec. 9 (AP)— At 120 Mrs. Mariah Smith, negro slave who claimed to be 107 years old, said:

"I don't know while fallin stand by me when I die like they ain't nothin to worry through me."

When she died, virtually the whole population of Gainsville attended the funeral. County Judge A. F. Godwin and several lawyers conducted the funeral services. Six white men were pall bearers.

"RARE SKIN DISEASE" JUST PENCIL MARKS

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 9 (AP) Six year old Jessie Pelmey's mother feared he had a "rare skin disease" when she combed him to the courtesy hospital.

But the boss spots defying Joseph's coat of many colors disappeared when Dr. Daniel M. Goldstein applied kerosene.

"Indelible pencil," was Dr. Meaney's diagnosis.

HORSE TUMBLES INTO 95 FOOT DEEP HOLE

Attleston, Ont., Dec. 9 (CP)— Billy had a handle. Bill being James McVicar's fine draw horse and a village pet. While at the village dump the horse stepped too close to the side of a 95 foot deep hole and tumbled 35 feet. McVicar hoped to retrieve Bill and the wagon and soon rescued Bill and the wagon.

CAMPBELLFORD HAS FEW ON RELIEF NOW

Only nine families are registered on the relief list of the village of Campbellford at the present time, in contrast to a total of 150 such families which received aid during the same period last year. The village has received charity organizations for the past two years on a per balance carryover from $125 collected last year for the purpose of providing Christmas baskets for the needy.

TWO MARMORA MEN DO OWN KNITTING

Marmora he-men have turned to the task of knitting, it would seem by the quieter hours of winter tradition. S. S. Wheeler reports from the village that George Aunger, business has brisked up since the first morning of the week between two rows of waiting on customers in his store, at a counter piled high with hosiery socks for a friend.

Mr. Aunger has been able to knit socks of any size since the age of twelve, having learned the art while content to bed for a few weeks after having cut his foot severely with an axe.

"My mother was my best teacher and it was one of the best ways I had to keep occupied," he explains.

Gordon Bray of the village also knits, his own socks and suits in spare time.

ALLISTON BREEDER BUYS SIX HOLSTEINS AT CAMPBELLFORD

Six pure-bred Holstein cattle have been shipped from Campbellford by Craig Fisher, to J. J. K. McCagan, Alliston, who has one of the finest herds in Ontario, foundation cows purchased from the breeding herd of the late T. F. Lobley, noted breeder of which Mr. McCagan was purchased. Mr. Fisher's shipment included the two-year-old cow with an R.O.P. record of 10,000 pounds of milk on twice a day milking. A three-year-old cow was topped a strong class at the Belleville Fair is also included in the shipment.

REMOVE OLD FENCE BEFORE IT IS STOLEN

Lost, sections of a stout board fence surrounding the campus of Albert College are being removed this week under direction of the faculty in an effort to retain some of the lumber before the other fellow gets it. All, it was reported at the office of Dr. Burt Howard, school principal, today.

"We are trying to get them first," it was reported by the Rev. Mr. Howard, when questioned.

"For the past two years they've been tearing the fence down, board by board and carrying it away. We are removing the whole thing in the hope of just salvaging some of the wood before it's all gone. That is the only reason for its removal." It was added.

SHANNONVILLE LODGE ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of Shannonville Orange Lodge, Bruce Sherman was elected Master of the Lodge for the ensuing year. Other officers elected were: Wilbur Mc-Farlane, Rev. A. E. Joyner; Chaplain Clarke; F. Hoey; Arnold Mitchell; Earl Whitmore; Ernest Hagerman; Douglas Aikins; Sandy Goodfellow; Thomas Ogden; Percy Hoey; Fred Jeffrey; Fred Mitchell; Arthur Clarke and G. Campbell. One new member, Lloyd Mosher, was initiated in the Order.

GOVT. BUOY CARRIER COMPLETING WORK

The Government buoy carrier, steamer Otterville, following her work of lifting buoys in the Bay of Quinte and surrounding waters, is now engaged in the lifting of buoys in the channels where she is lifting summer, and placing winter markers.

COLD WEATHER MAKES FISHING DIFFICULT

Fishermen of the district engaged in lake netting have also been interfering from the effects of the present storm. Unable to lift their nets during the past week of cold weather due to a thin coating of ice on the lake near shore, which has been too thin to support bodily weight, yet too thick to allow a boat to pass through without difficulty, nets are further hampered now by the heavy winds which make work impossible.

NO DECISION AS YET ON MONDAY, DEC. 27 AS PUBLIC HOLIDAY

Whether Belleville merchants will observe Monday, December 27, as Boxing Day is a question that has as yet not been decided, it was included by questioning a few of the members of the Retail Merchants' Association today.

It is not likely, however, that any official steps will be taken by the Association to declare the day a holiday owing to the fact that this year Christmas falls on Saturday, thus giving clerks two days, Saturday and Sunday for rest.

No application has been made to city council to have the city generally observe Monday as a holiday, it is pointed out.

PRICE OF APPLES WAS INCORRECT

An error in price occurred in the Muldrew Farms advertisement that appeared in last evening's issue of the Ontario Intelligencer under the heading "Apples of Superior Quality $1.25." This was incorrect, the correct price for Dunsmore Spitz Apples should have appeared $1.75.

NAMES OF IMPERIAL VETERANS' CHILDREN ASKED FOR BY CLUB

The arrival of Santa Claus at the Imperial Veterans' Club has been announced this season, according to Joseph Sennick, secretary of the Imperial "Tish" today. The officers of the organization are anxious that Santa Claus will be provided with the names of all Imperial veterans' children at once, such names should be in the hands of the officials as soon as possible, President James Shepard announced this morning. The Imperial Veterans' Christmas tree is an annual function, that is being keenly awaited by even the older members.

CANNERY OFFICIALS ATTEND CONVENTION

A number of officials connected with the canning industry in this section are attending the National Canners' Association convention, being held in Toronto this week. John Dean, Ameliasburg, is president of the Ontario Canners' Association and W. H. Benson and Norman McDonald, Picton are directors.

STUDY GROUP MEETS

In spite of the stormy weather last evening a large number of members of the Belleville Lecture and Study Club gathered in the Collegiate Institute for the first of the weekly discussion periods in connection with the Queen's University lecture course. The study was spent in taking up "The Class in Public Practice." The leaders were Rev. W. J. Walker and Mr. R. O. Williams. A further group is being organized under the leadership of Mr. John Devine.

Mr. MacLaurin reported from the executive that the membership list was composed of one hundred and thirty and announced that due to the splendid financial condition of the treasury an extra lecture would be added. It is expected that more names will be added to the membership, so successful has the undertaking proved to be.

Storm Delays Defense Witness, Court is Forced to Adjourn

Mrs. J. Hoffman, Napanee, Reported Snowbound at Marysville

MAY COME BY TRAIN

The wheels of justice stood motionless and ceased to grind today as a sitting of County Court was forced to adjourn because of the snow storm, according that has blocked highways and branch lines of Belleville for the past two days.

When the Jury Sittings of the County Court, with Judge E. H. Fitzhenry, His Honour Judge E. H. McLean in Belleville, convened this morning for the hearing of the charge of attempted fraud against James Hawes, the County Crown Attorney court found it was unable to proceed owing to the absence of important defence witness, Mrs. J. Hoffman, of Napanee.

The court held a recess from ten until eleven o'clock this morning in hopes Mrs. Hoffman would put in an appearance, but at the latter hour His Honour adjourned the proceedings until 2.00 p.m. this afternoon.

"I am sorry to have to adjourn the court, but apparently others, not so wise as ourselves, did not remain in the city and through no fault of their own are unable to attend court this morning owing to the storm," declared His Honour.

Charles A. Payne, K.C., counsel for the defendant in the case, assured the court that his final witness, Mrs. Hoffman, was enroute to Belleville. "I understand the highway is completely blocked with snow, but efforts are being made to open the road, so we hope to have our witness here this afternoon," Mr. Payne declared.

Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., who is prosecuting the case.

This afternoon the Ontario Intelligencer learned that Mrs. Hoffman's party, enroute from Napanee by motor, was snowbound between Marysville and Shannonville, but efforts to have a Canadian National west bound passenger train stop at Marysville and pick up the marooned motorists had been made by Mr. J. M. Simpson, Napanee barrister, who is accompanying Mrs. Hoffman in this city.

Obituary

MRS. JESSIE WIMS

After a lengthy illness Mrs. Jessie Wims, widow of T. J. Wims and a former resident of Belleville, died at the family residence, 2307 Jeanne Manor St., Montreal, on Wednesday afternoon, December 8th.

The late Mrs. Wims whose maiden name was Miss Jessie Kerr, was born at Alexander, Glengarry County. For some time she resided at Campbellford and later at Belleville, where her husband, the late P. J. Wims, carried on a grocery business for some time.

About seventeen years ago the family removed to Montreal.

Mrs. Wims during her residence at Belleville, was a faithful member of St. Michal's Church and was held in high regard by many friends.

Surviving her are two sons, Mr. Alexander Wims and Mr. Patrick Wims, both of Montreal; three daughters, Miss Mae, Grace, Nesta and Margaret all of Montreal.

Interment will be made at Belleville. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LT.-COL. HERBERT HULME

Many friends of the older residents of Belleville will sincerely regret to learn of the death of Herbert Hulme, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. Croft Hulme of this city, which occurred at Victoria, B.C., on Thursday, December 2nd.

Lt.-Col. Hulme was born in Belleville, 78 years ago. Upon graduation from Toronto University and being called to the bar as a barrister-solicitor, he went to Vancouver, B.C., in the year 1904, and became prominent in the legal and military life of the city. Before the Great War he joined the Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles with which he rose to rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. At the outbreak of the war he was appointed to command the battalion and went to France as commander of the unit. Later he was transferred to the 16th Battalion and subsequently held important posts in England, France and Canada before armistice was signed.

Returning to the Pacific Coast in 1919 he resumed his legal practice and from 1928 to 1934 was, in the latter 1936, he was appointed secretary of Workmen's Compensation Board to investigate conditions on the Vancouver City police force. During his residence in Belleville he was an enthusiastic officer in the 15th Regiment and popular with many friends.

Surviving h'.s are his widow; two sons, Herbert, a member of the R.C.M.P. at Red Deer, Alberta and Gordon in Cariboo; one daughter, Mrs. Beechcroft, Vancouver; one sister, Mrs. Sidney Bagley, Grand Rapids, Mich.; two brothers, Mr. Stanley Hulme, Montreal and Mr. Clemoe Hulme.

The funeral service will be held with full military honors took place at Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver on Saturday, December 4th. The burial office of the Church of England was conducted by His Honour Archbishop A. U. de Pencier and the Very Rev. Dean Ramsay Armitage.

HARRY GOODMAN

Harry Goodman, who for some years has carried on a general men's wear store at 207 Front Street, Belleville, died at the Kingston General Hospital on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 8th, after having been ill for Saturday for some time. He was 53 years of age and a member of the Jewish Synagogue. Friends here will regret to learn of his death.

The body will be conveyed from the Pinkston Funeral Home, Church Street, to Toronto for interment.

Surviving him are his widow and two sons, Jacob and Samuel, both of Belleville, one brother, Charles, of Toronto.

MRS. MATILDA EGGLETON (Stirling)

Stirling, Dec. 9 (Special)—A resident of Stirling for the past many years, Mrs. Matilda Eggleton, widow of the late Herbert Eggleton, passed away at her home on Wednesday morning after having a lengthy illness.

The deceased lady was in her sixty-ninth year, was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Dickens. She was a faithful member of St. Paul's United Church, and took an active interest in the work of the Woman's Missionary Society and the Women's Association. By her many friends she was held in high esteem and her passing will be sincerely regretted.

Left to mourn her loss are two daughters, Mrs. Reg. Heyland (Ruth), of Kleting, China, and Mrs. Russell Dafoe (Pearl, of Toronto); one brother, Mr. Joseph Dickens of Norwood, and one sister, Mrs. Arthur Allen of Rawdon.

Funeral service will be held on Friday afternoon at St. Paul's United Church at 2 p.m., with interment in Clarke's cemetery.

Revolver and Clothes Provide Slight Clues

Coniston, Ont., Dec. 9 (CP)—Police had at close today toward solving the mystery surrounding a bullet, a revolver and some clothes believed to have been used by two gunmen foiled in their attempt early Wednesday to rob the branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce by the bank manager and a minister.

Hollis Hall, masked and armed, tried to force the bank manager, John Graham, to open a vault containing the $30,000 payroll of the International Nickel Company. The vault was fitted with a time lock that would not open until many hours later.

Nickel company police said the revolver and clothing were found about a half mile from the bank. When the bandits escaped one of them dropped a second-hand shotgun

BRITAIN'S PLACE SEEN IN PROPHECY

Mr. R. E. Wemp Speaks Under Auspices of British Israelites

Despite stormy weather there were several who braved the elements to attend the meeting in the Y.M.C.A. auditorium given by Mr. R. E. Wemp of London, Ont., field secretary of the British Israel Federation.

Following up Tuesday evening's discourse Mr. Wemp spoke upon "Britain's Place in Prophecy," with the aid of the blackboard and chalk he demonstrated how many years dates seemed to be linked up so important in the celebration of events. Quoting certain passages of Scripture the marriage contract of the Lord God with the house of Israel people, as betrothed was stressed. How a divorcement of ten of the tribes and the Holy Writ came about was emphasized as being one of temporary duration which God has used for the chastisement of wayward people. In the third commandment it was claimed by Mr. Wemp that the British Isles and the United States were not to cause any dishonor through blaspheming or taking the name of the Lord in vain, or cursing vainly. The punishment for disobedience of the fourth part of a period of seven times seven much spoken of in the Bible was the basis of Mr. Wemp's calculations. He traced the progress of the people of Israel, through the Assyrian captivity, considered a very dry subject. The story of the Ten Tribes, Roman and how a remnant scattered eventually into Egypt, the Canaanite territory and so forth, was followed closely into England was dealt with.

Illustrations were frequent and held his audience with rapt attention. Many charts were also illustrating where ordinarily figures might be considered a very dry subject.

Mr. Wemp's remarks, Roman and barbarian were explained. Literature and books and pamphlets by Mr. Wemp and others displayed also created an interesting display.

Tie and Cravat Pins Presented by Warden

Quietly, unsuspiciously, County Treasurer Jacob Shorey went about his way through the County Council Chamber on the final session of the day afternoon. As he passed each member he dropped a small package on the desk in front of each member. "With the compliments of the Warden," the card enclosed.

Beside the small package was a gold tie-pin with crawal pin to match. It was a pleasant yet golden testimonial to the fine services rendered by Warden Wesley Gray, reeve of Thurlow and treasurer of the County Council of 1937.

Members opened the gift packages. Eyes opened wide with surprise and delight at the gold and silver. Glances of silent appreciation were directed toward the Warden, who with quiet cognizance of what was going on gave no indication that he knew. It was a fine gesture on the part of Warden Gray, and gave to a member characteristic of his reticence toward self-styled "undue personal publicity."

JURY ADDS RIDER TO ITS VERDICT

Accidental Deaths Found in Drowning of Three in Quebec

Plaisance, Que., Dec. 9 (CP)—A March was conducted today over the body of Alphonse Ouimet, St. Eugustine, bank manager, one of three persons drowned Tuesday when the automobile in which they were riding crashed through a bridge guard rail into the Little Nation River.

Bodies of Charlemagne Landriault, St. Eugene hotel keeper, and his wife were recovered yesterday. A coroner's jury at an inquest last night held in a hotel room found their deaths accidental.

The jury however added to its verdict recommending placing of danger signs with red reflectors at both approaches to the bridge, erection of a strong guard rail and construction of a less dangerous approach and removal of a hump of land on the south side of the highway.

Car-Lamps Used In Midday Storm

Snow falling in a heavy blanket like mass practically obliterated visibility in the vicinity of Belleville yesterday afternoon. Motorists Automobiles were forced to use headlights, however to proceed through the dense white mass that fell from grey lowering clouds. "It is snowing near Halloway as it did when I was here yesterday afternoon," Deputy Reeve Roscoe Rohsen of Thurlow Township stated this morning. "Cars had to crawl slowly with visibility practically nil owing to the density of the falling snow," he added.

County Gives Two Acres Land To Department of Highways

Department to Move House And Fence Across Under Road

MR. RUSTON HEARD

Permission of application by two acres of land owned by the Province of the property of the Hastings County Shire Association, Limited, on the city on No. 2 highway to the Provincial Department of Highways, was made by the Hastings County Council through a special committee which met on Friday extraordinary session afternoon at Shire Hall.

The gist of the property was made in favor of the Department of the Province of the brick house situated on the south side of the highway in county property No. 2 in front of the north side of the highway approved by the special committee. The land conveyed by the Association will be utilized for the widening of the highway at the particular place.

Conditions of application were that the Department of Highways move the house back on its present foundation, with the Department of Highways with regard to the erection of a cattle pass, and a passage for the members of the Hastings County House. The expenses of the committee had been approved by the Province. The terms were very necessary and will be a great convenience.

Offer to Move House

Regarding the removal of the house situated on the south side of the highway on the House of Refuge property, Mr. Jones stated that the Department was prepared to move the house back on its property, and not across the road at a cost of five hundred dollars.

Reeve Nickle: "The land drops sharply at this end of the road into a veritable muddle. I do not think it is a good site at all, and that is the reason I think the house should be moved across the road."

Mr. Jones: "The cost of your land is based upon its frontage in this particular case. We are not moving your frontage and so are not decreasing the value of your property. There is five hundred dollars difference. In the purchase of the property between council and the department and we are authorized to come to reasonable terms."

Deputy Reeve Bedford: "What is the price of the land offered by the department if they move the house over the highway?"

Mr. Baldwin: "The department does not feel that council should charge us anything for the land if we move the house to the north of the highway."

At this point the matter was referred to the special committee which went into special session following adjournment.

Mr. Ruston Present

A resume of the morning session regarding the local Children's Aid Society was given by Capt. Ruston of that institution present at the afternoon session. Questioned by Reeve Bedford regarding the possibility of placing the office in Belleville instead of in the Home, Capt. Ruston stated that "this was not agreeable to the department in every emphatic," Capt. Ruston declared, "that the office of the Children's Aid Society be placed in a prominent location so that all may have direct access to it. However, if Council feels that something can be done to change this, the matter can be taken up with the Department."

Addressing the Council with regard to the functions of the Children's Aid Society, Capt. Ruston told members that the cost per diem per child has been reduced by twenty cents since April 1st. "This reduction was made possible," he said, "through the fact that the Home was closed for some months during the summer months and thus incurred no expenditure. "I might say," added Mr. Ruston, "that we had a surplus this year and this was turned back to the Council. In the matter of wages to men," he said "that the cost to municipalities in Hastings County for Children's Aid is less than any other municipality in the province in the matter of wages places the cost per diem ranges from seventy-five cents to as high as two dollars and nine cents. Here in Hastings during the past year we have reduced the cost per day per child to sixty-five cents, and I am pleased to say we hope for a yet further reduction."

"But," warned the speaker, "if we close the Home we must have a receiving home for the children. My suggestion is that we procure a refined couple with a good home and accommodation for one or two twelve children and pay them the same rate per day per child as the boarding home."

Following further discussion, Reeve Davis moved that the Department be consulted as to the advisability of moving the office of the Children's Aid to the vacant rooms in the Home.

The reading of the reports of the Finance Committee and the County Coroner Inspector for the county were read and adopted by council.

Notice of bylaws to appoint auditors and the assessing of the county roads in some sections, were read at the conclusion of the afternoon session.

WARDEN AND WIFE GIVEN SILVER AT WARDEN'S NIGHT

Wesley Gray Entertains Members of County Council

GUESTS PRESENT

Dr. Welsh and E. V. Illsey Special Speakers at Banquet

Members of the Hastings County Council cropped their official mien and temporarily forgot the important municipal business of the day when they, in conjunction with several visitors, gave a most rendered a complimentary banquet by Warden Wesley Gray at the Belvidere Hotel last night.

Not to be outdone, however, councillors not only showed their appreciation of the splendid evening's entertainment but of the efficient service given by the Warden during his tenure of office by presenting the Warden and Mrs. Gray with a beautiful silver tea service and cabinet of silver through on behalf of County Treasurer James Haggerty and Reeves Good, Campbell and Wills of Belleville.

Toastmaster Thank Members

Following the address read by Mr. Haggerty, Mr. Wills, very pertinently speechless in the element of surprise, thanked the committee for the speech, told his council that he appreciated their co-operation and extended him during the past year. "I was more than pleased to work with the splendid group of men," he said, "and more so because of the fact that we are living in Ontario." Loud cheers greeted the Warden's speech but louder cries prevailed when he rose to express her appreciation. "For what is a good Warden now days through the dining room as Mrs. Gray spoke, "if he doesn't know his county council work but I think I know a little about township matters." Mrs. Gray said she expressed her appreciation of the beautiful gifts and assured everyone present of a warm welcome should they visit her home.

Including among the guests of honor at the banquet were many members of the staff of the county offices, members of the family of the warden, several ex-county council members, Dr. Harold Wright, K.C., and Mr. E. V. Illsey, manager of the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, who were the guest speakers.

The spacious dining rooms of the Belvidere Hotel rang with the laughter and witticisms of a county council let out to play". Good fellowship was the order of municipal affairs. Bylaws and motions were temporarily forgotten as the councillors and their wives and families partook of the delicious repast.

Toast to Warden

Reeve John Churcher, Reeve of Belleville, was the host to the Warden expressed on behalf of the members of the council appreciation of the banquet tendered them. In a fine eulogy to the Warden Orr, the speaker pointed out that the present fine financial condition of the county was due in no small way to the efforts of the Warden. "I extend to you, Mr. Warden, and to the reeves of the northern townships," he said "congratulations. You, sir, have been one of the leading instruments through which we have reached our present fine status."

Mr. R. V. Illsey in proposing the toast to the province commended the government on the fine record in reducing of the county debentures during the term of the province, the speaker pointed out that Ontario pledges to the British throughout cannot be too proudly chronicled. Here we have law, order and justice," said the speaker, "and liberty," said the speaker, "doesn't mean that we can go on in any manner we please. Let us think of the responsibilities that we have in connection with the sense of trusteeship, the speaker declared that we must not be pulled away from our relations with the crown and the British. "A great surge of public feeling swept through the provinces with the closing of governments house," he said.

Slow to Change

"We in Canada are slow to change," he said. "In Europe we have seen forms let loose that endanger principles. We must remember what this toast implies. It is an acknowledgment of fealty and loyalty to those things that we cherish."

Responding to the toast to the Province, Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P., said that "we should be proud of the men who by their united efforts contributed the splendid gift to Canada and the British Empire, and taught us the principles of liberty, ambition and foresight and accomplish great things. They went out into new homes and set up communities, a system of government, churches and British principles."

"We, as citizens and councillors," said the speaker, "have a duty to uphold these traditions. And we should be proud, indeed, that we have a Premier in Canada, who has visited with His Majesty the King during the Coronation representing you and me."

Speaks in Government

"In these days," said Dr. Welsh, "when the European dictator tells various sorts of 'isms', we should be proud to know that we live in a free country, and one of the finest countries of the world for our boys and girls are free to follow any vocation, all of which is made possible through the men who have gone before us."

Dr. Welsh concluded the speaker, "is that today only fifty percent of the population of this country is British. What is taking place? Foreigners are coming in places taking responsible positions. This needs serious thought. I am sure that every boy and girl of British descent will be in the minority."

"I have faith in our government, and I do not feel that we will ever have a change in the party system. It is one of the finest in the world and is characteristic of the true British principles it represents."

Dr. Welsh congratulated Hastings County Council on its new financial standing in its dealing with momentous questions of the municipal day. The greatest credit of the province today is its children, the speaker said in conclusion. "It is your duty and my duty to see that those principles you fight for are handed down to them, so they will be able to make this country a fine place in which to live."

Mayor R. D. Arnott of Belleville, C. A. Payne, K.C. and Chas. Cameron K.C., M.P., were unable to be present through previous engagements.

County Clerk Chairman Chairman Orde Denyes, County Clerk, filling the chairman's office in a capable and efficient manner, inaugurating the various addresses as Mr. Denyes added a fine touch of humor in his brief speeches in which he extended a fine tribute to the county, who were present, briefly addressed the gathering. Other members of the council called upon for impromptu speeches, added to the entertainment and remainder of those present. Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Bedford presided at the piano while Mr. Illsey led the community sing-song.

The address read by Mr. Jeans Haggerty to Mr. Warden Gray follows: "Your Honor, the Warden, Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

"The occasion of our meeting here tonight is to pay tribute to Mr. Wesley Gray, Reeve of the township of Thurlow, who has filled the office of Warden in the County of Hastings during the year 1937.

"Of his work in this office, we need say little. Then could be no better testimony to his ability than the fact that he has held office in the County Council for several years, and he has worked his way up the ladder of success to the high and responsible position from which he now retires. His fellow councillors and officials have found him energetic, able, and conscientious in all his duties in connection with his office.

"During his term of office, no one has been more closely associated with him than the officials of the county. He has always cooperated with the county council officials, and we ask you to accept our sincere congratulations for prosperity, peace and happiness today and in the years to come, and we ask you to accept, in token of the highest honor which it is in our power to confer, this silver service from the members of the County Council.

"We hope, Mr. and Mrs. Gray, that you may live long to enjoy these small remembrances that come to you with the warmest felicitations of the 1937 County Council."

WELCOME TO FRENCH MINISTER

Canada, has given to the new French envoy Count Robert de Dampierre a real welcome. He might have come at other times of the year but arriving in winter is perhaps will be brought into the keenest appreciation of the lives of the heroic Frenchmen who settled in Quebec and there built up the beginnings of a Gallic race which has played no small part in the direction of the destiny of this continent. It must be of peculiar interest to him to land in a world which extends from the Atlantic to the Pacific and there to find there relatives of those friends, the British and the French peoples, united under one Government at Ottawa and to meet the descendants of those French settlers whose names will never die in Canadian history and song; and Champlain, the Frenchman who built up Quebec. He has come to the land which owes a great deal to that noted French explorer Jacques Cartier. His heart must warm as he thinks of those who left old France for New France and there created one of the great sections of Canada.

In coming to Canada he comes to a country which is predominantly British, and a land British through and through is friendly to the land of the tricolor and the fleur de lis. His way is certainly set in pleasant places in a new world with some of the old and enough of the present to be a happy land.

Count de Dampierre like the people of Quebec represents a modern democratic France but comes of the nobility which were powerful long before the Revolution of 1789. Many descendants of the French Canadians came to Canada before Revolutionary days. There must be that added bond of sympathy. Then too he as minister finds himself next to a land which bears the name of Lafayette, namely the United States, which remembers the assistance which La Belle France gave the United States one hundred and twenty five years ago.

The accord of Britain and France in these days though their internal political systems are different, and while both possess the democratic form, the democratic nature of both and the fact that main racial streams, British and French, cannot fail to impress the distinguished newcomer. While trade with France is one of the chief businesses of a minister, yet the true spirit of understanding plays a great part and it will be interesting to him to see how the Anglo-French goodwill is repeated in the New World in Anglo-French-Canadian goodwill and understanding.

ELECTION COMMENTS

With the usual rapidity quiet has settled upon the municipal front after a week's election campaign. So intense were the proceedings on Monday that the people must have used up all their energy. Today the elections are a thing of the past.

Electors of Belleville are firm for early voting. Toronto electors have expressed preference for January 1st even though conditions there are not different from what they are in Belleville. Here there is no difficulty in getting to polls. In Toronto voters may be many miles from polls, this necessitating a change of the hours of voting to accommodate them. Hence to many January first seems the logical date because it is a holiday. In spite of the vote in Toronto there is a feeling in some quarters that early April is the preferred date and the large vote polled in advance of that of former years is given as proof of the advantages of the first Monday in December for elections.

But in Belleville the people want to celebrate New Year's as a holiday and they do not care to have politics municipal mixed up with the cranberries, turkey, goose, plum pudding or Christmas cake. Business men and others perform their civic duties on the first Monday of December, well, for the date has given general satisfaction. The very fact that there are no objections is proof of the public's content with the present dates of nomination and election.

It is foolish to try to live on past experience. It is a very dangerous, if not fatal habit to judge ourselves by safe because of something that we felt or did twenty years ago.—Spurgeon.

It may serve as a comfort to us in all our calamities and afflictions, that he who loses anything and gets wisdom by it, is a gainer by the loss.—L'Estrange.

Every man's experience of today, is that he was a fool yesterday and the day before yesterday. Tomorrow, he will most likely be of exactly the same opinion.—Mackay.

INHERITORS

Lone visionaries learn that man is blind,
For they who brandish truth's keen scimitar
Must find it magnetized toward their lode-star
Beyond the range of any earth-blurred mind.
To whet its blade they must forever grind
The hone of ignorance, and feint and spar
With jealousy, ubiquitous jaguar,
That haunts llanned soul-wastes of mankind,
They know that great Galileo was stoned;
Columbus hurled in prison; Jeanne d'Arc burned;
Spinoza martyred; Jesus crucified;
Yet heirs to that Excalibur disowned
By lesser men will flaunt the lance thus spurned
Which mirrors light from wounds Love glorified.

BICKEY MOUSE HAS BEEN BANNED IN JUGO-SLAVIA because Walt Disney's cunning creation was enacting a story in which a plot was maturing to upset the governing head of the mythical country in which the mythical Mickey Mouse was a character. The rulers that be considered that Mickey might be putting bad notions into the head of the common people which might develop into a revolution or sumpin.

A MAN WAS MURDERED IN CENTRAL PARK, NEW YORK CITY, as he was taking a short cut through the park one evening recently on his homeward way. The murderers got three dollars and a gold watch. Reconstruction of the crime showed that the murderers had hidden in the shadow of the monument to the dog Balto, immortalized for his part in taking life-saving serum through many miles of Alaska winter. Apparently Central Park's 840 acres is very inadequately policed.

EMIL LUDWIG, WHO HAS WRITTEN THE STORY OF NAPOLEON as none other has ever approached the subject, and word-picture artist who has carried here awhile, left their impression for good or evil on the world and passed on, has just finished writing the life of Franklyn Delano Roosevelt, present president of those United States. Men like biographies but living must fall flat, for however interesting the story is it can only be the first volume, the final volume to come after the subject has joined the immortals, or otherwise. The reader might be justified in the first, and then again there might be no occasion to print a final volume.

SEVEN HUNDRED AND EIGHT THOUSAND PEOPLE HAVE BOUGHT A BOOK which purports to tell them "How to Win Friends and Influence People." It hardly seems possible that that many people need to know how to be likeable. Wilcox, said that the best way to make friends was to "cultivate the art of being kind." When folks, nearly a million of them, pay three dollars and more for a book that is supposed to teach how to make friends, it kinda looks as if there were a mighty lot of friendless folk in this ere world of ours. The guy who wrote the book certainly learned how to influence people to buy his book. It should be superfluous to add that the author in question believes in paid publicity in the advertising columns of daily newspapers and he uses plenty of it. In fact he used page ads. In New York daily newspapers to tell the story of the phenomenal success of his book.

QUACK! QUACK!

"Yes" said the amateur sportsman, "I've had some strange experiences in my time, but none queerer than the one I had when I went wild-duck shooting in the north."

"Go on," breathed his admiring audience.

"Well, it was the coldest day I've ever struck. I came in sight of a huge lake, entirely frozen over. On its surface were thousands of wild ducks, every one with its feet frozen into the ice. I took a shot at one—and blow me if the whole lot didn't fly up into the air in a body and take the lake with them!"

Adj. W. D. Fellowes is about to open a private bank in this city which will be located in the Noxworthy Block on Pinnacle Street with Mr. Herbert Greaves as manager. The latter is well known to business men in this city and has had a wide experience in the banking business. He will, no doubt, draw a fair patronage in the new institution.

The mild weather has completely spoiled the ice in the bay and the water is open in many places.

Yesterday afternoon a boy named Morrison, broke through the ice in the harbor and was rescued by John Weir, who happened to be near by at the time he broke through the ice. He went in a boat to the boy's assistance.

That Body of Yours

ARTHRITIS MAY OCCUR LONG AFTER INFECTED TEETH AND TONSILS HAVE BEEN REMOVED

One of the little jokes about the medical profession that was popular five or six years ago was, "The patient has had all his teeth removed but he still has his rheumatism (arthritis)."

That infected teeth and tonsils are responsible for a great many cases of arthritis is known to all physicians but what is not known to many readers is that sometimes the infected teeth or tonsils have been removed there is still deposited in certain parts of the body—particularly in the large joints—much of the poison from these removed teeth and tonsils.

As mentioned before, the removal of teeth and tonsils is like the closing of a factory—one needs to keep on hand but much manufactured goods are on the shelves.

Until this poison is removed from the system, it can be carried by the blood to other parts of the body and set up the symptoms of arthritis. Thus for the past few years one of the popular treatments for rheumatism has been level teaspoonfuls of Epsom salts every morning for one week in each month, with the thought of gradually but surely removing these poisons from the large intestine.

So well is the fact known that the large intestine is holding this poison, that in looking for the cause of rheumatism, physicians finding no infection or further infection in teeth and tonsils turn next to the large intestine.

Prof. M. R. Rehfuss, Philadelphia, who has done so much work in gastroenterology—stomach and intestinal—and in Review of Gastroenterology, "There are organisms in the bowel and in the gall bladder that are just as capable of causing arthritis as are the organisms from an infected tooth or tonsil.

"The thought then is that while there are other causes of rheumatism and arthritis aside from infection, nevertheless infection is the most frequent cause and infection is found in teeth and tonsils and in the bowel and gall bladder. When infection of teeth and tonsils has been removed much of the poisonous material has been removed is in the large intestine and gall bladder from which organs blood carries these poisons to other parts and causes arthritis.

Refreshment Costs

Our employment figures have not yet reached the standing of 1929, but in Ontario our expenditure for refreshment per person has just about touched the 1929 standard.

During the past year we consumed in this province over $44,000,000 worth of drink, and that is more than a million dollars for every week of the year.

Add to that $12,000,000 dollars to pay the tax rate for the city of Toronto, and you have a total of $56,000,000 dollars to pay the bar bill used annually in the province.

We have no way of knowing how much the beer and liquor bill used to be in the days of the open bar, but we are moved to doubt if it was ever as high as this mark.

The fact that our government gets a revenue of $9,000,000 from a year does not mean much. We are spending more than we can afford to spend, and we are being disciplined in the way the Social Control" should operate in the Liquor Control Board. We can find nothing at all about which to get jubilant upon learning that people are spending $56,000,000 a year in drink account.—Peterborough Examiner.

The Pedestrian's Rights

According to law, the pedestrian has the rights on street and highway. In vein of the danger involved he is, however, not inclined to protect these rights in the event of the argument go by default.

A Toronto motorman last fell into an hospital for a day to take a rest well. He was almost killed by a motorist. Motorists are dangerous and is now strongly convinced of the necessity of keeping his eyes on the lot of pedestrians along our highways.

He will find plenty of sympathizers among those who are forced daily to take their life in their hands—or in their feet—when collected to walk along highways throughout the province. At school closing time one sees numbers of little children hugging the edge of the pavement as they make their way home. One sees older folk apparently not glancing about as they try to keep clear of speeding motorists who leave in their wake a cloud of dust or a disconcerting rush of wind.

The daily toll upon our highways is sufficient evidence that the country badly needs footpaths for pedestrians. Walking had the use of the gods long before automobiles were thought of and it is a rank injustice that they should now be denied the right to safe walking. Those who control the cars are obliged to use the highways and take to the climb and no matter how careful they may be, accidents continue to happen. Few of the innocent victims are protected from motorists could well be expected. Ten highways throughout the province instead of being diverted into channels that have no connection with highway privileges. The motorists, of course, has his point of view and the pedestrian has his own way of looking at things. Both have their rights and these should be respected. That is only fair.

Dogs of the North

Many dog owners of the North must be as heartless as the wretch who turned loose his dog to starve as out in the woods to starve when an old-fashioned took the home's place. While professional murders have been driving teams of husky dogs in races for international fame over the snowy tundra, hundreds of dogs have been abandoned in the frontier settlements of the far North.

Most of the famous long-distance dog racers of the Canadian northland make their homes in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and they feed their fleet canines on fish—the cheapest and most choice dietary morsels. Sledge dogs such as these live royally. But the Eskimo dog, the native animal of Canada, starving huskies constitute a problem. Some years ago an act the Pas have been shooting dozens of them in order to protect life and property. Dogs that were once considered to be worth their weight in gold are now worthless.

A few years ago the North struck a new mining and railroad boom, and there was a corresponding demand. Strong pups eight or nine months old and fattening for the spring sale were frequently sold for as much as a hundred dollars apiece; and the Canadian National Railway construction organization at one time had scores of such dogs in constant use.

Then were not the fleet spoked cross breed for sledge races, but they were known as the best in the world. They were born and bred to haul pay loads, and the breed swarmed with the coming of summer the dog population at the Pas and other northern Canadian settlements frequently exceeded the number of people there, and the summer nights were made hideous with the eerie call from countless throats.

The advent of the Hudson Bay, Pitn Pion and Lake Athabaska railroads is freighting extremely hard. Horses were introduced for heavy work in some parts of the country that lies beyond the end of steel, and airplanes in the prairie provinces and the north are essential.

With horses, trains and airplanes in the limelight, the husky was left out in the cold. If he is fast enough to haul heavy loads harness he is lucky, and much more fortunate than the thousands of blind wild dogs who actually starving. If they are a menace is it their fault?—Our Dumb Animals.

Offensive Broadcasts

George H. Payne, federal communications commissioner of the United States, took occasion, at Washington, to express concurrence in the quality of radio programs in that country and to give notice that broadcasters would have to be adopted to effect an improvement unless the radio people undertook the task voluntarily.

Mr. Payne said the average program of the broadcasters is addressed to an intelligent audience. He is child of the movies. In his opinion, it is important that adult intelligence should not be underestimation. It should not be subjected to the level of the mental capacity of children. Those who seem to be addicted to entertainment of a lower order should not be allowed to pass in the millions but overlooks entirely the refinements of the general welfare.

There will be general agreement with Mr. Payne in the view that something ought to be done about the U.S. programs. It is a shame to have to travel forth the ramifications of crime. The air is terrifying, depicting the sordid details of many more shocking, brutal and every other type of underworld activity. If the federal authority is going to compel the eradication of that kind of program, it will get the support of the general welfare. Many of the programs now here would be the full round primary education in the technique of crime and of a kind to make the most resistant mentality in a dangerous direction.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Thoughtless Spelling

It is the custom of many people, otherwise discriminating in the use of words, to spell the term Christmas to Xmas. This is particularly noticeable at this season because the commercial world uses considerable advertising. The contracted form of the word is offensive to a large portion of the population for the reason that it obscures the name of the Lord Christ. It is not a matter of incorrect English but one of reverence.

W. W. Wallace, principal of University College, Toronto, and professor of English was asked his opinion on the subject, and he said he would never use the word Xmas. He had no specific reason for his attitude, but said it just didn't seem right. Sir Charles G. D. Roberts, the well-known author, said the elimination of the use of the abbreviated word, like omitting the h in honour, was inadvertently.

It would seem that worthwhile effort is necessary to keep alive in the orthodox spelling of Christmas.

The majority of those who write to the advertisement do so without giving the matter any thought whatever. It is just a case of carelessness in habits that is responsible for many detestable practices. The great deficiency in civilization is that there are few people who think, either with regard to the trifles or the big things in life.—Barrie Canadian Observer.

Horse's Sagacity

Sir John Lawrence, viceroy of India in 1864, was fond of relating the following story about his Arab horse, "Chanda." He was galloping across country one day, and riding through the intense blackness of the Indian night, when suddenly Chanda came to a dead stop, nearly tossing the rider over his head. All Lawrence's attempts to spur him on were of no avail; Chanda stood still. Then, after backing up some distance and taking a wide circle round the spot, he began to continue in the former direction.

Lawrence was considerably puzzled by this unusual behavior on the part of Chanda, but as the next day he managed to make his way back to the scene of the incident. There he found that he had ridden at full gallop right up to the edge of a deserted dry well or cistern. In India, where water is scarce, these tanks are not uncommon. This particular one was about thirty feet deep and was without doubt one which would have meant certain death for that horse and rider.

Lawrence never forgot his mistake in appreciation of his horse's wards, in pointing out the best qualities of a horse, he would invariably say the full round primary eye which, able to perceive objects invisible, also to see the straight sight of the yawning chasm immediately below him in the darkness of that memorable night. One day, as he was visiting in the house of an Arab chief, Lawrence paused to admire a splendid painting of a horse. "Ah, sir, I've seen one like that," he exclaimed, "Chanda saved my life."—Our Dumb Animals.

Our Friend the Crow

Crows have been much in the public appeared, published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, entitled "The Crow," this exercise urgency Conservation Committee of New York, which is the body that is responsible for the destruction of a small amount of corn that is taken by crows, states that the crow should be one of the most valuable birds to any creature inclined to eat them. These birds destroy mice, moles, and consumption of them by crows or any other scavengers was, if anything beneficial. Where the ammunition makers assert that the shortage of ducks for hunters to kill is due more to crows than to droughts and drainage put together and that the crow is the duck's worst enemy and that the crow destroys more ducks than the combined hunters of Canada and the United States, one can only smile at such ridiculous and absurd statements.—Our Dumb Animals.

100 MILES PER HOUR

How long does it take to eat a meal?

Approximately 75 to 125 miles if you use flying, according to Clarence Irvin, Adams who flies regularly between New York and Chicago for American Airlines. She says 100 miles of food represents from 30 to 35 minutes in the air, about the average time the passenger devote to dinner.

Several girls flying out of Newark evolved this menu: Soup or Bouillon, 35 miles; salad, 30 miles; choice of meat or fish, 50 miles; 75 miles; total 190 miles

Miss Ladue said the longest meal on record covered more than 400 miles and was planned and executed by a passenger who was very slow with the courses between Chicago and New York.

"We were just over Elmira, N.Y. when he finished the last of the dessert and called me again. Handing me his map he asked me to check our position. I did so and he asked me to sign it. He explained a friend had given him the flight and was bragging about a meal 375 miles long. This meal, he estimated, would cover about 500 miles and would stop further bragging by his pal."

War Is Beautiful?

War, it would now appear, is not the destroyer but rather the creator of rich colour and delightful designs. As high priest of this new religion Lieut.-Colonel Lindbergh, initiated son.of Il Duce, has composed a book hymning the tranquil splendour of his Ethiopian "holiday war."

War, he writes, "is the quintessence of beauty," and a cavalry column of rich coloured uniforms of nodding rose as the bombs fell in the midst." No less fervently does the pilot of a bombing plane describe air forms which outwit the eye. "Flying high above the Italian airplanes demolished churches and built up a beautiful," exclaims the aviator, "because it creates new architectural forms." Even the machine-gun of an airplane, the spiral smoke of bursting shells, the ruin that completes the beauty of a flowery meadow with the panoramic orchestra—machine-gun fire."

How lovelier, indeed, than seasoned timber are the new houses to blood crimsoned upon the flesh of women and children preserved by shrapnel into arabesques of purest art! How beautiful, in truth, are the limbs of babies from children bodies by bombs dropped from airplanes! How beautiful is war! And He brother, fascism.—Chicago Daily News.

COOKING IN ICE

Radio short waves may be used for cooking food in ice. This fact, which a physicists was demonstrated in a lecture given recently in Vienna by Professor Kausch, well known Austrian physicists.

In a large basin of water, reinforced with certain ingredients which it would remain liquid, the professor plunged a potato which, by means of a button was pressed, and in a few minutes the fish were dead and completely cooked. The water still at freezing point.

Professor Kausch cooked a raw beefsteak into water and from into a cake of ice. When the beefsteak was taken it turned out, the beefsteak was cooked to a turnover the block of ice, Four Minutes.

HOW TO SAY IT

English, Canadians and Americans all speak the same language, it is said, but what do you think of the following words from children of differences of speech. Americans call Canadians "Chinks" and Canadians call them "Yanks" and fall, when Englishmen say post, biscuit and bath. Canadians say vest when English people say waistcoat. English people say waistcoat. English people say wireless; and to them a gramophone is a talking machine. To a streetcar is a tram, while to the American it is a trolley car and a railway to the Englishman is a stick. It's very odd, isn't it? And the question is, who is speaking English?

W. L. ANDERSON NAMED PRESIDENT WELFARE CLUB

Shirley Community Club Holds Ladies' Night And Annual Meeting

Stirling—The Christmas spirit and feeling of general goodwill and conviviality so dear to the hearts of the citizens of the thriving Community Service Hall on Tuesday evening as the members of the Stirling Community Welfare Club entertained their annual meeting and ladies' night to provide one of the most entertaining programs presented in the village for some time. Over one hundred guests were present and thoroughly enjoyed the sumptuous dinner provided by the ladies of the Stitching Branch of the Women's Institute and a most unusual program made possible by a group of visiting artists from Trenton and Belleville. The official installation of officers for the coming year under the direction of past president R. W. Babington, K.C., was the first of the programs.

The decorative scheme of the hall, in keeping with the coming holiday, was carefully arranged by the decorating committee composed of Wm. Donnelly and Arthur Duncan and centred upon a large colorful streamer bearing Christmas Greetings to all guests. Dancing to the strains of two pieces from Trenton's well known three piece orchestra and reaching twenty feet in length. Many comments on the decoration were expressed regarding this unusual arrangement.

As the guests gathered the meeting opened with the singing of "O Canada" followed by Grace. President G. N. Baker presided over the meeting in his usual capable manner and T. W. Holmes acted as Sergeant-at-Arms, introducing orderly singing was directed by Mr. Duncan Cowan of Trenton with Mrs. Wesley Hamilton as accompanist at the piano.

Following the usual toast to the King proposed by Mr. Baker welcoming the large number of guests in a brief address and expressing the hope that the departure from custom by the program committee in arranging the program would be appreciated.

Talented Juvenile Dancers

One of the main features of the evening was several dancing numbers rendered by a group of talented juvenile dancers from Belleville pupils of Miss Mary Forster, dancing instructor. These children ranging in age from seven to nine years displayed remarkable talent and training in the intricacies of various types of dancing. The difficult routine through which they went in their faultless fashion was greatly enjoyed by all and reflected very favorably upon the efforts of the teacher who directs their training. Ruth Hamilton's remarkable acrobatic dancer displayed unbelievable ability for her tender years. Madelyn Watson, the child wonder, amazed the audience with a difficult routine in tap dancing and Mary Lou's dance, a specialty number, observed by Joan Foster also received hearty applause. Interspersed with clever comedy pantomime dances and humorous stories by Duncan Cowan, well known artist of Trenton, this group of youngsters offered a most enjoyable program. Another number which was very pleasing was a laser display with Misses Forster and Hamilton each playing splendid solos in co-ordination in a military tap dance.

Duncan Cowan of Toronto who is well known in this part of the province as an entertaining artist displayed his usual versatility in offering songs, stories and recitations.

With the entertainment part of the program completed President G. N. Baker called the gathering to order and Mr. R. H. Tompkins, Convener of the nominating committee presented his report which was duly adopted. Mr. Baker in responding to the appointment expressed appreciation for the co-operation given him by the members of the various committees and each individual member of the organization during his term of office.

As a result of the acceptance of the slate of officers presented by the nominating committee the following gentlemen will direct the activities of the organization for the coming year:

President—Mr. W. L. Anderson.
Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. George Bailey
Secretary—Mr. R. K. Rollin.
Treasurer—Mr. J. O'Donnell

Committees

Program Committee — H. R. Tompkins, Convener; John Bateman, R. C. Martin, T. W. Holmes, George Bailey.

Membership Committee—Mr. M. Hick, Convener; J. Morrison, R. Sales, Milton Bird and Thos. Crannon.

Social Committee—C. E. Macklin, Convener; J. R. Belshaw and W. Wright.

Reception Committee—C. F. Walt, Convener and J. R. Thompson.

Song Leader—R. A. Patterson.

Sergeant-at-arms—C. R. Beddell.

Decorating Committee—A. Duncan, Convener; Wm. Donnelly, A. E. Strickland.

Visiting and Welfare Committee—T. W. Holmes, Chairman, all Past Presidents and Resident Clergy of the village.

The installation of the new president was conducted by past president H. W. Mattledoin and after accepting the honored position Mr. Anderson expressed his appreciation and asked for future co-operation on the part of all members.

The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" marked the climax to one of the finest programs presented in the history of the club. The retiring program committee is to be highly commended for the calibre of the talent secured for this one of the most important meeting of the club year.

Rev. W. J. Scott Addresses St. Paul's Young People

Rev. W. J. Scott was the speaker of the evening at St. Paul's Y. P. U. on Monday evening and delivered an inspiring address on the subject "The Challenge of Youth to Christ."

Miss Mary Hollis President of the organization presided over the meeting which opened with the singing of a group of well known Christmas Carols. The Scripture lesson selected was the story of Christmas and was read responsively followed by the Lord's Prayer. Miss Nina Carlisle offered a pleasing soprano solo accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Ernest Hollis. Following the business part of the meeting the secretary's report of the last regular meeting was presented.

Speaking on the energy displayed in Christ crusade which were founded upon youth, Rev. W. J. Scott reviewed briefly Morrison, R. Sales, Milton Bird and Thos. Crannon. the early crusades which began in the 11th century. Two nearly 200 years these crusades were carried out with the youth of that day playing a major part. He referred to a crusade started and organized for children founded by a French boy friend with enthusiasm to go to the Holy Land. In 1914 came the great moral shaking the entire foundation of civilization. These years when the major nations of the entire world were thrown into conflict were marked by the uprising of youth in defence of liberty. The youth of all lands responded with some high ideals. Present day science has brought the ends of the earth much nearer and upon the shoulders of present day youth falls the responsibility of binding the world together in Christian brotherhood which is the only security of world peace.

This part of the meeting was climaxed with the use of a Christmas Prayer by Miss Mirpah Benedict. During the social period which followed a Bible Contest was directed by Mrs. Nora Westcott. The attendance prize for the evening revealed a good number of members present.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same. Run the risk of an operation. Any itching, sore ness or painful passage of stool, nature's warning, and proper treatment should be given at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McCann Co. Drug Store, Trenton, age of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, inflamed parts. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Ingenious Toys in Bewildering Variety Form a Tempting Array on Counters of Stores

Dolls That Drink And Racing Autos Make Appeal to Shoppers

GAMES POPULAR

New Forms of Games Have Not Displaced Old Types Altogether

Toylands of the various shops in the city have long been ready for the first of the lolly shoppers who even now are engaged in the annual task of selecting the proper gifts for the juvenile population.

And never has the presentation been more varied, offered in such glittering profusion and appeal.

A preview of what will be carried in Santa Claus' pack this year observed by a casual stroll through the aisles of local stores, reveals that the one central idea of all toymakers has been to incorporate in miniature the design of today's adult living. From Germany, England, France, Japan and the United States and from the shops of the United States have come the latest in new and old modern ideas applied to the business of playing and to keep tiny fingers and those of the not so tiny occupied during hours of leisure.

"We have never been able to offer such value for the money", it was stated by the manager of one of the city's biggest counters of toys. "Not since I've been in business has the variety been so good and the prices so low for such a product. This year there's the biggest and better than ever."

Speed and action has been the ruling guide, the cues for streamlining even the most commonplace articles, have all been worked out by the toymakers of the various countries, it is shown by the counters. Though there has also been a skilful blending of the old and new.

The principles of modern technique in transportation, architecture, housekeeping and other arts have all been introduced. The sciences have stepped out, been introduced in new forms for the amusement of mindet there are microscopes. There is aeroplane which will operate in full colors. There are movie-scopes and projection machines which will take the films.

"The trend this year is toward games, and despite the fact that hundreds of new ones have been placed on the market, many of the old timers are in great demand, and probably will be if the initial purchases of this year are a fair indication of the buying experienced in any criterion', it is further explained by the proprietor of one of the largest toy stores, manager whose efforts from now on will be devoted to keeping the counters in seemingly states of arrangement under the attack of busy little fingers directing the mysteries of the offerings.

Many Requests For Christmas Mail

We have received requests for cookinole boards and checkers, even though this is the season when all sorts of things are almost since I was a boy".

Fast action ice hockey, with camp stools for miniature, small sky scrapers equipped with tiny chevaliers and automobiles with drivers which miraculously circle and cross the table or floor, refusing to run off the edge of the former, and stopping and backing up when an object is encountered on the latter, are but a few of the modern toys which share the attraction with life size dolls barely distinguishable from real babies.

Novel Dolls

One new drinking doll can consume the contents of a glass of water while lying down in its soft cushions. Another can utter distinct baby-like cries when handled in a certain manner.

Despite wars and armament talk, the old time lead soldier is a distinct runner up with mechanical toys in the popularity of other toys, such as racing cars, sleek air liners and miniature aerial apparatus. Trucks, tanks, cannon, field pieces, Red Cross ambulances are offered in profusion. Even forts only a small part of the choice of the public.

This year's Christmas choice will be a bewilderingly wide in variety, its complexity and Santa's pack for Belleville will be a heavy and bulging one, it has not only been predicted by local store owners, but has so far been noticed.

Weddings

LOFT—ARGENT

Shannonville, (Special) — The Trinity Church Rectory, Shannonville, on Monday, December 6, 1937, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Evelyn Hennell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Argent of Belleville, became the bride of Wilbert Diamond Loft, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Loft.

The bride was very pretty in a dress of blue crepe with black accessories and was attended by Miss Clara Hines of Belleville, while Ross Willard Murphy of Point Anne, acted as best man.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. A. E. Pepper.

The happy couple will reside in Point Anne where Mr. Loft is employed.

MCLVILLE—WRIGHT

The home of Mrs. Ella Wilson Street, was the scene of a pretty wedding when Ella Wright, daughter of Mrs. Ella Wilson Wright became the bride of David Melville McLville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Sharpe at eight p.m. They will reside in Belleville.

A becoming coiffure, she knows, is vital to beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

Coiffures may be quaint or sophisticated; you can take your choice. The kind of a girl you are and the kind of clothes you wear determine the proper hairdress. Yes, Annabelle, you must also consider your features. That's taken for granted.

The modest violet who likes to appear demure looks well with ringlets. If she has her curls bandied with a ribbon, she'll still more in character. The dashing type who loves long lines and plenty of make-up will do well by herself if she selects a smooth-crowned coiffure set off by coils of curls.

The fluffy girl who loves ruffles should not dispense with finger wave. It suits her type; so does the undecided forehead fringe.

Gooseflesh on the shoulder blades worry some females. This condition is sometimes brought about by the friction of the bones that disturbs the delicate cutaneous surface.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

First "Foolish Sentimentality" Gone

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married about twelve years, and so far have been very happy, although we have outgrown the first foolish sentimentality, and now take our love as a matter of course. What worries me is that we seem to be drifting away from each other, as far as interests are concerned. I seem to be more and more engrossed in business affairs, and often am kept away from home for days at a time. My wife has her club and church affairs. We have no children.

I feel that something ought to be done about this, before it's too late. We are still under forty. What do you advise?

Max

I'm glad you've decided to take this situation in hand before it grows any worse, Max, and a lot of things rush to my mind that you might do. Any one of which would bring back that old "foolish sentimentality" which to your wife, at least, meant all that was sweetest in life. Perhaps reason your wife taken to clubs and church work that so much interest is that you've neglected her and she's ignorant, but too proud to say so.

Why not think back over the years and try to remember some of the little things you used to do before you began to take her devotion as a matter of course? Think about the theatre tickets, the candy and flowers you used to bring home, and the telegrams and long distance calls when you were away. Try it again, and good luck to you. Or, have you ever thought of adopting a child?

Shall She Write or Forget Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met him on a blind date about four months ago, and we went out together a couple of times, and then when he left he said he would write. Up to now I haven't heard from him. The couple we were with on those two dates broke up, so I haven't seen or heard from him since.

Do you think I should write to him or just forget him, which I hate to do because I think a lot of him, and would like to hear from you. He is 18 and I am 17.

Wondering

No, I wouldn't write to him, but just be patient and he may do so. You might get up a little party, and send him an invitation, so it wouldn't appear as if you were too anxious to see him again. You're still young, and ought to have a good time by going out with other boys and girls.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Gift to Future In-Laws

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper to give one's future-in-laws one's photograph for a Christmas gift? I have visited at her home quite frequently and feel as though I'd like to remember them with some gift this Christmas.

George

I'm most enthusiastic about your giving a Christmas gift to your in-laws-to-be. This would be an appropriate thing for you to do, not only because of the new relationship and but also, as you say, as a gesture of appreciation of their hospitality to you.

But I don't feel that sending them your photograph would be appropriate as a Christmas gift. I'd like to have you do this at some other time, when it can be done more casually. For a Christmas present there are may gifts that you choose to send that would make a personal bow to the family as a whole. For instance, a beautiful plant, or a fine bowl of fruits, or perhaps some of the new relationship fruits and a combination of candies and a variety of glasses of jams and jellies (this combination is most attractively packaged for Christmas gifts), or books or one or two subscriptions to "home" magazines.

Candy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I did a little favor for a friend and to show her appreciation she gave me a lovely box of candy. Should one always open the candy and "pass it around" immediately upon receipt of same? What a boy friend presents a gift with candy on it? Is the usual procedure? Should the girl at once open it?

S.

No matter who gives us a box of candy — girl or man — we should open it at once, and "pass it around." This spontaneously and delight at receiving such a pleasant gift, shows our enthusiasm for the giver, and shows too that we aren't a "hoarder".

"Regrets"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have received a card inviting us to a Saturday party and neither of us wish to go. We have never met the bride-to-be and we haven't seen the intended husband for about two years. We haven't the clothes to wear to it, and such a party, and we do not care to buy any. Please advise me what to do in this predicament! What kind of letter-paper should I use?

H.

On your best letter-paper (white double-sheeted or your monogram), write a little note to the mother of the bride-elect (if invitations were sent in her name), "regretting" the invitation. If possible, give a reason for your inability to come to the party. Your note might read:

Dear Mrs. Answer,

You were very kind to invite my husband and me to the bethrothal party for your daughter, on Saturday, the tenth of January, and we thank you very much for your hospitable invitation. We are so sorry that we are not able to accept your delightful invitation, but we are to be out-of-town over that week-end.

Please do give our friendliest regards to Jane and her fiance, and our best wishes for their happiness always. Greetings from us to you and your husband, and thank you again for your kind thought of us.

Most sincerely yours,
Mary Smith Brown.

Nightgowns Hard to Tell From Evening Frocks

Luxurious, Lace-Trimmed Garments Closely Resemble Formal Costumes in Materials, Lines and Even in the Colors Use d

By LISBETH

IT IS GETTING pretty difficult to tell a nightgown from an evening gown—if you come upon a nightie unexpectedly, and in his most glamorous moments. In fact, you could wear some of the latest sleeping ensembles to a party and no one would know you were not in formal clothes—except perhaps a "stylist" or a clerk from the lingerie department.

To prove this fact, look at the two charming young women pictured here. Believe it or not, they are feeling not nearly so comfortable in the boudoir (bedroom to you) history breathed. These are the sort of garments the luxury-loving female loves.

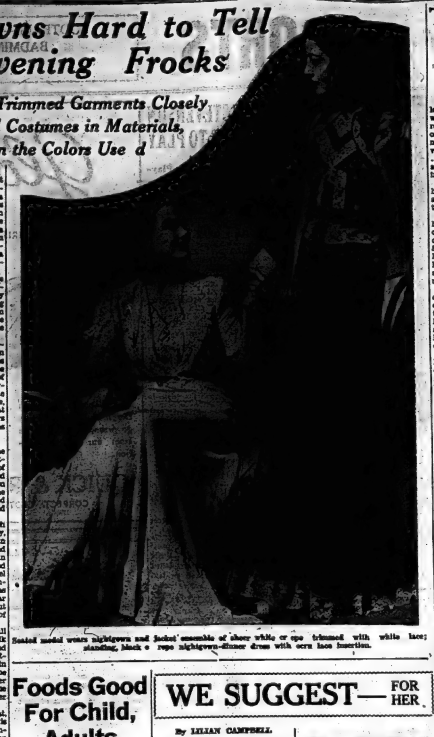
The girl seated on the chaise-longue is wearing a nightgown and jacket ensemble, which serves very well as a negligee. The gown, as well as the jacket, is of silver white crepe, lavishly trimmed with white lace. The little jacket is quite simply fastened with a single button at the waist, and cut with revers that are entirely of the lace, as is the front yoke of the gown.

Nightgown-Dinner Dress

The second gown is what the French designers call a nightgown-dinner dress. It is made of black crepe, and smartly trimmed with pale, ecru lace insertion about three inches wide. The deep collar, yoke treatment and the short puffed sleeves all lend the illusion of a frock.

Of course there are many much less elaborate and fashionable, warmer, gowns and pajamas in which to put mildly to sleep and to wrap her in when she wakes in the morning. There is the good old cotton flannel or cotton flannel nightgown or pajamas, for instance, in pretty colors and as thrifty looking as can be—a far cry indeed from those shown, but decidedly comforting to most of us.

Then there are, of course, all the in-between garments—silk and cotton, flannel and velvet and what have you. A printed velvet-een collar and cuffs on plain velveteen lounging pajamas in the print in hooped spots is a clever new one that would please the college age girl or her older sister or the smart young matron.



The formalized house coat, tilted slightly but not severely, is popular. It comes in novel flannels, slipper satins, moleen, rayon mixtures and striped taffetas. If you are looking for a gift for a friend this Christmas season, it will be worth your while to visit the negligee department.

Black, Color, for Skating

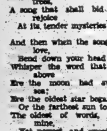
Nothing is smarter for the skating costume than black with colored accessories or details. If you are young enough to skate—and who isn't?—why not make yourself a clever skating costume and feel you cannot afford to buy one? Of course you can skate in your old skating outfit if you cannot, or do not want to buy a regular skating dress, but a new costume will make your skating, and skating saves your good clothes and keeps you warm and comfortable, no doubt about that.

* * *

For gift flannel house coats shown in several different stylings. It is reported that raspberry heads the color list.

Seated model wears nightgown and jacket ensemble of sheer white crepe trimmed with white lace; standing, black crepe nightgown-dinner dress with ecru lace insertion.

Poems That Live



A SONG

Bring me a sweet, low song of night

Before the moon is risen,
A song that tells of the stars' delight
Escaped from day's bright prison,
A song that croons with the cricket's voice,
That sleeps with the shadowed trees,
A song that shall bid my heart rejoice
At its tender mysteries!

And then when the song is ended, love,
Bend down your head unto me,
Whisper the word that was born above
Me the moon had swayed the sea:
Were the oldest star begun to shine
Or the farthest sun to born,
The oldest of words, O heart of mine,
Yet newest, and sweet to learn.

—Hildegarde HawThorne

Foods Good For Child, Adults

By MRS. MARY MOSTON

Menu Hint

Spaghetti Loaf Spinach
Celery and Apple Salad
Oatmeal Wafers
Milk for Children
Tea or Coffee for Adults

These receipts are taken from a book just received, "How to Feed Young Children in the Home," by Mary E Sweeny and Dorothy Curtis Buck or the Merrill Palmer school in Detroit. Required from nutritionists they obtain the recipes in that made the school meals so attractive to their young children. decided the school to compile this book, which contains menus interesting for the mother who has young children in her family and will save much work by serving foods both can enjoy.

Today's Recipes

SPAGHETTI LOAF—Made with irradiated evaporated milk: One half cup spaghetti or macaroni one quart boiling water, one-half teaspoon salt one cup irradiated evaporated milk, one-half cup grated cheese, one cup soft bread crumbs, two tablespoons minced green pepper, one tablespoon minced onion, one egg, one-half teaspoon salt. Break spaghetti into one-inch pieces and cook in boiling salted water until tender, 15 or 20 minutes. Drain and blanch under running cold water. Scald milk, add grated cheese and stir until blended. Add spaghetti, bread crumbs, parsley, green pepper, onion, slightly beaten egg and salt. Turn into a greased loaf pan and set in a pan containing one inch hot water. Bake in oven 350 degrees Fahrenheit until firm, about one hour. The egg whites may be beaten stiff and folded into mixture for a lighter loaf. Serve with tomato sauce. The loaf is richer if evaporated milk is used. It serves six.

OATMEAL WAFERS—One cup three tablespoons irradiated evaporated milk, one cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon vanilla, two teaspoons baking powder, two cups rolled oats, one-half teaspoon salt. You may make this recipe with two cups and no milk, if you prefer. Is makes about five dozen two-inch cookies. Beat eggs well, add milk, if used and sugar, and beat again. Add butter, vanilla, and mixed dry ingredients. Drop by teaspoon on greased and floured baking sheets, allowing plenty of room for each cooky to spread. Bake ten to fifteen minutes in a moderate oven (375 F.). Remove from pan while hot.

WE SUGGEST— FOR HER

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

GIVE HER perfume for Christmas. Short love is! For whether he is 16 or 80, every woman cherishes the subtlety of a fine perfume, and the charm it gives—a charm that seems to whisper, "Something lovely has just passed by."

One of the popular perfume makers combines three of his most attractive perfumes in an attractively quilted gift box. The three are called carnisse, gardenia and amber. Each is distinctive in its own right, and the three make an unusual combination.

Possibly the woman you wish to remember has distinctive tastes in perfumes. You can learn what they are and find scents to satisfy her. For long the idea has been to "suit your scent to your personality," but it is more modern to suit your perfume to your mood.

If you use a certain perfume for long you cease to be able to smell it yourself, says a representative of one Paris perfume house, and you may therefore use too much.

In that case change your perfumes with your dresses and the occasion for which you are dressing.

Three perfumes in gift box.

Tiny Baby Very Poor Sleeper

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

DEAR DR. MYERS: My problem is my five-months-old baby who won't sleep unless he is rocked, and then only 30 minutes or an hour in the day time, and not much longer at night... He sleeps very sound that 30 or 40 minutes. ....Took him to a specialist..... and examined for possibly congestions....

"I have let him cry, but he'll never hushes. He has cried two hours, and only stops when he is fed or taken up....."

My reply, in part. I see that you have had him in the care of a specialist. It may be well to ask this doctor to examine the baby's ears. Sometimes earache causes sleeplessness. I assume that the doctor has carefully checked on the diet, and that you have held to the minutes on feeding schedule.

With all such matters taken care of, treat the problem as one of habit. Waiting at regular intervals can easily grow into a habit. Then the rocking may create digestive disorder and stimulate the baby's nervous system, even while it seems to soothe him.

In order to succeed, you will have to let this youngster cry it out, and he may stick to it not only for two hours, but for five, six or more hours at a stretch. If you are going to take him up or rock him anyway after he cries an hour or two, take him up or rock him at once when he cries. Not when he has to let him cry and then pay him for it by letting him have what he wants. Beating such practice only strengthens the bad habit.

Has Mother the Problem?

Of course, I am not sure whether you have the time or desire to see this matter through. If you think you don't just go on doing as you have been doing, regretting as you do sometime for months and years indefinitely—for he is married, perhaps! But if you do think you have the spine, subordinate everything else to this problem. Be ready to hear him cry for three, four, five or more hours at a stretch without having even a temptation to rock him or take him up. It will be well to be near in order to make sure he does not, in his struggles, smother himself in the bedclothes.

Forget about the neighbors now. Think of their comfort several weeks hence. In case you feel unequal to the task, employ a trained nurse, or some other capable person, and go away from home for several nights, since the baby is bottle fed. What a world or difference it will be to you and the baby, at last the problem is solved; and it will be in less than a week, if you have the right kind of a backbone. Sorry I don't have backbones for distribution to mothers who need them.

Breathing Deeply Aids Whole Body

Lynn Bari
Not worried about her figure.

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty" WOMEN TODAY don't believe as they did back in the Victorian age, that fat and health are synonymous. And they know positively that fat does not make for beauty. Excess poundage is an unwelcome possession from the standpoint of figure loveliness.

It may sound queer to you, but a famous authority on weight reduction says that any woman who breathes properly can retain a youthful, slender figure for years on end. This authority claims that air is a tonic and stabilizer for the body. And that seems perfectly logical, for if a girl is trying to reduce she needs plenty of oxygen to help oxidize her tissues. The result, shallow breathing of the average woman doesn't supply nearly enough oxygen to circulate the tissues and purify the blood. Deep breathing purifies the blood and stimulates the tissues to carry away all poisonous wastes and oxidized fatty tissue. So if you wish to attain or preserve a youthful, slender figure, practice deep breathing exercises every day.

Make Breathing a Routine

Make a routine of your deep-breathing periods, so that you don't forget. It is a wise plan to practice deep-breathing the first thing upon arising in the morning. Practice it again at night, before retiring. And deep-breathing is also beneficial while you are walking.

In this case, to do the breathing properly a complete inhalation should be taken extending over two steps, and a complete exhalation extending over the same number of steps should follow. But if you want a regularly prescribed exercise to practice during your indoor routines, you'll find the following one most effective:

Stand erect, arms at the sides. Inhale slowly, counting one, two, three and four mentally, while you lift your head back gradually and move your arms slowly back and up.

Then stretch your throat as far as possible, until the back of your head touches the back of your neck on count four. Exhale slowly, next, counting to four as before, and return slowly to first position. This exercise should be repeated at least ten times. And you can take it from me, it will certainly do you a lot of good from both the beauty and health standpoint.

Where Do Spices Come From?

When you are seasoning things with spice, do you ever stop to think where they com from? You would have to go to—

Ceylon for the cinnamon for the rice pudding;

Zanzibar for the cloves for the delicately fresh pork;

Moluca Islands for nutmeg for the egg nog;

SWING IT, Sister! In this dress, the latest, in "swing" styles and the trim, athletic costume of the screen.

Anne is wearing a youthful ensemble of French blue taffeta with the skirt accordian pleated all round, the fullness being slightly pressed out.

The bolero is of transparent velvet, with elbow-length sleeves, which tops a frilly blouse of white mousseline.

A "beanie" cap of the velvet, sends dashes that finished in color, and white suede gloves, complete the outfit.

Tucks and pleats are growing in favor as the season advances. Many of the new dresses have tucked fronts. Sometimes the tucks are stitched all the way down, and sometimes not. Various treatments are used, but it always is a distinguished styling.

Style Whimsies

Oh, oh, boudoir caps are still in the limelight, say negligee buyers. The woman who breakfasts in bed, and the one who wants to keep her coiffure smooth and waved, are wearing them. Just another thing to add to the Christmas list as a possibility for the girl friend.

More delicate colors for spring is the forecast of Jacques Heim of Paris. He declares that gentle looking cottons inspired by the Pernis Color Card association suggests that gay colors will be popular in the spring. The soft pastel blue, and the extra cotis shades, are to continue to hold their place in the sun.

Cut a pumpkin into the shape of a basket, removing seeds, etc. The handle should be six inch and a half in width. Cut top of basket part into saw teeth, about three-quarters inch deep and half an inch wide. Cut teeth in handle half inch deep and a quarter inch wide. Fill basket with tangerines or oranges, red apples, large green grapes and bananas, letting some grapes hang from handle. Place basket on dinner table, or on sideboard with an orange-colored candle in plain glass holder on either side. Pumpkin may be used for pies later.

Tacklers Will Be Helpless In Canadian Football Final As Frozen Turf Disadvantage

Backfielders Will Run Risk on Kicks And Around Ends.

HANSON FEARED

Golden Ghost of West Will Cause Argo Tacklers Plenty of Worry

By ELMER DULMAGE

Toronto, Dec. 9 (AP) — There's nothing like cold weather for a hot backfielder. Keep him away from snow-drifts and a fast hooked-field ball-carrier will make the tacklers look ordinary or worse than that on occasion.

It's coming up cold for Saturday when Toronto Argonauts and the Winnipeg Blue Bombers clash in their dual for the Canadian football championship. The Varsity Stadium field probably will be frozen and the spectators will shiver and the backbacks will wish they had stayed home.

Summer Slatting of Sarnia ran the highest mark for backfield ace Ottawa in the last annual freezer. He merely touched off the spark that set going a series of long dashes over frozen turf. In the 1936 final Fritz Hanson led Winnipeg Rowers to victory over Hamilton with one long-sport galop that measured 78 yards.

So long! rumbaola of kicks and wide sweeps around the flanks will be events of paramount importance Saturday. If the mercury is 10 below, neither side will do any advance worrying. They both hope the cold spell to burn. If the ankle-clutchers do the worrying.

Tacklers Helpless

Only a year ago now Barnie's starry mate, Nick Kirby and Tony McCarthy, were being hailed as super-tacklers. On dry fields and wet they stopped everything. But on a frozen field, with the hard-as-rock Sarnia's fleet backs ran rings around them on the hard-topped turf.

At the moment there's talk they shout about are Wes Outler, Teddy Morris and Biff Noyes of Argos. The way they stopped Sarnia ball-carriers in the eastern semi-final on Saturday was something to see, but you could have seen it any Saturday this season in the games the Argonauts play.

Saturday they meet up with Hanson, fastest and most elusive of all Canadian backs, the Golden Ghost who runs them all ragged in the west and made a show of the intersectional final two years ago. And on a frozen field, Hanson starts with the edge.

Record 15,000 At Game

Barring no-good weather and snow, Canadian Rugby Union officials expected a crowd of 12,000 to 15,000 for the final game, a clash by two years.

Winnipeg, who arrived here Saturday morning from Ann Arbor where they were training this week, may not know until then whether Art Stevenson, their kicking halfback, is eligible for the game. The Argo president Bill Foulds is conducting a telegraph vote on Stevenson's eligibility.

The Winnipeg executive turned over to Foulds all papers concerning the case, claiming that as he moved from Winnipeg to Fort Garry to the University of Manitoba for the purpose of securing a medical degree, he does not come under the C. R. U.'s residence rule affecting United States players.

The rule, passed two years ago, makes it impossible for United States player to reside in Canada a year before he is eligible for Big Four competition. Stevenson entered the University of Manitoba for the fall term.

Triple-Threat Man.

The 180-pound Nebraskan, a triple threat, did not play for the Bombers in their western final series against Calgary Stamps due to an injured leg. Even if he is declared eligible for the game Saturday it is considered doubtful if he will see much action.

Argos' Bob Isbister will outpunt either Stevenson or Gerry Shaske decisively. If it is cold, that will be a big advantage for the east-ern champions.

But on a hard field Coach Lew Hayman will look to his running corps for big gains. He will pit his Isbister, Art West, Norm Kirkland and Doug MacPherson against the hard-running backfield of the Bombers. He will expect his end runs to work.

Up to Hanson, Winnipeg has Coach Bob Fritz, Greg Kabat, Eddie James and Ed Chandler. The ex-Argo —Bob and Hanson—will carry the ball of the load.

BOSTON RED SOX BUYS WILLIAMS

Gave Two Players And Buy dle of Cash For Outfielder

Chicago, Dec. 9 (AP)—If anyone insisted on awarding a "money" pennant, the ribbon for activity during the 1937 major league baseball meeting it would have to be decreed on the gilt-edged Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox obtained young Ted Williams, an outfield star, from San Diego for two players and cash. The New York Yankees offered $25,000 for Williams, so it can be surmised that Tom Yawkey, Red Sox owner, "laid it on the line" for the west coast prospect.

The National circuit re-elected Ford Frick president for three years and renewed an agreement permitting continued to play seven night baseball games next season. The Junior circuit, in which the term of President William Harridge still has a year to run, turned down Cleveland's application for night ball.

RAMBLERS DRAW FOR FIRST TIME

Held Scoreless by Providence in One of Best Games This Season

Philadelphia Ramblers, last when they considered themselves immune from the "tie fever" that has gripped other teams in the International-American Hockey League, had to bow to the bug.

Nearly a third of the 28 scheduled games so far in the Inlaw have ended in a draw, but with Ramblers it was always a win or a loss . . . until last night. Previously they had not even scored a goal while were the only team of the league's ten that had been held to a scoreless game.

But last night Ramblers and Providence Reds went through 70 minutes of hockey to a scoreless draw. Goaltender Horace Gaul of Providence Reds played the only other game of the night and he, too, had to be given what the outcome was. The draw stands.

Barons, so far, have played the greatest number of drawn games with three. Cleveland Barons and Haven Eagles come next with four apiece. Providence Reds, Buffalo Bisons and Hornets have three apiece. Syracuse Stars have tied two and Ramblers one.

DAILY DECORATED FOR THE SEASON

Ice Surface Flooded For First Time by Arena Staff

Nastily, if not gaudily decorated, the Belleville Arena will assume a kaleidoscopic appearance to welcome the hockey and skating patrons this season. Neatly decorated in the colors, combined with a bright scarlet, the inner portion of the auditorium presents an array of color-ful decorations by the eye and assumes a much more comfortable appearance.

Yesterday the portals and openings were flung wide and the ice surface flooded for the first time. The playing or skating surface is as level as the proverbial billiard table today, having been levelled and surveyed like this auditorium by the certified civil engineer, thus assuring the skaters of a perfectly level surface of ice and all student patrons. The ice surface has been flooded daily for over a month and is in ideal condition for the initial spraying.

Not only has the ice surface been improved upon, but the many facilities for the comfort of the skating patron and hockey fans have been completely overhauled and improved for the comfort of the patrons of the Arena throughout the winter months. New heating systems have been installed in the various dressing rooms and the usual comfort and facilities for the Arena canteen are pending, as is the case with the check room.

With Belleville hockey fans easily the greatest in their first hockey game, three outstanding hockey clubs will visit the Belleville Arena "home" this winter, including two provincial championship clubs, the Belleville Intermediate O.H.A. and the "Flyers" while the Belleville junior O.H.A. club will be the opposition for the local ice this winter. Providing pre-Christmas ice attractions, the Belleville Flyers of the Air Force are contemplating a series of pre-season games, that will bring to Belleville outstanding hockey clubs from other parts of the province for their opposition.

With the Arena in ideal and invitingly outstanding shape for both skaters and hockey fans, and three good hockey clubs to appear, the outstanding feature left to assure a satisfying season of winter sports is to have Col. Max Hamilton smile occasionally and provide the much-needed frost, the weather needed for the real purpose of assuring a keen ice surface.

FALCONS WIN 'Y' BASKETBALL LOOP

Bill Saleman's Falcons won the Y.M.C.A. house league basketball title without sustaining a loss, terminating the league schedule with a 10 to 15 victory over the "Nite Y" squad last evening. A triple-header of the opening games was scheduled but only two games were played, the Falcons defeating the Eagles 20-16, while playing their second game of the night the "Nite Y" boys trimmed the Rovers by a close score of 23 to 7.

The final standing in the "Y" house basketball league, sponsored by instructor Fred Hicken, reads as follows:

	Won	Lost
Falcons	9	0
Hawks	4	3
Eagles	3	3
"Nite Y"	3	3
"Noon Y"	0	4
Rovers	0	4

The league semi-finals commence next Wednesday night with the Falcons meeting the Eagles and the Hawks clashing with the "Nite Y" at the "Y" gym.

Pirates Big Threat

Although the Pirates, youthful squad put up their best game of the year and were the most creative play of the game, they faded before the lusty attacks of the Falcons to lose by 20-16. The Falcons was the big threat of the "Nite Y" squad as it was the opposing teammates on the attack in the early stages of the game, the scoring of the winning Falcons was divided, with, Cole and Scott scoring four apiece, while Bolton netted 15 to 5 in favour of the winners at the halfway mark.

The line-ups: "Nite Y" 13— Clark, Weller, Hamilton, Hazlip, Pigden, Griffin and Brown. Falcons—Cole 4, Scott 4, Bolton 15, Edwards, Terry and Bateman. Referee—Jack Dickens.

The score bears themselves of fourth place and a play-off berth, the Pirates and "Nite Y" squad played a second game to trounce their fellow "Y" clubs, 19 to 7, with Hazlip getting fifty percent of the winners' scoring points. Gilmour and Langabeer were high counters for the losers.

The line-up: "Noon Y" 7—Gilmour, Winters, Langabeer, Brown and Hamilton. Pirates—Scott, Weller, Hazlip, Pigden and Griffin. Referee—Jimmie Andrews.

O.H.A. Suggests Four Teamed Loop with Senior 'B' Rating For Teams in This District

Await Decision of Queens, Others Willing to Accept Proposal

ALL GAMES COUNT

Two Clubs in Group Would Enter Provincial Playdowns

By K. J. C.

The O.H.A. ship in Eastern Ontario sailed out into calmer waters and seems to be navigating on somewhat of an even keel today, following the "Sandy" Burrows, local executive member of the O.H.A. at the helm, and Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O. H. A.

After the storm (no references are meant to yesterday's blizzard either), came the lull, but the stormy hockey committee room ballot of the previous two days set a drastic toll behind it, there only being four of the original eight clubs left aboard the good ship "group No. 1 of the O.H.A.", Kingston, Kingston City and Cornwall the R.M.C. were apparently washed overboard during the storm, while nothing is known of the Gananoque entry since the "big fellow" commenced to Kingston last Monday night.

Still braving the storm before the mast, however, are the Peterborough, R.C.A.F. and Belleville Red-birds clubs, all having weathered the stormy blasts and stuck to their posts to come through in a true seaman-like manner. Down in the hatch but still sticking with the ship, is the Queen's University entry, which today came up on deck to announce they were willing to "talk terms."

The outcome of the district tonference will have bettered conditions of hockey in general for the coming winter, but as far as John Public is concerned, because the latest and most recent suggestion coming from the O.H.A. is to have Peterboro, the Air Force, Queen's and the Belleville Redmen all included in one happy family to be classed as a senior "B" group by the O.H.A. Manager Eddie Thomas and Coach Carling-Kelly both agreed to the idea presented, and handed down through Mr. Burrows to the Belleville executive they immediately instructed to call a group meeting of all interested clubs to be held on Saturday.

Telephone Used

Last evening Executive Member "Sandy" Burrows held a lengthy long distance telephone conversation with Secretary Billie Hewitt, the outcome of which seems to have agreed on the troubled waters, all clubs agreeing to the proposition, except Queens, who requested a decision in the matter today.

The suggestion made by Secretary Hewitt was as follows: "That Peterboro, the Air Force, Belleville Redmen and Queen's University all be included in one four teamed loop, to be classed as senior "B" and to enter the senior "B" playdowns, while the third and fourth placed clubs will engage in a similar playoff series, with the winner of this series to go out into the intermediate "A" playdowns for provincial honors also."

"Personally I think the above suggestion is a splendid idea for all clubs concerned. The fans can rest assured that all games will count in the group standing, while every club in the group is assured of at least one home-and-home game. The Queen's interests should have no objection, as they will only have to make one trip to Peterboro if they so desire, but this year the Queen's team can command the services of any of their senior intercollegiate squad, so all in all, it looks like the most logical set-up of all. We are merely waiting for a report from Mr. Hicks on the matter now, but regardless a group meeting will be called on Saturday," stated "Sandy" Burrows this morning.

Incidentally if the Gananoque club desires to enter the group under the above terms they will be entirely welcome, as it seems to agree when approached on the subject.

WINNIPEG DISLIKES EASTERN GRID RULES

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 9 (CP)—The east may be seeing Winnipeg Blue Bombers for the last time when they clash with Toronto Argonauts Saturday for the Canadian rugby title. Why? Or rose. Coach Bob Fritz doesn't believe Bombers will return to Toronto years.

"I think it's the last time I'll bring the Winnipeg club east," he said. "It's a nice trip, but we don't play eastern rules, and don't want to. The eastern game emphasizes kicking of game we adhere to in Western Canada is much better."

The Manitoba huskies invaded this University of Michigan stronghold Sunday to train for the Argo scrap. Since then they've not only been getting chilblains but perfecting their style of play to conform with eastern rules. They've been forced to practice in Arctic-like temperatures on a snow-covered field.

ARGUE STEVENSON ELIGIBLE TO PLAY

Fritz of Bombers Says Player Has Complied With Requirements

Ann Arbor, Mich., ec. 9 (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers, champing at the bit while in training here for their Canadian rugby titular bout with Toronto Argonauts in the Ontario city Saturday, awaited word from the Canadian Rugby Union as to whether backfielder Art Stevenson will be eligible for the fray. Coach-quarterback Bob Fritz believes Stevenson will be cleared by the Dominion officials.

"Stevenson is the greatest punter I've seen on a Canadian field, and we'll need him Saturday if we have to play in snow or rain," Fritz said. "We also have Steve Olander available for punting duties."

Formerly of Hastings College, Neb. Stevenson joined Winnipeg this season. He enrolled at University of Manitoba for medical student and according to Bomber officials registered in Winnipeg in August.

Team officials agree Stevenson is eligible under C.R.U. residence rule covering college students and said they had supplied Dominion officials with evidence of the collegian's compliance with residence rules.

CARRYING PLACE OUT OF LEAGUE

Will Play in Wellington Instead of Trenton Loop

Trenton, Dec. 9 (Special)— The Carrying Place team will not be entered in the Trenton and District Hockey League after Wade Morrow of Belleville refused to play ball with the Canal Village crew. It was only a week or so ago, that a higher up of the Brighton force said that Brighton would not be a team in Trenton this season if Willie Latour continued to pack his Cornier players. Brighton withdrew and shortly Brighton had to come to drink but with Wade Morrow on the different story and so local hockey fans won't be seeing the smart Carrying Place aggregation in action this winter—in the T. & D. circuit anyway.

Play in Wellington

It is apparent that Carrying Place will chase the rubber around the Wellington rink this season. The Canning village offers much, as the ice there is a perfect ice surface and capacity crowds. After the withdrawal of the Carrying Place team the Trenton District League is anything but bright at present and it appears as if the Trenton Flyers will be batting for the league championship. The Trenton Hockey District Hockey League board of 1936 is as follows: Hon. Pres. R. Smilzrim; Vice President, Wade Morrow of Brighton; Secretary-Treasurer, Lloyd Cassidy; Manager, Clarence Burleigh. As in other years the executive of each team in the loop will be a member of the league executive. Bill Smith of Smithtrim the league has a very competent president for the league is a sincere follower of all lines of sport and should prove to be the right man for the job. Secretary-Treasurer has made their club's books ready for the annual meeting to by Dec. 15. On Dec. 16 the schedule will be drawn up.

BEST RACE HORSE IS WAR ADMIRAL

In Poll Conducted was Given Top Rating Over Seabiscuit

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 9 (AP)—War Admiral, handsome three-year-old owned by Samuel Riddle of Philadelphia, today was awarded the title of highest honor when he was judged the outstanding race horse of 1937 by 256 sports writers.

Although they never met in what would have been a match race this year, the Admiral and Mrs. G. S. Howard's four-year-old champion staged a nose finish in the poll conducted by the Pimlico Special Handicap event. Only votes separated them in the final count.

War Admiral, a son of Man o' War, polled 631 votes on the basis of three points for first, two for second and three for third. Seabiscuit a grandson of Man o' War, received 627. The only fact the race all to themselves as William Ziegler Jr's Jamaica Boy finished thirty-lengths behind with only 140 votes.

The truth will out. After cloaking their pet reasons and subterfuge with various alibis, the Kingston interests finally voiced their real reasons for objecting to the O.H.A. groupings. It was merely a matter of travelling expenses, the Limestone City clubs feeling of the opinion they should be grouped together and not be faced with the problem of financing their clubs for trips out-of-town. The Belleville Redmen did not go to Kingston for their scheduled game in the VanHorne series, versus the Perth Crescents last evening, on account of the latter's inability, the worst of its kind to hit this section in some little time, Manager Thomas notified the Kingston officials in ample time, while he also took the precaution to inform the Perth head also. The game will be played at a subsequent date, incidentally the "Flyers" meet their natural rivals, Kingston Garrison on Friday night.

Apparently Picton is going to be the junior "A" series of the O.H.A. on a back seat, as considerable interest is being taken in the return of Picton to the O.H.A. ranks and the Prince Edward County seat is all agog over their prospects for the coming winter. Bill Hughes manager has been named as manager and Billie Hughes of the city will coach the team. Mr. Hughes' past experience with Queens University and in Winnipeg hockey circles should prove valuable to the Picton kids but the Belleville interests do not want to walk off with the assumption they have their green homers in the bag. Down in Napanee Chief Eddie Watts has a sturdy band of pucksters and the Napanee boys are much better team than we expect, they are due for an eye-opener when the "big blue team from Napanee" skates out on the Picton ice.

Incidentally Way back when you visited the barber shop all you wanted to get the inside dope on the sporting events was to visit the Cake Walk was as popular then as the Big Apple is popular now!

Down in Kingston they are plenty "hot" over the recent decisions of the O.H.A. relative to the disqualification of Napanee players, Brodie Bill Wahlie tries to cloak the matter by asserting the players "travelled" road. Instead of "well travelled" road. "Is that cricket, Bill?"

The Kingston scribe goes on to say that the Belleville interests, and "Sandy" Burrows, have pulled a "fast one", getting all of the good hockey playing in Belleville arena this winter. Well, well, isn't that just too dooky, perhaps the O.H.A. should have insisted that four other themselves in the VanHorne series, so that the hockey players for the welfare of the outside clubs? After all is said and done the reason for the present condition of O.H.A. affairs in Kingston is simply because the city of hockey that's played in the VanHorne series detracting interests from the O.H.A. hockey in both Sutherland's and incidentally Mr. Sutherland is' in Florida, but when the heads of the league developments, poor Jim won't enjoy his holiday.

Why don't the Kingston moguls get together and what they need is they want to play marbles in their own back yard is to pick off a little fellow about their own size and to hook with the O.H.A., or any other organization in the province. They shout to the high heavens regarding long trips out of town, but say nothing of the clubs that come into Kingston for the VanHorne series and take a financial scalping. Of course the outside clubs do not have to compete in the VanHorne series, if they don't like the prevailing conditions, but neither does Kingston have to play O.H.A. hockey, if they don't like its whims by the Association's rulings.

I DON'T SNIFFLE AT ALL IN WINTER

Chances of "colds" are increased by common constipation. If many lower intestinal tract is infected, Kellogg's All-Bran absorbs water and softens like a sponge — forms a soft mass — aids elimination.

SILVER PLATES PRESENTED TO AIKEN'S CHURCH

Gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grills Are Solemnly Dedicated 3rd Sidney—Two beautiful silver plates, bearing the inscription "Presented to Aiken's Church by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grills, 1937" were solemnly dedicated, and used, at the communion service of Aiken's on Sunday last.

The Pastor Rev. N. B. Johnson spoke very fittingly of the donors, Mr. and Mrs. Grills, whose faith has been dominated all these years by a sense of faith, hope and duty. It was regretted that Mrs. Grills was unable to attend this service on account of illness.

The special numbers at the Sunday School was a piano solo by Miss Jewel Bailey.

Mr. Frank Tibble, Mr. Vernon Curry and Mr. Barton Hinchcliffe spent a few days last week in Toronto.

Friends of Mrs. Roy Thrasher will regret to learn that she is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Several from this line attended the funeral of Mrs. Mrs. Charles Chisholm in Belleville on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Chisholm was a resident of this community for many years and was held in high esteem by all who knew her.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hardwick of Belleville spent Sunday with Mrs. Hardwick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Adams.

Sidney cheese factory has closed for this season. Mr. Wm. Wignall has been employed as cheese and butter maker for another year.

Mr. Percy Sorrer of Trenton was a recent visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Orr.

Mr. and Mrs. Selburne Westover were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Coon, 4th line.

Mrs. Palmer is visiting relatives in Napanee.

Mrs. Albert Parry has returned to her home, having spent the past two weeks at the home of her brother, Mr. Frank Grills.

Mr. Fred Hamilton and Mr. David Rubble were guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Weslover.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hinchcliffe and Mrs. Gordon Hinchcliffe and son visited Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fair on Sunday.

Mr. Clarence Ketcheson, Thurlow, and Mr. Beef Hobbs, Belleville, spent Thursday afternoon and evening with Mr. and Mrs. Orr.

Mr. T. Hinchcliffe and Mr. Gordon Lawrence called on Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Pound and family on Sunday afternoon. Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Pound and family whose home burned on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Joe Vallace of Bermuda who has made a short visit to her sister, Mrs. Frank Grills, called on Belleville on this line on Sunday. Mrs. Vallace leaves on Tuesday for New York to join her husband who has been in a hospital there for the past ten days for eye treatment. The condition of Mr. Vallace is much improved, as compared by a long distance call to his wife on Sunday. Their sister Rose, Mrs. Proomadge also has been receiving letters from London, England, on Sunday and it was received reception was the same clear.

Mrs. Wm. Wheeler and Mrs. Harley Hamilton and Miss Barbara have returned to there homes, having spent last week in Toronto. They were accompanied home by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Legatie, who returned to Toronto on Sunday.

The condition of Mr. Tom Allan is slightly improved.

Mr. Gordon Stafford spent Sunday with Mr. Dunlop McPherson.

TORONTO - 240 JARVIS STREET

She was on her way home on the crowded subway when she told her friend: "I won't go. It isn't worth the worry. I'll find a way to take Aunt Matilda out this afternoon if necessary." But even then she was only half convinced herself and it was not until she was walking along the cheerless, dark corridor to Sandra's door that she thought of David's Cousin Augustus. Now he was the one. She decided that, definitely finally. She thought: I'll tell Sandra that I've met him and they're both ready for a movie and we'll go home and stay the week-end and perhaps something will come out of it—something she wasn't which might assist her to straighten out Chet and Enid.

This was a dateless night for both Sandra and Fannie and Sandra afraid of idleness and the opportunity it offered for reflection, wanted to go to a movie and was obviously disappointed when Fannie said, "I got something on the brain, baby, and I want a chance to think it over. Run along by yourself, if you like... And make it snappy, or, look, big mike, Mister Stanley, will be busting in and you've got to drag out some body's private life."

They enjoyed a good laugh over it, like, but when Sandra's words were punctuated by a loud knock on the door and Fannie opened the door and found Matt Stanley there, she was so completely disconcerted that she forgot how much she disliked the man and said with a silly little laugh, "Oh how do you do, Matt.... Won't you come in?"

Sandra said before Matt could enter the room, "Sorry, boss, but Sandra doesn't live here any more. She's moved. I strayed in, and had not come to put her on a story. Just what I'm not, I'd drop in and see how yet girls were making out," he announced. "Figured I owed Miss Sandra an apology for breaking up the place the last time I was here, anyway."

Sandra and Fannie exchanged startled looks. Matt Stanley! Was he serious? Matt was apologizing? And then Sandra understood what was up and began to hunt around for her hat and coat.

"Where do you think you're going?" she explained," but you know how it is." She saw Fannie staring at her, but did not dare attempt any explanation. "I'll be back."

Matt was standing. He said, "This will keep, but I got a sweet tip on a white-hot story tonight. Thought you'd like to know."

But Sandra had forgotten that promise when she was called into Matt's office next morning. Matt said:

"News the story of the year. Big Shot Anthony Ancell's wife is going to divorce him. There's bound to be a con...sondent. Find out who she is. Scram."

INSTALMENT 13

No one was more reluctant to have the Bermuda house party come to an end than Stephen Moby. Leaving New York he had thought only of the effect of his absence on Sandra Brooks, but before Jack Cramer's graceful Feminoore dropped another of the tranquil little islands where they were to spend eight glorious weeks, he had momentarily ruined Sandra away in the back of his mind and was thinking almost exclusively of Julia Markham.

Quiet, serene and cultured, Julia was the last shoot in all your could want in a girl. She talked very little with her lips but with her eyes and her shoulders and her slim, white hands. She was pretty and she had a good deal of good contralto voice as Stephen discovered the second night on which at Sandy Stewart's suggestion she sat down at the piano and sang.

It was still cold that second night out from Middleton Yacht club—it was always cold at that season. But with Julia's title song tingling in his ears, Stephen was considerably eager to get Julia away from the noisy crowd. At the first opportunity he propped his arm on the desk as Julia went for her coat and for Sandy Stewart whom Julia had met dark fore-deck and talked of New York and Kansas City and Emily Stewart to whom Julia had come East to visit. They did not talk of anything that had half been said. Stephen served its purpose. Stephen watched Julia altogether charming. Intelligent and subtly reserved.

Two weeks later they lay under an umbrella on the beach and Julia suddenly stopped humming to say, "Would it surprise you to know you're the first man who ever kissed me, Stephen?"

Stephen was lying on his back. His right arm, bent, looked up at her pensively, and said at last, "Nothing would surprise me about you, Julia."

"Just how should I interpret this?"

He sat up reached over and brushed the sand from her slim brown legs. His eyes came up to hers, then:

"You mustn't. I feel sure you always; then you know you've got a look of movie or spend or simply to be with me. And I realize I don't know you at all.... You're the most fascinating girl I've ever met, Julia. I've been hating summer."

His heart then hardly had told her about Sandra. He said, "The rules of vacation romances are pretty generally recognized, Julia —love and be loved, and when the time comes to end it, end it like, forget it."

His head moved, slightly. "All right, darling. We won't mention her again." Nor did they. In fact they hardly thought about Sandra Brooks again until the Feminoore was off the North Carolina coast, headed north.

They were sitting in facing deck chairs. Through long silences they looked at each other, talking little, feeling no need of it. But the eighty-foot craft was pitting miles of water behind her and New York lay some twenty-four hours ahead and suddenly Julia Markham said, "God how persons meet, and come to like each other, isn't it? When I left Kansas City I didn't know you existed, Stephen. And now, we —"

He reached out and took her hand in his, smiling: "And now, darling...."

"Oh, Stephen!" She turned her head away, quickly.

"Look at me, Julia."

She pulled her hand surly and gave him a reproachful look to her eyes. Not looking at him she said in a small, choked voice, "Why—why does it have to end. If only... I mean—Oh, I don't know what I mean."

It was a long while before Julia looked at Stephen again, but when she did, she was still smiling. "That's something she said. "I'm rather glad I don't think from now on."

Stephen started to speak, abruptly closed his lips, tight. He had to think straight in his mind. He had to have an understanding with himself about Sandra. "But whenever Stephen's thinking led him, he saw it to this girl to tell her coolly to how he felt about her. "Look here," he told himself as he followed her along the deck, "I can't let her go away believing I've simply been playing at being in love all these weeks...!"

The Feminoore was due at Charleston some time Saturday afternoon. But Friday night the barometer kept falling and storm warnings were coming in at regular intervals on the captain's short-wave set. By nine o'clock the Feminoore was rolling heavily and barely an hour later, when Stephen and Julia were starting for the deck, Julia suddenly wheeled and turned to the cabin she shared with Emily Stewart.

Emily brought news. "She's deathly ill, poor thing, and I'm going to keep up...."

Dawn, however, the storm abated and those who were still on deck to breakfast grew cheerful once more. Julia was not among them. The sea was still tumultuously rough and low black clouds moved across the sky before a steadily rising wind.

Throughout that long Friday Sandra moved in a trance, hearing Matt Stanley's words over and over.... There's bound to be a correspondent in Ancell's divorce. Find out who she is, Sandra!.... as if she could not have asked him plainly.

Matt had been a little puzzled by the way she looked at him, the rapidity with which the blood drained from her face. He said, "Look here—you haven't been playing with fire, have you, Sandra? I hope." And then he understood—by his own words, Stephen was standing! he said. "Ancell's one of your fallen angel partners, isn't he? Clean slipped my mind. He shook his head. "Too bad, kid, but you run along and get a good night's rest all the time's sorry, but if Ancell's wife has anybody of importance, we've got a twenty-two point line on all editions and that's worth quite a lot of freedom. Step to it now and give me a report the minute you've got anything."
